SENATE REPORT SAYS INTENT OF GIFT TO CASE WAS TO INFLUENCE VOTE

$2500 TERMED REWARD FOR HIS EXPECTED 'YES' ON THE GAS BILL

Select Committee 'Condemns' Offer, Suggests Further Action by Justice Department and Congress.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7—A special Senate investigating committee concluded, in a report filed today, that the $2500 offered to the campaign fund of Senator Francis Case (Rep.), South Dakota, by a lobbyist for the Superior Oil Co. of California while the Senate was debating the natural gas bill, was proferred as a "reward" for Case's anticipated vote in favor of the bill.

The money offer was not a bribe or an attempted bribe, the committee decided, but a "kind of insurance to the donor that Senator Case would continue to think and act favorably (on the gas bill), the contribution being the premium on the policy."

Objective, to Influence Vote.

The objective of individuals who initiated and carried out the money offer was to influence the vote of a member of the Senate, the committee reported.

"The Select Committee condemns such activity," its report declared. It made special mention of Howard B. Keck, president of Superior Oil; Elmer Patman of Austin, Tex., attorney for the oil company, and John M. Neff of Lexington, Neb., $1000-a-month lawyer-lobbyist for Superior.

Keck supplied the money that was to be spread around to help the gas bill in the Senate; Patman handled it, and Neff apparently mishandled it or there would not have been such a fuss.

"This is a case of responsibility run riot," the report said. "Mr. Howard Keck delegated his judgment and responsibility to the use of an employe, Elmer Patman. Patman, in turn, delegated his responsibility to John Neff, a friend and Nebraska attorney.

'Incredibly Bad Judgment.'

"Mr. Neff, in a space of four months, covered five states and sought out the attitude of ten United States Senators concerning a single piece of legislation.

A sum totaling $10,000 was at least considered and spoken of by Mr. Neff as contributions, and more than half of this was contributed. He exercised incredibly poor judgment.

"Mr. Patman was responsible for the direction of Mr. Neff's activities and directed this activity either expressly or impliedly. Both Patman and Mr. Neff are severely censured for their failure to act as responsible citizens in these circumstances."

Lobbying is proper, contributions are proper, but they must not be combined for an ulterior purpose, the report declared.

"The cricumstances here," the committee said, "partake of a meaning making almost inexorable the conclusion that the paramount motivation for this contribution (the $2500 to Case) was interest in the natuarl gas bill as contrasted with aiding Senator Case's campaign. It thus follows that the offer of the contribution was for the

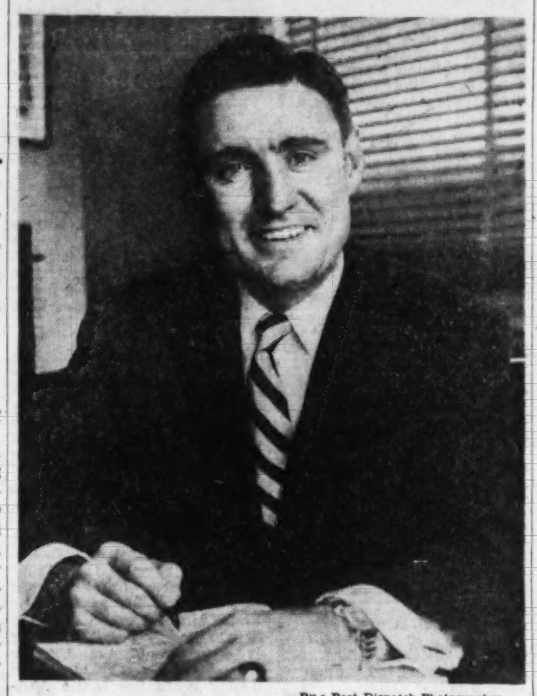
Edward L. Dowd Removes Self As Candidate for Re-election



—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

CIRCUIT ATTORNEY EDWARD L. DOWD

To Practice Law for Family's Sake—Hopes Capable Men Will Seek Office.

Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd announced yesterday he would not be a candidate for re-election. He said he plans to enter the private practice of law.

After announcing his decision to his staff, he issued a public statement saying:

"After long and careful consideration, I have decided not to be a candidate for re-election to the office of circuit attorney.

"My decision is based primarily on the fact that I am now in my fifteenth year of public service—five years as a special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the remaining years as an assistant, first assistant and circuit attorney for St. Louis.

"After these years in public office, I now feel the necessity of establishing a general law practice in order to provide financial security for my family.

"I am making this announcement in sufficient time before the filing period expires so that other candidates can make their plans accordingly. It is my sincere hope that attorneys of high capability and experience come forward to seek this highly important office."

His Term Ends Dec. 31.

Dowd, a Democrat whose four-year term will end Dec. 31, expressed gratitude to his staff for their service, to the police department for its cooperation and assistance and to the people of St. Louis for "their continued expressions of confidence."

The deadline for candidates to file in the Aug. 7 primary is April 24. No Democrat or Republican has filed for nomination for circuit attorney, a post that will pay $14,000 annually starting next year, as compared with the present $10,000 salary.

Attorneys mentioned as possible candidates for the Democratic nomination include Raymond A. Bruntrager, who had been Dowd's first assistant until he resigned to practice law; Joseph Settich, now first assistant circuit attorney; Henry Simpson and Francis Kane, former assistant circuit attorneys, and Thomas Eagleton.

William K. Stanard II, former assistant United States Attorney, is considered a prospective candidate for the Republican nomination.

Dowd, whose conduct in office has been both warmly praised and strongly attacked, won an overwhelming victory

CONSTRUCTION ON JUBILEE TO BEGIN TOMORROW

Construction work for the Mid-America Jubilee, to be held next September on the riverfront, will be started tomorrow under a contract with H. B. Deal & Co., general contractor, it was announced yesterday.

First work will be erection of a construction office on the site, followed shortly by grading and leveling in preparation for roads and walks.

Six exhibit buildings with about 27,000 square feet of space will be erected, with use of the "unistrut" type of construction, consisting of steel frames and sections which are bolted together.

BENSON'S ADVICE TO FOOD INDUSTRY GETS SHARP REPLY

NEW YORK, April 7 (UP) — Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson has stirred up a hornet's nest with his suggestion the food industry effect further economies to reduce the marketing spread—the difference between what the farmer gets and what the consumer pays for food.

Benson's recommendation was made in a letter to Len Kanter, editor of Food Topics, a trade magazine.

"Even though many of your companies have gone a long way in trying to reduce costs, improve efficiency, and otherwise keep the marketing spread within control," Benson wrote, "I think we all admit there is still considerable room for improvement in this area."

Kanter, writing in the latest issue of Food Topics, said several retailers have offered Benson a job if he can show them how to cut costs further.

Kanter said the food retailer operates on such a narrow profit margin that he is as close to "the border line separating survival and bankruptcy as he can safely approach."

Although sales rose from 16 billion dollars in 1954 to 17 billions in 1955, Kanter said, net profits of the food industry after taxes fell from $195,000,000 to $170,000,000.

360,000 Skunks Wanted.

TOKYO, April 7 (AP) — Wanted: 360,000 skunks. Residents of the Amami Oshima islands, Japan's southernmost territory, plan to use the skunks in exterminating the poisonous habu, a snake. A trial run with 1000 skunks was highly successful. How the 360,000 figure was arrived at was not disclosed.

50-M.P.H. Winds Topple Wall Of School Under Construction

Strong winds with gusts up to 50 miles an hour yesterday blew down an interior wall of a school building under construction for St. William's Catholic Church, 9300 Stansberry avenue, Woodson Terrace, and caused other damage in the city and county.

Temperatures fell yesterday morning to a cool 37.

The Rev. Walter M. Boul, pastor of St. William's Church, said the roof of the school was to have been put on this week. Construction of the $400,000 building, he said, was started last October, and it was scheduled for completion before the opening of the September semester.

Damage to the structure might be as high as $30,000, and probably will delay completion an extra month, Father Boul said.

Police reported several trees and wires down as a result of high wind. Awnings were ripped from the west side of the Old Courthouse in Clayton, breaking four 18 by 24-inch windows in the office of the Board of Election Commissioners. Another awning was blown loose and broke a window in the Maplewood City Hall.

The Weather Bureau predicted fair and warmer today with temperatures ranging from 35 to 62. The lower temperatures should do little or no damage to fruit tree blossoms and vegetables already planted, Paul M. Bernard, county agricultural agent, said.

STEVENSON SAYS ADMINISTRATION IS OPPOSED TO LABOR UNIONS

He Also Attacks G.O.P. Farm Policy in East Alton Speech — Accuses Republicans of 'Stalling.'

The Eisenhower Administration is opposed to the organization of American labor, Adlai E. Stevenson charged last night in a speech at East Alton in which he made a slashing attack on the present administration's labor and farm policies.

Stevenson was making his only downstate appearance in his quest for a strong indorsement at the primary election next Tuesday when Illinois voters will express their preferences for party presidential candidates. He spoke at the East Alton Machinists' Center.

"The Republican Administration's labor record has been one of broken promises, of doing only those things which are considered desirable by business—especially big business," he said.

'Tragedy in Farm Land'

Referring to what he called "the tragedy that has been taking place in America's farm land," Stevenson said: "We have had three years of Republican stalling on this, three years of doing nothing, of broken promises and of double-talk about blaming the farmer's problems on city workers."

Before launching into his attack on the Republicans, the former Illinois Governor paid tribute to Richard Stengel, Illinois legislator who is seeking the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, who also spoke. Declaring Stengel had been of great help in the Legislature when Stevenson was Governor, Stevenson said he was badly needed in the United States Senate to aid Senator Paul Douglas (Dem.), Illinois, who has been doing "two men's work."

Stevenson, not unmindful that he was addressing a meeting sponsored by the Alton Trades and Labor Assembly and by the Alton-Wood River Building and Construction Trades Council, aimed his heaviest blows at the Republican labor record.

"It is four years ago now that the Republican candidate for the presidency promised changes in the Taft-Hartley Act," he said. "Not a word has been changed. Instead, the National Labor Relations Board has been packed with management representatives who have so distorted the application of the federal labor law that it means really very little today as a protection of the rights of labor.

"It is a sobering fact that the 18,000,000 men and women of organized labor have today not a single voice in this nation's executive councils. It is a sorry period in American history when General Motors' graduates fill three seats in the Presidential Cabinet but 18,000,000 members of organized labor don't fill one."

After declaring the Administration was opposed to the organization of labor, he said its latest anti-labor attack had come within the last two weeks. He recalled that last year the House of Representatives had voted overwhelmingly to improve the Social Security Act by lowering the eligibility age for women to 62 and by providing retirement benefits to employes who become totally and permanently disabled at the age of 50 or older.

Yet, he said, on March 22 in Washington, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare appeared before a Senate committee and opposed these "humanitarian changes," Stevenson said.

Recalling that George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, had termed the statement "extremely disappointing and shocking," Stevenson said he admired Meany's restraint. He said he, too, was shocked that an Administration which has given billions of dollars in tax benefits to large corporations and corporate stockholders now denies retirement benefits to persons in need.

"A vote in the Democratic primary next Tuesday will mean a vote to make the NLRB once more a fair-minded judge of labor-management controversy, a vote to rewrite the Labor Relations Act and to restore true representatives of American labor to their rightful place in government," he said. It would also be a vote against the right-to-work laws that a number of states have enacted, Stevenson added.

Farm Problem Comment.

On the farm problem, Stevenson said the city worker and the farmer had a common stake "for the farm depression has started to hurt badly in the towns."

He said many stores in rural areas were suffering from a sharp decline in business and that men were laid off in farm equipment plants.

The farm bill which is before Congress is not special-interest legislation as the Republicans insist, he said.

"What is fair and good for America's farmers is good for

EGYPTIAN RAIDERS ATTACK AT 9 POINTS; U. N. CHIEF CONFERS WITH ADVISERS

HAMMARSKJOLD IN ROME, TURNS DOWN DINNER BID TO BEGIN WORK

Brought Up-to-Date on Middle East — Plans Operations With Truce and Welfare Experts.

By FRED J. ZUSY.

ROME, April 7 (AP)—United Nation Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold flew in today on his peace mission to the Middle East and went at once to the conference table.

Hammarskjold turned down an invitation to a dinner at the Italian Foreign Ministry in order to get to work at once. The echo of renewed fighting between Israelis and Egyptians lent a note of urgency.

Hammarskjold met with Henry Vigier, French political adviser to Maj. Gen. Edson L. M. Burns, U. N. truce chief in Palestine. Burns himself is due in tomorrow.

Also sitting in was Henry R. LaBouisse, American head of the U.N. relief agency which has cared for nearly a million Arab refugees from Palestine. Both LaBouisse and Vigier flew in from the troubled area and met Hammarskjold at the airport.

Secretary Briefed.

A spokesman for Hammarskjold said Vigier and LaBouisse brough the U.N. official up-to-date on the Middle East situation and the discussions were designed to plan operations.

Despite three days of fighting in which about 70 persons were killed, Hammarskjold said he planned no special appeal beyond one already made by Burns. Burns asked both sides for an immediate cease-fire along the demarcation line.

"It would not be proper for me to talk at this time," Hammarskjold told newspaper men who asked how the latest outbreaks would affect his mission.

"I have no fixed schedule," he explained. "I must see my people first."

Earlier, however, on taking off from London where he talked for more than an hour with British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd at the airport, he told reporters he did not believe there was any "special explanation" for the flareups.

"It starts off with a minor incident and flares up in a way we know only too well," he said. "This is natural if you know how human beings react, but I don't think we should try to find some deeper political motive."

Met by Officials.

Sir Herbert Broadley, acting director general of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization, and Italian Foreign office officials also met Hammarskjold, as did Miss Irene Broza, second secretary of the Israeli legation here.

No Arab diplomats were noticed in the crowd.

The Hammarskjold mission flies on Tuesday to Beirut, Lebanon, and other Middle East capitals for an on-the-ground survey.

The Secretary General will talk with both Arab and Jewish leaders in his attempt—authorized by the U.N. Security Council—to convince both sides that hostilities could only harm everyone.

Hammarskjold is to be joined here tomorrow by Gen. Burns, unless a new outbreak on the Gaza frontier delays him.

The Secretary General has a busy three days planned. He hopes to meet with Pope Pius and discuss the Middle East situation. The Vatican said no definite time for an audience has been set as yet. U.N. officials in New York said Hammarskjold had asked for the audience at a time of the Pope's convenience.

Gronchi May Participate.

Italian President Giovanni Gronchi also may meet with the Secretary General. Italy has made clear in recent months that it wants to take a more active role in Mediterranean matters.

Beirut will be the base point for Hammarskjold's survey. He will meet northern members of the Arab League in Beirut shortly after arrival there. He is to fly on to Cairo on Wednesday.

Although the trip was approved by the Security Council only a few days ago, Hammarskjold had been making quiet advance preparations for some time.

The Hammarskjold mission—proposed by the United States—has a one-month deadline in which to report back to the Security Council.

This is the major attempt to bring peace to the explosive Middle East since the big powers exerted pressure in 1948 to bring an uneasy armistice between the warring Arabs and Jews.

Since then there has been a steady deterioration, with re-

BITTER ALGERIAN FIGHTING RAGES, NEARLY 250 DEAD

French Minister Resident Reported Asking for 200,000 More Troops to End Revolt.

ALGIERS, April 7 (AP)—Nearly 250 were killed today in some of the bloodiest fighting of the Algerian rebellion, and French Minister Resident Robert Lacoste was reported asking for 200,000 more soldiers to put down the revolt.

The biggest battle was near Djeurf in the Nementcha mountains of east central Algeria. Unofficial reports said the rebels had lost about 100 men, the French about 25 killed and 20 wounded.

One version said the rebels shot down two helicopters and captured a mortar and some automatic weapons. The guerrillas broke contact after two days' fighting, and the battle was believed to be over.

French sources said 64 rebels were killed and 40 wounded in a clash five miles west of Nedromah, a town near the Moroccan frontier some 500 miles across Algeria from Djeurf. The French listed their own casualties in the engagement at seven killed and five wounded.

Six other engagements, most of them in the Constantine area of eastern Algeria, accounted for 49 rebels killed. No French losses were mentioned.

Lacoste, in Paris to ask the government for reinforcements, said in an interview he gave his countrymen five months to smash the revolt that has lasted almost a year and a half.

He based the deadline on the fact that Asian and Arab countries are preparing to bring the Algerian question up at the next United Nations General Assembly session in the fall, and the scheduled negotiations with Morocco over "interdependence." If the Algerian rebellion is not settled it could bring complications for France both in the U.N. and in the negotiations with Morocco.

"I think we must find a solution of the Algerian problem before the end of the summer," he said. "That is why I have asked for reinforcements."

He was reported asking for 200,00 men to add to the more than 200,00 troops already fighting in Algeria. That would make roughly one French soldier for every three French civilians in the country.

Premier Mollet's government was reported ready now to give up the position that Algeria is a part of France. That is the position the government took

800 INVITED, SEATS FOR 500 AT KELLY, RAINIER WEDDING

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, April 7 (AP)—The list of guests to the marriage of Prince Rainier III and Grace Kelly swelled to such proportions tonight that officials admitted somebody may have to sit on somebody else's lap.

"We're only mortals," said one of the perspiring civil servants of Monaco. "How does His Serene Highness expect us to get 800 people into less than 500 seats?"

Rainier and the American movie star will marry in the long narrow Cathedral of Monaco on April 19 just 24 hours after a civil ceremony in the throne of the Prince's palace.

The audience at the religious rites will include—in addition to the invited guests—clerics, attendants, reporters, photographers, TV commentators, musicians and special effects men who will look after the lighting.

To accommodate 800 guests another 300 chairs must be installed and the question is where to install them.

STICKS WITH JET TO SAVE OTHERS, UNHURT IN CRASH

RACINE, Wis., April 7 (AP)—A National Guard pilot who refused to abandon his disabled jet plane because "it might have killed someone," crash-landed yesterday on a Racine county farm and walked away unhurt.

The pilot, Maj. Ralph E. Mielke, 38 years old, of Milwaukee, was test flying an F89 Scorpion based at Gen. Billy Mitchell Field, Milwaukee. Two new jet engines had been installed on the plane. Mielke, an Air Force veteran of World War II, made a belly landing in a pea field on the Robert O. Fohr farm, plowing a furrow 1000 feet long.

Maj. Mielke said that when one jet engine exploded he was about 1800 feet above busy U.S. Highway 41. He decided not to leap because the plane might fall on or near the highway.

After the belly landing he climbed out and remarked, "It's all a part of the business."

BOOKIE FINED LESS THAN HE WON USING POLICE MONEY

DETROIT, April 7 (AP)—Bookies, who take horse race bets, it seems, have all the luck—even in court.

Patrolman John Manning testified in recorder's (criminal) court yesterday that he placed a $20 bet with Abe Rebeck on a recent race at Gulfstream.

Judge Paul E. Krause fined Rebeck $100, but Rebeck still was $151 ahead. The horse on which the policeman bet won, paying $251 for a $20 wager. The bet, however, was made with police money and Rebeck didn't have to pay off.

HOODLUM-RUN PINBALL FIRM WORRIES COUNTY

Pay-Off Reports Stir Garnholz to Assert Such Activity Will Not Be Tolerated.

St. Louis county officials are watching closely the expansion of the Anthony Novelty Co., a hoodlum-controlled pinball, juke box and vending machine firm with headquarters in Pine Lawn, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday. Police fear the growing operations of the concern might produce an outbreak of violence.

Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garnholz issued a terse statement to reporters at Clayton yesterday. He said:

"There have been a number of complaints of pinball machine pay-offs in St. Louis County. Such activity will not be tolerated. Many of the machines are near schools, which creates a bad situation." He declined to elaborate.

Warning to County Towns.

Garnholz's statement was taken by observers at the Clayton Courthouse as a warning to the many county municipalities to tighten up enforcement of the laws governing pay-offs on pinball machines.

Recently county police arrested two men, one in Pagedale and one in Overland. They confiscated pinball machines in their establishments. County Police Superintendent Albert DuBois declined to comment on Garnholz's statement.

County authorities also have been checking reports that the novelty firm, headed by John J. Vitale, Anthony Lopiparo and Tony Giardano, long-time hoodlums who recently have been forced to leave St. Louis by the newly-formed hoodium squad under Lt. John Doherty, have been offering to lend money to merchants installing their machines.

The novelty company was recently strengthened by the addition of Isadore Londe, oldtime Egan gangster released last fall from Leavenworth Prison. It also merged with the Jack Joseph Vending Machine Co.

Took Over Twin Cities.

Joseph, president of a firm bearing his name, took over some business of the old Twin Cities Tobacco Co. after that firm was involved in the sale of cigarettes on which the city tax had not been paid. Vitale and his associates headed Twin Cities.

The Anthony Novelty Co.

'Copter Pilot Uses His Rotor To Blow Boys on Raft to Safety

NEW YORK, April 7 (UP)—A quick-thinking helicopter pilot saved six teen-aged boys from the treacherous currents of the Hudson river yesterday by blowing their flimsy raft ashore with the prop wash from his rotor blade.

Lt. Comdr. J. N. Durfee, of the Coast Guard air station in Brooklyn, took off yesterday when informed that a raft bearing six boys was bobbing in the currents of the river, just north of the George Washington bridge.

He flew to the scene and spotted the raft. When he saw there were too many boys to haul aboard his plane he began directing the breeze stirred up by his rotor blades toward the raft.

The air currents slowly blew the raft toward the New Jersey shore where Englewood (N. J.) police were waiting. They gave the boys a talking-to and sent them home across the river in upper Manhattan.

SUICIDE SQUADS STRIKE 15 MILES INTO ISRAELI TERRITORY

Two Civilians Reported Killed, Others Wounded in Thrusts North of Gaza Strip—Trucks Ambushed.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

TEL AVIV, Sunday, April 8—Egyptian feydayeen (suicide) squads struck 15 miles into Israeli territory last night in widespread raids that continued into early today, an Israeli army spokesman said.

Initial reports said at least two Israeli civilians were killed and an undetermined number were wounded.

The latest attack came at 12:30 a.m., when a hand grenade was thrown into a house in the model settlement of Ashkelon, seven miles north of the Gaza strip. One woman was reported killed and two other persons wounded in the explosion.

Settlers Fired On.

The marauders ambushed trucks and automobiles and threw hand grenades and fired rifles at settlers at nine or more different points within a radius of 15 miles from the northern tip of the Egypt-held Gaza strip, the army spokesman said.

New activity by the feydayeen—literally "self destroyers"—came after Egyptian rifle and machinegun fire across the Gaza frontier earlier today shattered a United Nations cease-fire, it was reported here.

The army spokesman said the attacks began shortly after nightfall and were still going on four hours later.

This was the first feydayeen activity since last November, when Israel attacked Egyptian positions near El Auja (Nitzana) in what Israeli spokesman termed a retaliatory raid.

The feydayeen are recruited chiefly from Palestinian Arab refugees. Israelis say they are trained by Egyptians.

Called Planned Actions.

The Israeli spokesman said: "The frequency and nature of these attacks makes it clear they were a series of planned actions based on the Gaza strip. We are completely sure this is a renewal on a considerable scale of Feydayeen activity. The aim is the murder of civilians and the terrorization of settlements and road traffic."

He listed these incidents, all within a two-hour period:

One person killed and one wounded in a machinegun attack on a civilian vehicle near Shoval, communal settlement 15 miles southeast of the city of Gaza.

Several automobiles attacked six miles south of Faluja, a strategic crossroads 20 miles northeast of Gaza, with at least three wounded.

Two persons shot and wounded in an attack on a truck between Beersheba and Faluja near the settlement of Achusam.

A water pipeline blown up at Ashkalon, a settlement on the Mediterranean coast seven miles north of the Gaza strip and several civilians shot and wounded at a transient camp nearby.

A water pumping station blown up near Ashkalon.

Hand grenades thrown into a tractor station and residence yard at Nizanim, a coastal settlement 15 miles north of the north end of the Gaza strip and only 25 miles south of Tel Aviv.

Gaza Strip Shelling.

Saturday afternoon, Egyptians in the Gaza strip opened rifle and machine gun fire at the communal settlements of Nachal Oz and Nirim, a half mile from the border near Gaza, the army spokesman said. He added that there were no casualties and the fire was not returned.

(An Egyptian military spokesman charged that an Israeli patrol approached the Egyptian-Israeli border east of Khan Yunis last night and opened fire on an Egyptain position).

The new clashes came two days after a major Israeli-Egyptian exchange of mortar fire farther south along the Gaza frontier. A United Nations cease-fire appeal ended the fighting at that time, but it flared anew on Friday.

Saturday's first attack by the Egyptians came shortly after dawn, the Israelis charged.

A Foreign Office spokesman said Egyptian positions in the narrow coastal strip began shooting across the frontier at Israeli border patrols at 7 a.m. and continued intermittently for three hours. No casualties were announced. Israelis returned the fire.

The official refused to con-

SPAIN APPEARS RECEPTIVE TO MEDITERRANEAN ANTI-RED PACT

Foreign Minister Interested in Alliance After Signing Morocco Declaration of Independence.

By RALPH FORTE

MADRID, April 7 (UP)—Foreign Minister Alberto Martin Artajo today hinted Spain was interested in a defense pact linking the anti-Communist countries on the Mediterranean sea.

The indications followed the Spanish grant of independence to Spanish Morocco. Spain and Morocco signed a joint declaration today which ended the 1912 agreement that made the northern fringe of the old Sherifian empire a Spanish protectorate.

The agreement gave Morocco the right to conduct its own military and diplomatic affairs. Since a similar agreement was reached a few months ago with France, giving independence to French Morocco, the new accord will permit unification of Morocco with a continuing measure of "interdependence" with both France and Spain.

Martin Artajo's interest in a Mediterranean defense pact was manifested in an interview on the eve of his departure for official talks in Washington.

Geographic Position.

Spain's participation in a Mediterranean pact would be the natural consequence of our geographic position," he said.

"But," he add, "it would require the previous solution of pending problems in the near East and North Africa so that the shorelining countries, on an equal footing, would join efficiently in defense plans."

In his opinion, he said, "it is premature to talk of a Mediterranean (defense) pact." "We could begin with a conference on political and economic topics."

Martin Artajo had been asked to comment on Spain's position regarding Spanish entry into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and a Mediterranean pact.

Of NATO, he said:

"It would be contradictory if Spain were to assume the obligations arising out of common defense without having participated in the abundant benefits of the European Recovery Program (Marshall plan) which other countries so generously enjoyed."

'Under No Obligation.'

He said Spain was "under no obligation to join NATO."

"Nor should she do so until she is invited to participate in existing or other forms of continental collaboration."

But, he added, "on the other hand"—speaking of suggestions for a Mediterranean pact:

"Spain would be always ready for such a reunion as are other countries of 'Mare Nostrum' (Our Sea)."

Martin Artajo said Spain and Portugal have "stood shoulder to shoulder since the Red danger made its appearance," and he added:

"The Iberian pact with Portugal and the military and economic agreements with the United States make up for Spain's non-inclusion in NATO."

LIBYA GETS BOOST IN U. S. AID AFTER SPURNING RUSSIA

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

TRIPOLI, Libya, April 7—The Libyan government announced tonight a major increase in United States economic and military aid.

The announcement follows Libya's rejection last week of an offer of aid from the Soviet Union.

The new Washington deal provides that the United States will give Libya $5,000,000 before the end of the current fiscal year, June 30, in addition to the $4,000,000 Libya already has received this year.

The total for next fiscal year will be increased to $11,000,000, subject to Congressional appropriation. The United States also will provide equipment and technical advice necessary to increase the Libyan army from 1600 men to 2600 men in the next fiscal year.

Premier Mustafa Ben Halim said the armed forces' the United States had agreed to equip were "mainly designed to defend Libya." He remarked that, although Libya was a member of the Arab League, it had not signed the Arab League's collective security pact.

"But if an Arab country is attacked," he said, "Libya will help that country."

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION REJECTS SEAT FOR PEIPING

DUBROVNIK, Yugoslavia, April 7 (AP)—The council of the Inter-Parliamentary Union tonight rejected a Polish resolution calling for the admission of Communist China as a member.

The resolution had proposed acceptance of a decision by the union's executive committee at New Delhi last November declaring Red China was eligible for membership.

The Polish resolution was defeated by a vote of 32 to 23. Five delegates abstained. The vote was secret but it was understood that backers of the Polish resolution included all East bloc countries plus India, Yugoslavia and Italy.

POST-DISPATCH MAN TO REPORT ON BOMB TESTS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7—Brig. Gen. Thomas R. Phillips, U.S.A. (Ret.), military analyst of the Post-Dispatch, has been selected as one of 15 reporters and photographers to observe and report nuclear bomb tests at the Eniwetok proving ground, the Government announced today.

Gen. Phillips is one of two reporters chosen as representatives for afternoon newspapers operating under a pool arrangement for the tests which will be conducted about May 1, the announcement by the Atomic Energy Commission and the Defense Department said. The second man in the afternoon paper pool will be Edwin A. Lahey of the Chicago Daily News.

The Government announced earlier this week that newsmen would be permitted to view the Eniwetok tests and selections for the assignment were made by the standing committee of correspondents of the Capitol press gallery.

While the announcement today did not specify that an H-bomb would be detonated, it described the test as in the "megaton range." A megaton is the energy equivalent of 1,000,000 tons of TNT and has been used as a term of reference for hydrogen, rather than atomic, blasts.

Gen. Phillips reported last year's atomic "survival tests" at the Las Vegas proving grounds.

LIBERIA REBUFFS RUSSIA THROUGH ENVOY IN U.S.

WASHINGTON, April 7 (AP)—Russian bids for closer relations with the Negro republic of Liberia were sharply rebuffed today, in President Eisenhower's office.

Ambassador George Arthur Padmore of Liberia told Mr. Eisenhower that the Liberian government "has not agreed" to proposals for a friendship pact with the Soviet Union, nor has it agreed to accept Soviet economic assistance.

Immediately afterward the new envoy from the African republic released a statement by Liberian President William V. Tubman, declaring: "This nation has never been for sale, neither will the Liberian people ever barter their integrity." Padmore visited Mr. Eisenhower to present his diplomatic credentials.

peated border clashes on the Syrian, Jordan and Egyptian fronts.

The U.N. Secretary General will arrive at a time which seasoned Middle East observers consider the most critical in years.

There are fears that one of the border clashes might signal an all-out war—a war which could make the Holy Land the Korea of the oil-rich Middle East. It could be the spark of a world war.

Some fear Israel, alarmed by Egypt's buildup of military strength with supplies of Communist weapons, might launch a preventive war. The Israeli express fear that the Arabs are preparing for a "second round."

Hammarskjold said before leaving New York that his instructions from the Security Council were broad enough to permit a wide range of discussions. He added that his own powers as Secretary General gave him the right to expand the mission if necessary.

10-YEAR-OLD MARKET EXPERT MISSES $50,000 QUESTION

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, April 7—The market broke for 10-year-old Leonard Ross tonight as he missed a $50,000 question on the National Broadcasting Co.'s "Big Surprise" telecast.

The little expert on the stock market will have another chance at the question next week if a "rescuer" is able to answer another question first. Even should this not work out, he will retain $10,000 that he has already won.

Tonight's question required eight answers. The boy could not name the first companies in the gold mining, communications, merchandising and textile industries that were listed on the stock exchange.

PEOPLE'S FRONT WIDENS LEAD IN CEYLON VOTING

Party Advocating Neutrality Is Well Ahead of Pro-West Premier Kotelawala.

COLOMBO, Ceylon, April 7 (AP)—The People's United Front, advocating a neutralist Ceylon, increased its surprising victory margin over pro-Western Prime Minister Sir John Kotelawala today.

It was the second day of voting in the three-day parliamentary elections.

The United Front, headed by Solomon West Ridgway Diaz Bandaranaike, an old Oxford friend of British Prime Minister Eden, was confident it could organize a new government next Friday.

However, Bandaranaike may not have a majority in the 95-member Parliament. He may have to call for support from Trotskyite Marxists, who are runnning second in the voting.

Latest count in the elections, which will be concluded Tuesday with little change expected in the present trends, were:

United Front, 38; Trotskyite Communists, 9; Kotelawala's United National party, 8; Communists, 2; Independents, 2.

The United Front, in addition to Bandaranaike's own Freedom party, contains several Communists or ex-Communists who are expected to join with the Reds outside the alliance to increase leftists influence in any new coalition.

Kotelawala's strongly pro-Western, anti-Communist United Nationalists failed to win a single additional seat on the second day's voting. The party had 54 seats in the last Parliament.

The slightly-built 57-year-old Bandaranaike's program demands elimination of Britain's important naval and air bases on this strategic British commonwealth island off India's east coast.

Bandaranaike said in an interview he planned to follow a course of friendship with all nations. He added he would ask his cabinet to examine the precise position of British bases, which he considers inconsistent with the general policy of friendship.

Ceylon's present status is that of a dominion in the British commonwealth of nations. Asked if he would take Ceylon out of the commonwealth, Bandaranaike replied he would take these questions up with his cabinet.

He declared that immediately after becoming Premier he would establish diplomatic relations with Russia and Red China. Kotelawala refused to recognize either.

Bandaranaike said he would nationalize the 477,000 acres of British-owned tea and rubber plantations in Ceylon.

(R. S. S. Gunewardene, United States ambassador to Ceylon, said in an interview in Washington Friday it would be a mistake to interpret the election as a sign of a swing to the left. He said Bandaranaike is a strong nationalist and a realist, and "not anti-American, not anti-western and certainly not pro-Communist.")

GROMYKO SAYS CHANCES OF ARMS BAR ARE FADING

Russian Contends West's Refusal to Lay Down Atomic Weapons Blocks Disarmament.

(Related Article on Page 1C)

COPENHAGEN, April 7 (UP)—Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said today the world is "not nearer but farther" from agreement on disarmament.

Gromyko, who heads the Soviet delegation to the five-power disarmament talks under way in London, blamed the West for holding up arms cuts by its refusal to lay down atomic weapons.

He also suggested before a private audience here that Norway and Denmark should drop out of the North Atlantic pact and turn neutral as Sweden is. Gromyko said Russia "sympathizes" with Iceland for trying to oust the United States from military bases that "infringe" on Iceland's sovereignty.

The Icelandic Parliament recently voted to consider changing the 1951 treaty granting the bases to the United States. Iceland is a NATO member although it has no armed forces of its own.

Gromyko, who has been studying the recent American step-by-step disarmament plan leading to a freeze on nuclear weapons, denounced the Western stand on atomic arms.

"We are not nearer but farther from an agreement than we have been at times and all because some people (the West) do not wish to part with their atomic weapons and facilitate the cessation of the armaments race," he said.

(In London, where the disarmament talks are in recess for the week-end, Gromyko has proposed separating conventional weapons from nuclear weapons in any disarmament program.

(He asked a series of "important and intelligent" questions about the American plan introduced by United States delegate Harold E. Stassen, and it appeared to Western observers that the Soviets were giving the American plan serious consideration.)

Speaking in English today, the Russian diplomat emphasized that the conference delegates from the United States, Britain, France and Canada will join him in doing "our best to facilitate progress."

He said there is some hope of this because Russia has taken the position that it is not necessary to consider conventional and nuclear arms reductions together.

His statement that the world is farther from disarmament agreement caused surprise among Western diplomats here who understood the disarmament talks in London were making progress.

BILLY GRAHAM ON TV SHOW SPONSORED BY BEER FIRM

MONTREAT, N.C., April 7 (AP)—Evangelist Billy Graham said today he was aware that a commerical for a brewing company was shown regionally during last night's CBS "Person to Person" telecast on which he was interviewed.

"Of course, I had no control over that," he explained.

He said he understood the Hamm Brewing Co. regularly sponsored the Edward R. Murrow show in three or four states of the Southwest.

The network, he said, was "very gracious and understanding" and his part of the program was preceded by a message in behalf of the American Cancer Society's fund drive. He said he received a few letters of protest from the Southwest before the program went on the air.

Benson Says Farm Bill Must Be Changed if He Is to Accept It

Comments After White House Meeting—No Decisions Reported Reached on 'Catch-all' Measure.

WASHINGTON, April 7—President Eisenhower spent an hour today conferring with Secretar of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson on the farm bill approved by a conference committee in Congress last night.

"There'll have to be some changes made to make this a good bill," Benson told reporters. He added that as Secretary of Agriculture he considered the farm measure, which provides for rigid price supports, "not acceptable" in its present form.

White House aids described today's meeting as an "initial discussion" and added that no positive decisions were reached.

James C. Hagerty, presidential press secretary, said the President would not make up his mind on the bill until it had passed both House and Senate, and had been sent to him for action.

The bill is due for House action Wednesday. It must go to the Senate also.

Today's meeting was to discuss Administration strategy in connection with the coming vote. The President plans another meeting Monday morning at which he will discuss the farm measure with congressional leaders as well as with Benson. After the session Eisenhower will depart for Augusta, Ga., for a week's vacation.

Those taking part in today's meeting included Sherman Adams, assistant to the President; Wilton B. Persons, deputy assistant to the President; Fred Seaton, administrative assistant and White House liaison officer on legislative matters; Dr. Gabriele Hauge, economic adviser to the President, and True D. Morse, assistant secretary of agriculture.

Senate and House conferees voted 8 to 2 in favor of a compromise "catch-all" farm program involving an outlay of some 3 billion dollars.

Senator George D. Aiken (Rep.), Vermont, ranking Republican of the Agriculture Committee, predicted last night that the President would veto the bill if it was passed in the form approved by the conference committee. Aiken, along with Senator Spessard L. Holland (Dem.), Florida, were the two conference committee members who voted against the bill.

Congressional spokesmen were agreed that if the President vetoes the farm bill there would be no farm legislation this year. In such an event, the present lower flexible price system would continue. However, there would be no soil bank designed by the Administration as a means of paying farmers for cutting surplus output. It is too late for a soil bank to be effective this year.

The conference bill calls for fixed price supports of 90 per cent of parity for the next year on corn, cotton, wheat, rice and peanuts; it also provides for the soil bank. While the fixed parity is regarded by the Administration as a distasteful substitute for its present flexible price supports ranging between 75 and 90 per cent, the soil bank provision of the bill is a major element of the President's farm program.

Aiken's predictions of a veto indicated that Administration supporters in both the House and Senate may attempt the usual parliamentary maneuver of revising the Senate-House compromise. This attempt would be made at the risk of no farm legislation in the presidential campaign year, when votes from the farm belt may be deciding factors in the election.

Senator Allen J. Ellender (Dem.), Louisiana, and Representative Harold D. Cooley (Dem.), North Carolina, said that they "fully expected" the House to adopt the bill and the Senate to follow suit. Ellender is chairman of the Senate's Agriculture Committee and Cooley heads the House Agriculture Committee.

BANK ROBBER SOUGHT, 2 WITH HIM CAPTURED

$62,204 Loot Recovered in Flint, Mich. — Holdup Man Eludes Police Bullets.

FLINT, Mich., April 7 (AP)—Police and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, armed with shotguns and submachine guns, today sought the last of three robbers who took $62,204 in the holdup of an east side bank Friday noon.

Police, acting on a tip from an undisclosed source, flushed the other two suspects from their hideaway today and recovered all the loot. The third escaped under fire.

The two captured are John Alkes and George Ballin, both of Chicago. The stolen money was found in a laundry bag.

Three FBI agents entered the Henry Schmidt home shortly after 11 a.m. today. Mrs. Viva Schmidt is a relative of Alkes's wife and the guardian of their two children, Deborah, 6 years old, and Phillip, 4. She said Alkes came to the home on foot last night to see the children. He asked if "a friend" could park a car in the Schmidt garage.

Agents found Alkes hiding in a basement coal bin. The third man shot his way out of the garage after he was discovered under a blanket in the back seat of a stolen car. Ballin surrendered peaceably when officers ordered him to get out of the car. The laundry bag containing the money was found in the back seat.

At least six shots were fired. No one was hurt.

Three robbers, wearing masks, scooped up the $62,204 yesterday from four tellers' cages of the Citizens' Commercial & Savings Bank. It was factory payday in this industrial city and the bank had more cash on hand than usual.

Stuffing the money in their jackets, the men fled, using at least two cars, one of which had been stolen that morning. The house they were found in was 14 blocks from the scene of the robbery.

Police had blockaded main roads in southeastern Michigan yesterday blocking exit from the city.

Legislators Agree State Should Earn Interest on Idle Funds But Split Over Donnelly Plan

Lawmakers Favor Reform in Handling Deposits — Governor's Proposal to Permit Interest on 50 Pct. of Money Is Ready for Senate Consideration.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Corespondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Missouri legislators will go back to work tomorrow, in virtually unanimous agreement that the State should earn interest on its multi-million dollar deposits in Missouri banks, but sharply split over Gov. Donnelly's proposed method of achieving that goal.

The Governor's proposal, a constitutional amendment quickly approved by the Senate Banking Committee last Thursday less than 24 hours after it was formally submitted by Donnelly, is ready for Senate consideration on perfection tomorrow. Senate leaders hope to pass the proposal promptly this week and send it to the House.

Sympathy for Reform.

In contrast to the hostile attitude of previous Legislatures to proposals of this kind, there appears to be widespread support in the current special session of the state assembly to clear the way for the long-sought reform in the handling of the state's huge deposits. The funds are now treated as political plums, parceled out as rewards for party activity.

The big issue before the General Assembly, however, is the plan to be adopted to govern a new system under which Missouri can join most other states in earning a return on its temporarily idle funds.

Donnelly's proposal would permit up to 50 per cent of the state's idle funds to be placed in interest-bearing time deposits. Some legislators have sharply criticized the 50 per cent limitation as too restrictive, and contend the state should be permitted to invest its own funds in short-term Government securities as other states do.

No Interest on $111,359,440.

As of March 30, the state had $111,359,440 on deposit in 262 of the state's 620 banks. None of this money is now earning interest for the state, but banks are receiving a return from these deposits by investing them in Government securities or lending the money to customers.

Missouri has been unable legally to collect interest on its funds or to invest them because of provisions of the State Constitution and federal and state laws. The Constitution requires state funds to be kept in demand deposits, and federal banking laws and regulations forbid the payment of interest on such deposits.

State deposits are awarded to Missouri banks under two-year contracts. The banks are selected initially by the state treasurer, subject to subsequent approval by the Governor and state auditor. Such deposits must be secured by collateral having a value 10 per cent in excess of the amount of the deposit.

As a result of this situation, some bankers and politicians have been careful to maintain cordial relations.

Generous Contributors.

As disclosed by the Post-Dispatch yesterday, the heads of two banks which hold the largest deposits of interest-free state funds were generous contributors to the 1952 Democratic state campaign.

James M. Kemper Sr., board chairman of Commerce Trust Co. of Kansas City, and Richard R. Nacy, president of Central Missouri Trust Co. of Jefferson City, each donated $1000 to the Democratic campaign that year. Last March 30, the Kansas City bank had $24,067,893 in state funds, and the Jefferson City bank had $15,156,466.

Central Missouri Trust officers and their relatives contributed a total of $3000 to the Democratic campaign that year.

Kemper, a prominent Kansas City business leader, served as treasurer of the Democratic State Committee in 1952. Nacy, a former state Democratic chairman, joined Central Missouri Trust after serving as state treasurer.

$15,000,000 Deposit.

The Bank of St. Louis had a $15,000,000 state deposit on March 30, the third largest amount. Arthur A. Blumeyer, its president, and John J. Griffin, a former vice president, told the Post-Dispatch that the bank obtained and kept its state account through Griffin's political activities and friendships.

Blumeyer and Griffin said the bank's state account resulted from Griffin's political support of various Democratic state treasurers, including the late Robert Winn, the late Wilson Bell, M. E. Morris and Bates.

Griffin is now a vice president of First National Bank in St. Louis, which had $5,000,000 in state funds on March 30. Griffin has been active in Democratic politics, serving on party fund-raising committees for many years. Blumeyer has been active in Republican politics.

Coalition Charged.

For almost a year Joseph M. Whealen, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, has been attacking the present disposition of state funds, charging that the deposits are controlled by a bi-partisan coalition of top Democratic and Republican leaders.

He emphasized that the Bank of St. Louis has been able to maintain its state account under Democratic state administrations despite the fact that its president was an active Republican and Walter E. Burtelow, executive vice president of the bank, is a leader of Republican finance committees.

Whealen also cited the fact that State Senator Michael Kinney, a Democrat, and Barak T. Mattingly, a powerful Republican leader, serve as directors of the Bank of Ferguson, which had a $1,000,000 state deposit as of March 30. Both Kinney and Mattingly denied they were responsible for the bank getting the deposit.

Treasurer a Stockholder.

State Treasurer G. Hubert Bates admitted last week he is a stockholder in the Lexington Savings Trust Co., which has a $300,000 state deposit. He said he had approved renewal of the bank's depository contract and increased its state deposit from $100,0000 to $300,000 after becoming state treasurer.

Attorney General John M. Dalton ordered an inquiry into Bates's handling of state funds, after the Post-Dispatch pointed out that state law prohibits the state treasurer from profiting personally from public monies under his control.

The Post-Dispatch also reported that Gov. Donnelly is a director of another state depository, the First National Bank of Lebanon, which also has a $300,000 state deposit. Although Missouri statutes make it a felony for the state treasurer to profit from state funds, there is no law specifically prohibiting the Governor from having an interest in a bank holding a state deposit.

The state's inability to earn interest on its funds has been criticized for many years, and figured in many of the bitter political campaigns in the past.

Proposals to amend the state constitution to change the system were introduced in almost every legislative session in recent years. But all were either smothered in Senate or House committees or quickly killed on the floor.

Pressure Blamed.

Legislators reported that "pressure" put on them by rural bankers was largely responsible for the defeat of these reform efforts.

In the 1955 regular session, state fund amendments were introduced on recommendation of Gov. Donnelly and by the State Reorganization (Little Hoover) Commission. The Senate Banking Committee which approved Gov. Donnelly's proposal Thursday, had failed to act on the measures last year.

The sharp change-about in the legislators' attitude toward this problem came after leaders of the Missouri Bankers Association announced they were not opposed to removing the legal barriers which prevented the state from receiving a return on its idle funds.

Rae E. Evans of Carthage, president of the association, told a reporter at a bankers' conference in Columbia on Feb. 7, that the bankers would not be opposed to changing the system if adequate safeguards were provided. This statement followed publication by the Post-Dispatch on Feb. 5 of a detailed report on the state fund problem.

It was following publication of the Post-Dispatch review that L. C. Carpenter, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, announced he would circulate initiative petitions to force a vote by the people on a constitutional amendment permitting interest to be paid on state deposits.

Opposed by Bankers.

In March, the legislative committee of the Missouri Bankers Association met in St. Louis and decided to ask Gov. Donnelly to submit the state fund problem to the special session of the Legislature. The bankers' group was opposed to Carpenter's proposal, which contains no limitation on the amount of funds to be invested, and would allow the state to invest funds in Government securities as well as place them in time deposits.

As urged by the bankers, Donnelly submitted the state fund issue to the General Assembly in a special message Wednesday night. His proposal was introduced at that time.

Some legislators, after studying the Donnelly plan, declared that it would have to be amended materially to become workable. They objected chiefly to the 50 per cent limitation on the amount of funds that could be placed in time deposits, and to the bar against investment of idle monies in short-term Government notes.

Republican Charge.

State Representative Samuel B. Murphy of Kirkwood, Republican minority floor leader, said the Governor's plan would result in the concentration of most state funds in non-interest paying "checking accounts" in a few politically favored banks.

Critics of the plan have pointed out that funds in the state treasury fluctuate from $75,000,000 to $145,000,000, and that it would be difficult to determine how the 50 per cent limitation should be applied.

Objections also have been raised because the Governor's proposal does not require the placement of some state funds in time deposits, but only permits it at the discretion of the state treasurer, Governor and auditor.

Legislative observers expect the Senate to pass the proposal in about the form recommended by Gov. Donnelly, but the House is likely to amend the measure, or pass one of its own, with less restrictive provisions.

Majority Leader a Banker.

Senator Floyd R. Gibson of Independence, president of the Manufacturers and Mecahnics Bank of Kansas City, is Democratic majority leader in the Senate, and chairman of the Senate Banking Committee which approved Donnelly's measure without change. Gibson's bank had a state deposit of $750,000 on March 30.

State Representative A. Clifford Jones (Rep.), Clayton, and Warren E. Hearnes (Dem.), Mississippi county, jointly sponsored a proposal for interest payments on state deposits. Their proposal, introduced early in the special session, was sidetracked after Attorney General Dalton ruled it could not be considered because the Governor had not submitted that matter for legislative action.

After Donnelly opened consideration of the problem with his special message, State Representative Richard H. Ichord (Dem.), Texas county introduced another proposal, which is similar to the one backed by Carpenter. Ichord is Carpenter's campaign manager.

Some Action Expected.

Most legislative leaders believe some state fund proposal will be approved at the special session. Whatever proposal is passed will be submitted to Missouri voters for their approval in the Nov. 6 general election, or at an earlier special election if called by the Governor.

All candidates for major party nominations for Governor this year have indorsed a change in the state fund system. Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr., a candidate for the Democratic nomination, said he thinks the state should earn interest on its idle funds, but has not offered a specific plan.

On the other hand, Lon Hocker, St. Louis attorney who is seeking the Republican nomination for Governor, would simply strike out all provisions of Section 15, Article IV which specify the manner in which the funds shall be handled.

"Let us take out the offensive sentences from the present provision and leave it to the statutes the Legislature has already enacted, and may amend as needed, to determine how the money shall be handled," Hocker said.

As to the resolution approved by the Senate Banking Committee, Hocker said: "I call upon the people of Missouri to demand that the Democratically-controlled Legislature hold open hearings on this proposal; that we find out who drafted it, and why; and that we reject the Greek gift for what it is—a Trojan Horse."

40,000 BASS PUT INTO LAKES IN CITY PARKS

About 40,000 bass, considered just the proper size for juvenile anglers' hooks, were seined out of the Forest Park hatchery yesterday and transferred to lakes in the city's parks.

The bass, then about 60,000 strong, were placed in rearing ponds last year as small fry and raised with future fishing in mind. They now are regarded as ready to take their chances in lakes in Forest Park, Carondelet, O'Fallon and several other city parks, where fishing is part of the summer recreation program.

The bass harvest was conducted by the Fish Propagation Committee, in co-operation with the St. Louis Sports Council, the St. Louis Lions Clubs and the city.

Announcement was made at the close of an annual banquet of the school superintendents of the country at the National Catholic Education Association convention. He received the honor because of his outstanding work in the field of education, it was reported. He has been superintendent of parish schools for the last 10 years. For five years earlier he was assistant superintendent of diocesan high schools.

The document designating the advanced title by Pope Pius XII was dated Feb. 29. Msgr. Hoflich was elevated past the title of Very Reverend, which was the next higher one than he had held.

TWO MEN SHOT, WOUNDED IN HOLDUP ATTEMPT

Robber Flees — Police Chauffeur Rushing to Scene Hurt in Collision With Bus.

Two men were shot and seriously wounded last night in an attempted holdup in front of 1025 North Twenty-second street. A police chauffeur speeding to the scene was injured seriously when the patrol wagon he was driving collided with a Public Service Co. bus at Twentieth and Carr streets.

O. C. Fielder, 1008 Glasgow avenue, suffered a gunshot wound in the upper part of the chest. His companion, Louie Jones, 2211 Biddle street, was wounded in the arm. Head and other injuries were suffered by Police Chauffeur Lewis J. Protheroe, 5068 Lindenwood avenue, in the collision.

Fielder protested he had no money when an armed holdup man thrust his hand into Fielder's pocket. With that, the robber stepped back, fired a revolver at both men and fled.

Both wounded men are Negroes. The robber was described as a Negro 35 to 40 years old, six feet tall, about 175 pounds in weight and wearing a dark brown topcoat.

Protheroe was taken to City Hospital. The others were rushed to Homer G. Phillips Hospital.

Police arrested the Public Service Co. driver, who was operating a southbound Lee bus, and booked him on charges of careless driving, failure to yield right of way to an emergency vehicle and destruction of city property.

He said he was Clarence D. Smith, of the 2100 block of Division street. Smith, a Negro, said all windows in his bus were closed. He failed to hear the police siren or to see the partol wagon he said.

Abe Seigel, owner of a shoe store at 1622 South Thirty-ninth street, was robbed of $320 at the store last night by an armed man, Seigel told police.

He said the man ordered a pair of shoes and then drew a revolver when Seigel reached for a paper sack. The store owner was told to put the money from the cash register and his wallet in the sack. The robber forced Seigel to the rear of the store and then fled.

Isadore Matier, owner of a shoe store at 2708 Market street, was robbed of $275 by a man who entered the place, displayed a revolver and said he would shoot Matier's daughter, Miss Evelyn Matier, unless he was given money from the cash register.

The man, a Negro, took the money and fled east in Market in an automobile driven by another Negro.

Two policemen, who interrupted a holdup at 1618 (rear) Cole street early yesterday, found nine men sitting on the floor without their shoes or trousers and three armed men standing guard over them. All were Negroes.

At the command of the officers, Sgt. Thomas Villa and Patrolman Alfred Doty, two men armed with a pistol and a revolver dropped their weapons, but the third man, who held a shotgun, fled out a rear door.

Pearl Johnson, one of the victims, who lives at the Cole street address, told the officers he and eight friends were engaged in "a social evening" when the armed men appeared and ordered them to remove their trousers and shoes.

The robbers had removed cash from the trousers' pockets when police arrived after receiving a call that a man was flourishing a revolver. A total of $43 was recovered from one of the men, who were booked suspected of robbery. Johnson and his friends were booked suspected of gambling.

Police Chief Plays With Pistol And Puts 11 Holes in His Station

11 Bullet Holes in Walls and Door Result of Trying Out Spanish .38 That Went Out of Control.

Chief of Police James H. Webber was asked yesterday to explain 11 bullet holes which mar the door and walls inside the Berkeley police station at 8620 Airport road. He gave this explanation:

"I was sitting at my desk about 1 o'clock one morning two weeks ago. I was examining a Spanish-make .38 automatic pistol which had been confiscated from a prisoner. I wanted to see how it worked.

"I touched the trigger and the gun went off. The spring must have been rusty because the trigger stuck and the gun kept firing. It bucked in my hand and I lost control of it. The bullets went into the walls.

"Well, sir, that made me pretty mad. I reloaded the gun and tried to find out what had made it go off like that. It went off again and I lost control of it. This time the shots went in the door."

Webber said he then decided the weapon was unsafe. He carefully took it apart, he said, and threw the parts away. He made a report of the incident to Mayor Thomas C. Boyle.

"No, I made no effort to repair the walls and the door," he said, in answer to a question. "I left the holes as a reminder to quit playing with firearms."

FIRE IN FT. WOOD SHOP CAUSES $500,000 DAMAGE

FORT LEONARD WOOD, Mo., April 7 (AP) — A fire, whipped by 45-mile-an-hour winds, destroyed the furniture repair shop at this Army post today. Damage, including valuable equipment destroyed, was estimated at $500,000.

The blaze, brought under control in about an hour, spread to an adjacent wooded area on the post. Five acres of land were burned.

The blaze broke out in the 240 by 100 foot one-story building and razed the furniture repair section where a large quantity of Army equipment and furniture was stored.

NEW CHIMP ACT HAS WATER SKIS, BUT NO WATER

A new act built around water skis—but no water—will be introduced next month when the chimpanzee show at the Zoo opens its 1956 season, Zoo Director George P. Vierheller announced yesterday.

Roy, a veteran performer in the chimp show, will glide across the stage on skis lashed atop a pair of roller skates, Vierheller said. The motive power will be provided by a "motorboat" — a converted dodge-em car—piloted by Jackie, another trouper.

There won't be any water in the act, Vierheller said, because chimps don't like water. The performances will be like the practice sessions, he remarked. Dry runs.

ANTI-RABIES SHOTS GIVEN TO 926 DOGS IN COUNTY

Anti-rabies shots were administered to 926 dogs at four clinics in St. Louis county yesterday. This increased to 2105 the number of dogs which have received the injections since March 17, when a series of clinics were started under auspices of the St. Louis County Health Department after an outbreak of rabies was reported among dogs in the west central part of the county.

Places where clinics were held yesterday, and the number of dogs given shots at each, were: Affton, 297; Bellefontaine Neighbors, 291; Fenton, 178, and Florissant, 160. Thirty-two rabid dogs have been reported in the county thus far this year, compared with 27 in all of last year.

EASTER SEAL DRIVE LAGS, ONLY 30 PCT. OF FUND RAISED

The Easter Seal campaign to raise funds for the St. Louis Society for Crippled Children has received only $60,407 in its drive for $200,000 to provide rehabilitation care for handicapped children, it was announced yesterday.

"With only 30 per cent of the goal reached, and the drive scheduled to end Tuesday, an emergency meeting of the society's executive board has been called," said John H. Kniest, executive director.

"Unless an emergency drive is held to raise sufficient money," he said, "the society will be forced to curtail many of its services, or even to close its doors to the 500 or more crippled children now under its care.

"Should the society be forced to discontinue its services to these children, not only they, but the whole community will suffer, for without the Easter Seal rehabilitation program hundreds of crippled children each year will not get the care they need."

YOUNG INMATES CALLED LEADERS IN DISTURBANCE

Workhouse Demonstration Laid to Pent-Up Energy — 12 to 15 Prisoners Moved.

The window-smashing, bed-wrecking and pipe-breaking demonstration at the City Workhouse last Tuesday night, which lasted more than one hour, was led by 12 or 15 young inmates with pent-up energy—"full of pep," Warden Harold E. Baynes said yesterday.

Prisoners in some of the cells that were damaged told Baynes that the "young fellows just wanted to smash the place up." Many of them did not know the demonstration was to be started and told the Warden they thought it was "sort of spontaneous."

The 12 or 15, who have been moved to the maximum security section since the outbreak, apparently had nothing specific to complain about, the Warden said.

Mrs. Edward G. Brungard, director of Public Welfare, said she had been informed by Baynes that his investigation had disclosed no specific reason for the outbreak.

"It seems," she said, "they just wanted to riot. They had no complaints against the food or the guards. They just wanted to revolt."

Isaac Gurman, director of the St. Louis Bureau for Men, which has made investigations at the Workhouse and City Jail, said his group planned no independent inquiry. "We have a capable warden who can handle his own investigation," he said.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, who pointed out the disturbance was the third in 10 montns, said he and other city officials are going ahead as fast as possible with plans for a new workhouse. A sum of $3,000,000 in bond issue funds is available for this purpose. Although the planning for the new building was started some time ago, it was said it could not be completed in less than two years.

"Periodically," the Mayor has said, "we may expect incidents of this character until the new workhouse is built."

HEARING TOMORROW IN COCA-COLA SUIT

Striker Asks Court to Bar Stockholders' Meeting Tuesday.

Hearing on an order to show cause why officers of the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. should not be prevented from holding the annual stockholders' metting Tuesday will be held in Circuit Judge Waldo C. Mayfield's court tomorrow.

The show cause order was issued Friday on petition of a striking Coca-Cola driver-salesman who owns stock in the firm. He asked the court to force company officers to allow him to access to company records and to prevent the shareholders' meeting.

The plaintiff is Robert Louis Goeckeler, 247 South Harvey avenue, Ferguson, one of 200 drivers who have been on strike since Nov. 9 for recognition of Teamsters' Local 688 as their bargaining agent.

He alleged in the suit he had been barred by company officers from an opportunity to communiciate with other stockholders regarding company management and from soliciting proxies. He demanded he be permitted to get names of shareholders and number of shares they hold.

A company spokesman said Goeckeler had been permitted to see the list of stockholders, as required by law, but was denied permission to remove the lists for photostating.

RISE IN SHIPPING THROUGH LOCKS AT CHAIN OF ROCKS

A total of 1,354,450 tons of shipping went through the Chain of Rocks locks on the Mississippi river last month, compared with 1,142,108 tons in March 1955, an increase of 26 per cent, it was announced yesterday.

Col. George E. White Jr., St. Louis district engineer for the Corps of Engineers, also reported that the tonnage was 18.6 per cent higher this year at the Alton locks. The tonnage at Alton last month was 1,317,181, compared with 1,043,556 tons reported in March 1955.

SENATE REPORT 'CONDEMNS' $2500 OFFER TO CASE

purpose of influencing the Senator's vote."

Senator Case turned down the $2500 offer last February after determining its source and voted against the bill to exempt natural gas producers from direct federal price regulation after disclosing what he termed an unusual interest in his vote by an oil company representative. He had indicated previously that he favored the bill.

In its summation of testimony taken in public hearings and private staff inquiries, the four members of the special committee—two Democrats and two Republicans—gave sympathetic treatment to Donald Ross, an Eisenhower appointee as United States Attorney for the district in which Omaha, Nebr., is located. Ross arranged meetings for Neff with Republican Senators Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska, to discuss their votes on the gas bill.

In return for Ross's arranging conferences with the two Senators, Neff opened savings accounts for each of Ross's children and sent them passbooks with $100 showing to their credit. After this was disclosed, Ross was compelled to resign.

Of Ross's conduct, the report says: "In appreciation of past favors Mr. Neff opened savings accounts for each of Ross's five children and sent the account books to Mr. Ross. He refused to accept them and returned them to Mr. Neff within 15 minutes after receiving them. This committee believes that Mr. Ross's conduct in this matter is not reproachable and that he was merely a victim of the environment created by Mr. Neff."

Committee's 5 Questions

The committee confronted itself in its report with five questions:

1. Did the activities here constitute a bribe or an attempt to bribe or otherwise influence illegally the vote of Senator Case on the natural gas bill?
2. Was there an improper attempt to influence the vote of Senator Case on the natural gas bill?
3. Did the activities of Neff and Patman constitute lobbying?
4. Was the $2500 contribution which was made to Senator Case's campaign fund a political contribution by the Superior Oil Co. of California?
5. Did the payment of salary and expenses and fees and expenses of Patman and Neff by the Superior Oil Co. constitute a political contribution by that corporation?

In an answer to question one, the committee found that the evidence was clear that the contribution which Neff attempted to make to Case's campaign fund was not conditioned upon the Senator's agreeing to vote for the natural gas bill or to take any other specific action.

The record, according to the committee, is replete with testimony that the contribution was given without any strings attached.

'Close' to Bribery.

The committee found that while Neff appears not to have violated the statute governing attempted bribery in his attempt to contribute to Case's campaign he may have come close to a violation of the statute relating to bribery when he said to Wendell Edson, Storm Lake, Ia., that he would contribute to the campaign fund of Senator Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa if the Senator favored the natural gas bill.

On question No. 2 the committee found uncontroverted testimony that Neff, when he dropped the $2500 in $100 bills on the desk of J. J. Kahler in Sioux Falls, N.D., was putting it on the desk of a man who had no connection with Case's campaign or funds for his campaign. There was also testimony that, when Neff took the money from Patman for the Case campaign fund, Neff inquired of Patman whether the $2500 should be paid before or after the vote on the natural gas bill and that Patman said that this would be left to Neff's judgment.

On the other hand, the report said the fact is inescapable that Neff's going to South Dakota in November, 1955, and to Case's office in Washington in January 1956 was for the purpose of ascertaining Case's position on the natural gas bill. Also, the report said, Patman gave Neff the $2500 for Senator Case after Neff had informed him that Case was favorably inclined toward the bill.

'Inept' Lobbying.

The committee said on point No. 3 that it is its conclusion that Neff was engaged in lobbying. In an inept fashion Neff intended to and, in some instances, sought and did make contact with Senators, the report said. It is significant, the report said, that Neff intended to determine their attitudes with regard to the gas bill.

"It would be nonsensical to assume that he would have gone to the extensive trouble that he did in acquiring this information (views of the Senators on the gas bill) unless he further intended to use the information in a manner calculated to bring those opposed or indecisive to a point of view favorable to the bill."

As to question four, the report said that the $2500 offered for Case's campaign and all of the $7500 given by Patman to Neff was the personal money of Keck and was not funds of the Superior Oil Co. The committee however, had no opportunity to audit the record of the Superior Oil Co. and is dependent entirely upon the records of the statements of the witness, the report said.

On point No. 5, the committee report said that the circumstances have raised the question of whether there was a political contribution by a corporation, in a sense different than the personal contribution described as having come from Keck. The report said that the select committee considered this fully. It says that the Superior Oil paid all of the salaries and expenses of Patman and bargained for all of his time and that the same corporation paid Neff's fees and salaries.

To the extent, the committee report said, that Patman and Neff devoted their time to the dispensing of tax funds for political campaigns was the Superior Oil Co. making a political contribution.

The report says in answer to its own question that the committee does not believe this constituted a political contribution and was not proscribed by the law governing elections and political activities and was not in any sense illegal.

Perjury Not Its Province.

The committee said, with respect to contradictory testimony under oath which it heard, that it was not within its jurisdiction to decide whether or not perjury had been committed. That question should be left up to a decision of the Department of justice.

The select committee made these recommendations:

1. That the Justice Department examine the transcript of these hearings in order to determine whether or not any federal statutes have been violated, and whether or not there has been any perjury by witnesses in connection with these hearings, and take such action as is appropriate.
2. That the Congress make a thorough and complete study of the federal lobbying act. The language of the present act is drawn so loosely as to make it difficult for even the best intentioned citizen to determine permissible and proscribed areas of activity, as well as whether he is required to register under the act, it said.
3. That the Congress make a study and re-evaluation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act.

Election Law Amendments.

4. That the Congress consider the advisability of amending the election laws to require:

(A) That every candidate for federal office designate a person or persons as fiscal agent or agents who shall be officially authorized to solicit and accept campaign contributions; that such information be made a matter of public record by being published in a newspaper of general circulation in the community where such agent or agents live, and that evidence of such publication be filed with the secretary of the Senate.

(B) That every person, political committee, group, or other organization making any campaign contribution or contributions, the total sum of which is in excess of $5000 during any one calendar year for the furtherance of the campaign or campaigns of any and all candidates for federal office, shall file with the secretary of the Senate a detailed account thereof including the name and address of the person or persons making such contributions, the date or dates made, the amount of such contribution or contributions, and the names and addresses of the candidates to whom said contribution or contributions were made. This information shall be filed not later than 30 days prior to the election. This report should include all contributions received prior to that date. Thirty days after the election a second report should be filed including therein all contributions received subsequent to the date of the first report.

Members of Committee.

The committee, headed by Senator Walter F. George (Dem.), Georgia, had as its other members Senators Styles Bridges (Rep.), New Hampshire; Carl Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, and Edward J. Thye (Rep.), Minnesota. It opened 11 days of hearings on Feb. 10 and took 849 pages of testimony from 22 witnesses.

By Senate instructions, the 12-page printed report dealt only with the incident touched off Feb. 3 when Case told the Senate he had rejected the $2500 contribution.

Another select committee, headed by Senator John L. McClellan (Dem.), Arkansas, has been assigned to a broad investigation of lobbying and election laws.

when it walked out of the last U.N. Assembly.

But it is not ready to yield to the rebels' demand for independence, recently acknowledged for the two neighboring protectorates of Tunisia and Morocco.

There was no sign of any softening among the Arabs. One of the best friends France has in the Arab world, Tunisian political boss Habib Bourguiba, told a gathering of farmers yesterday at Beja, in northwestern Tunisia:

"Our experience should serve as an example to Algeria.

"It is unthinkable that this brother country, right in the heart of a North Africa whose edges are now independent, should remain under oppression."

Situation in Morocco.

Acknowledgment by Spain of Morocco's independence follows an agreement between Morocco and France along the same lines. There was no official comment in Paris on Spain's action. Some satisfaction was evident, however, after many Spanish statements about Morocco's not being ripe for independence, that the Madrid Government had to make the same concessions as France.

Morocco itself was far from quiet. Three French farmers were kidnaped by guerrillas in the Riff area yesterday and a general strike has been called for Monday among more than 9000 Moroccan workmen on the big American air bases. The Moroccans, paid through French authorities, are asking for higher wages, free transportation, union recognition, appointment of a grievance committee and the rehiring of employes said to have been fired for political reasons.

EGYPT RAIDERS ATTACK AT NINE GAZA AREA POINTS

firm or deny a current report that Premier David Ben-Gurion had agreed, starting today, to keep Israeli patrols a short distance back from the demarcation line. A spokesman for the U.N. truce supervision organization also withheld comment on the report.

Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, the U.N. truce supervisor, is known, however, to believe that there would be fewer incidents on the border if Israel did not insist on maneuvering its patrols within a few feet of the line.

He has said privately that Israel has been acting like a man in a top hat who insists on exercising his rights by walking past a grang of bad little boys who are waiting to throw rocks at him.

The Foreign Office spokesman disregards this interpretation. He argues that Israeli settlers must plow all the way to the boundary line or else relinquish their claim to part of their territory. Since Egyptians began planting mines just outside the Israeli border, he goes on, military forces must patrol the border.

This "breakfast shooting", as he called it, has been started by the Egyptian positions virtually every day since last fall, he said, adding:

"Each time they start this breakfast shooting there is the possibility that it will flare into an incident like the ones of Wednesday and Thursday."

In the two-day incidents of this week, rifle and machinegun fire developed into an exchange of heavy mortar fire. Forty Egyptians were reported killed and more than 100 wounded. Israel reported four of its soldiers and two civilians were wounded.

"What happened then could happen every day that the Egyptians start this firing," the Foreign Ministry officer said. "They subjected a patrol to machinegun fire. The patrol was in a difficult situation, and we had to answer with heavier fire to extricate the patrol. Two hours later they began to shell our border settlements."

Israeli spokesmen attributed the large number of Egyptian casualties to the fact that Egyptian mortar positions are in or near Gaza and other centers of population. Inhabitants of Israel's border settlements quickly took refuge in newly-completed air raid shelters.

They call the daily firing a continuation of a deliberate policy by Egyptian Premier Nasser of keeping the border aflame.

An army spokesman later gave some details of the Gaza strip incident yesterday. He said firing began at 7:30 a.m. in the Kisufim area 10 miles south of Gaza and at 9:10 a.m. and again at 10:10 a.m. near Erez and Mefalsim, about 10 miles east of Gaza. In each case Israeli forces returned the fire with rifles and machine guns, he added.

He said the shooting ended at 10:25 a.m.

The army spokesman also reported new outbreaks Friday on the Syrian and Jordanian frontiers. He said several shots were fired from Syrian positions at two Israeli fishing boats on Lake Kinnefer (the Sea of Galilee), forcing them to flee without their nets. The lake lies entirely within Israeli territory, but Israel has only a 10-meter (32.8 foot) strip along the northeast shore.

The shots from Jordanian territory were said to have been fired at Israeli guards at a power station near Jerusalem and at Israeli workers in a banana plantation. No casualties were reported.

By the Associated Press.

An Egyptian spokesman at Gaza charged that the Israelis opened Saturday's shooting at 4 a.m. with automatic weapons fire from the Damra sector northeast of Gaza.

The spokesman said the Israelis opened fire later at El Burej, north of Deir el Ballah.

The exchange lasted four hours, he said.

Meanwhile a mass funeral for 59 Arabs, killed in a heavy cross-shelling Thursday, took place in Gaza. Most of those killed were civilians. Four Israeli soldiers were killed earlier this week in the Gaza area. The Israelis said the Thursday exchange was started by repeated shooting directed at Israeli settlements along the border.

Dispatches from Gaza said the American Southern Baptist mission hospital there was continuing its usual operations despite some slight damage from the Thursday shelling. The Egyptian Red Crescent hospital, however, was reported more seriously damaged. Nine of the victims of the shelling were said to have been women patients of the hospital. One of five nurses wounded at the hospital was reported to be in a serious condition.

Egyptian officials continued to bar foreign correspondents from the Gaza strip. They said they feared outraged Arab refugees would attack the correspondents. The officials said U.N. personnel in the strip was sticking close to U.N. headquarters until the population calmed down.

COUNTY HOUSING LAW URGED AS HEALTH MEASURE

Officials Favor Minimum Standards Ordinance That Will Apply to Old Structures.

The need for enactment of a minimum housing standards ordinance for unincorporated areas of St. Louis county was stressed yesterday by county officials following a survey which listed 11 substandard areas where there is a likelihood of health hazards.

The ordinance would set up minimum requirements for sanitary facilities, floor space, ventilation, lighting and other basic aspects of housing.

"A minimum housing standards ordinance is an absolute necessity," said Councilman L. Gordon Davis, author of a resolution under which the County Council set up a committee in February to study proposed legislation. "Without it it is impossible for the county to eliminate outside toilets or control population density."

Menace to Other Districts.

Hermann F. Wagner, the county's acting planning director, warned that slums are a menace to other districts.

"Substandard areas threaten to spread blight like a rotten apple in a barrel," he declared. "The county needs a minimum standards ordinance to correct bad conditions and prevent their enlargement. There is no problem with regard to new housing; the building code provides standards much higher than the minimums that would be set in a housing ordinance. But legislation is needed to raise the level in old housing."

The committee set up to study this problem is working on a preliminary report which will be presented to the County Council in several weeks, said Dr. Herbert R. Domke, county health commissioner. He is is chairman of the committee, which includes Wagner and Herbert C. Funke, county counselor.

Success achieved by minimum housing standards laws in Baltimore and Milwaukee has been studied by the committee, Dr. Domke reported. The ordinance in St. Louis has been in force only a short time, and has been applied only to the Cherokee and Hyde Park districts.

11 Areas Listed.

The 11 county areas designated as substandard cover 2302 acres and in 1950 had a population aggregating 35,572. These areas were listed as Elmwood Park, Meacham Park, Jefferson Barracks housing project, Kinloch, Lakewood (east of Affton), Times Beach, Webster Heights, Creve Coeur Beach, South Maryland Heights, Fairmount Park in the Ferguson area and North Hill Homesites near Jennings.

Scattered through the county are smaller areas with sanitation difficulties serious enough to warrant special study, Dr. Domke added.

Health studies have been completed and remedial programs have been started in the Elmwood Park and Meacham Park districts, he continued. He explained that the two sections are serving as demonstration areas which will show what can be accomplished through septic tank and general sanitation ordinances recently passed by the County Council.

"It will take several months to find out how effective the health department's corrective program under these ordinances will be," Dr. Domke said. "There will be a vigorous follow-through to clean up health hazards in the two districts."

Further Studies Held Up.

For the time being, studies of other substandard areas will be held up pending the outcome of measures taken in the demonstration areas.

Councilman Davis, who represents the Seventh District, which includes Meacham Park, voiced high praise for the work being done by residents of that area.

The Meacham Park Civic Association has taken the lead, sponsoring a clean-up drive and encouraging full co-operation with the county health department, he reported. Petitions are being circulated for formation of a sewer subdistrict; volunteers have spread cinders to form a base for extension of two streets; efforts are being made to raise funds for purchase of metal culverts to carry creek and drainage water under streets.

In Kinloch, an urban redevelopment program has been started. The Board of Aldermen last month passed an ordinance to establish a redevelopment authority. At the same time the city applied to the Urban Renewal Administration for federal aid. It hopes to qualify for grants totaling $600,000.

A.A.U.P. CENSURES SIX COLLEGES ON FREEDOM ISSUE

Schools Criticized for Dismissal of Professors on Loyalty Grounds.

The American Association of University Professors voted yesterday to censure six universities and colleges for alleged violation of academic freedom in dismissal of faculty members on loyalty grounds.

Institutions censured were the University of Oklahoma, University of California, Ohio State University, Rutgers University, Temple University and Jefferson Medical College.

Action, by voice vote, was unanimous in the Oklahoma, Rutgers and Jefferson cases. There was sharp debate and scattering opposing votes on California, Ohio State and Temple.

Principles Approved.

The association, meeting at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson for its forty-second convention, had adopted Friday, a report of a special committee's setting out important principles in the field of academic freedom. Also, the six institutions had been recommended for censure by the governing body of the association, a 30-member council.

In its censure resolutions on California, Ohio State, Oklahoma and Temple, the association included qualifying clauses to the effect that substantial progress toward academic freedom had been made at those institutions and that therefore it was recommended "that the committee on academic freedom and tenure of the association promptly confer with the administration of the institution in regard to removing the censure as quickly as possible."

California U. Debate

Censure of the California institution was approved after a 40-minute debate in which George R. Stewart, an English professor at the university and an opponent of censure, left the meeting, charging the limit on debate was "gag rule and tyrannous."

A speaker for censure, Quincy Wright, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, told the meeting the California case "was the most serious violation of academic freedom in the history of the country."

The Ohio State University censure, voted after a sharp debate, grew out of dismissal by the university of an associate professor of physics who invoked the First and Fifth Amendments in refusing to answer questions before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Grounds for the firing given by the university were that the teacher lacked "candor and moral integrity," but the censure motion said the essential reason for the firing was his invoking of the Fifth Amendment.

Speaks Against Censure.

Prof. H. Gordon Hullfish, a member of the executive committee of the Ohio State A.A.U.P. chapter, speaking against the censure resolution, asserted that it manifested "no spirit of generosity or fairness."

He said the association was "being urged to turn away from the hard-won procedural gains that have made it the force for good that it has been."

Declaring that the report on the move to censure was based on documents rather than an on-the-spot investigation, Hullfish said: "I don't know how you can get information on a case like this except by going to the place where the information exists."

The Oklahoma censure was based on the dismissal in 1952 of an assistant professor of zoology by the university's board of regents after the board was dissatified with his alleged evasiveness in answering questions about former Communist connections. The matter reached the board in connection with the question of whether the teacher had committed perjury when he took a state loyalty oath disclaiming Communist activity in the previous five years.

Jefferson College Case.

In the Jefferson Medical College case the censure was because of the alleged summary dismissal "without definite charge or explanation," of three faculty members in 1953 because the college was unable to certify that the three were not subversive persons.

Jefferson college receives financial aid from Pennsylvania and the certification was required under the state loyalty act, it was stated.

In the Temple case censure was because of the dismissal of Barrows Dunham, a professor of philosophy, "without due procedural process and unaccompanied by an appraisal of his fitness."

Dunham was suspended in March 1953 and fired the following September because he invoked the Fifth Amendment before the House Un-American Activities Committee. Last October he was acquitted in a federal court of a charge of contempt of Congress, the court holding he was within his rights in invoking the Fifth Amendment.

After the acquittal he applied for reinstatement, but without success, it was said.

"The procedure followed by the university in the handling of his case was "in manifest violation of the principles of academic tenure," the resolution said.

Opposition to censure in the Temple matter was voiced by John B. Roberts, a Temple professor of radio and television, who urged that censure be delayed a year to allow time for an association committee to negotiate with the university administration to obtain the Dunham's reinstatement.

In the Rutgers case, censure was because two professors invoked the Fifth Amendment before a Senate internal security subcommittee in 1952. A five-member faculty committee cleared the teachers but the university board of trustees disagreed and fired them on the ground that any refusal to testify under cover of the Fifth Amendment was sufficient for dismissal.

Malenkov Home With Praise Of Britain, Its History, Women

'Saw Many Things,' He Says, but His 'Dearest Impression' Was Warmth of People's Welcome.

MOSCOW, April 7 (AP)—A beaming Georgi Malenkov, just back from England, gave the highest praise today to Britain, its people and history and pretty women.

The ex-Premier returned from 23 days of handshaking and sight-seeing in that country and declared, "Everyone was wonderful."

"We saw many things, power stations and technical installations, and we enjoyed everything we did, but our dearest impression was the warmth of the welcome the British people gave us everywhere we went," he said.

In answer to a reporter's question, Malenkov, now Minister of Electric Power Stations, said he was sure the British reception for Soviet Premier Bulganin and Communist party leader Nikita Khruschev later this month would be "very, very cordial."

Malenkov returned from London in the new Soviet TU-104 jet airliner, flying the nearly 2000-mile route in just short of four hours.

He bubbled with enthusiasm for the sights he had seen in Britain.

"It's amazing," he said. "Here's a small island with 56 million people in it and every foot of it is steeped with their toil and history.

"It's all so concentrated, it is most impressive. You cannot take a step without being confronted with the industry and history of these wonderful people."

As he alighted he sighted British Ambassador Sir William Hayter and Lady Hayter, swooped down on them, pumped their hands and said in Russian: "It was wonderful."

He broke off to shake hands with Soviet officials and friends clustered around, spotted his wife and daughters, embraced them and invited everybody aboard the plane.

Malenkov joked about press photographs taken of him in England, surrounded by pretty English girls. His wife chipped in: "I'd like to see them."

DR. JOSEPH B. HELLMAN HEADS DENTISTRY ALUMNI

Dr. Joseph B. Hellman of St. Louis was elected president of the St. Louis University School of Dentistry alumni group at an annual reunion yesterday at Hotel Chase. He succeeds Dr. Sam J. Pagano.

Other officers elected for one-year terms were President-elect Dr. Hugh E. O'Keefe; second vice president, Dr. Carl L. Rister, and secretary-treasurer, Dr. Earl C. Bean, all of St. Louis.

Speakers at the day-long session were Dr. John V. Brown and Dr. Meigs Jones, both of Kansas City, and M. Jules King, a public accountant here.

VACATION SERVICE TELLS GIRLS WHERE THE MEN ARE

NEW YORK, April 7 (AP)—Information to young women on where the greatest number of young bachelors are to be found is provided by a new organization, Vacation Clubs, Inc., of New York City.

Mrs. Ann Martin, secretary of the club which specializes in low-cost trips for members, said she had found that the question, "Where will the most men be?" determines a girl's vacation choice, "so we are offering the service."

ALDERMAN E. J. TAYLOR UNDERGOES OPERATION

Alderman Everett J. Taylor, chairman of the Public Utilities Committee, was reported in good condition yesterday at DePaul Hospital after undergoing an operation for lung cancer Friday. He was admitted to the hospital on March 25.

His home is at 5922 Thekla avenue. He is 56 years old.

KEFAUVER SAYS STEVENSON NOW TALKS NONSENSE

Accuses Rival of 'Mudslinging' as He Continues New Jersey Campaign.

LINDEN, N.J., April 7 (UP)—Senator Estes Kefauver bid for New Jersey's 36 Democratic convention votes today with the charge that his record has been distorted by Adlai E. Stevenson's "mudslinging" campaign.

"I don't think it's very good politics to distort someone's record," the Tennessee Democrat told an audience here.

Kefauver, stung by Stevenson's charges he had neglected his senatorial duties to campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, repeated over and over again accusations that "Mr. Stevenson now is talking nonsense."

"I was disappointed to see him resort to mudslinging," Kefauver said. "I will continue to turn the other cheek."

He said, however, that Stevenson was right when he said Kefauver had not voted on important Senate issues in 1948.

"I just happened to remember," Kefauver said, "I wasn't in the Senate in 1948. I was in the House of Representatives.

Kefauver spent the second day of a campaign swing through New Jersey traveling from town to town in a cold, windspent rainstorm.

He said he thought he had strong "grass roots" support in the state and urged voters to cast their ballots for a slate of convention delegates pledged to him, rather than for an unpledged slate.

Kefauver made his first "mudslinging" accusation against Stevenson, his chief rival for the nomination, yesterday. After a night's stay at the Moorestown home of a friend, George Hillman, he repeated the charge.

Kefauver's tour ran behind schedule in several north Jersey communities, but he braved the rain to continue his stumping, handshaking tour of the state.

He criticized the state Democratic party organization for opposing him with a slate of unpledged delegates which he labeled a "proxy" group. The unpledged slate is headed by Gov. Robert B. Meyner, who supported Stevenson in 1952 but has not committed himself for the 1956 campaign.

Kefauver accused the state Democratic leaders of ignoring the "essence of democery" by advocating the unpledged slate.

"You have no assurance that they will cast their ballots according to your way of thinking," he said.

Kefauver is scheduled to meet with Meyner in Trenton tomorrow. When asked if he would seek any support from Meyner, he replied that it would be only a "personal call." He said he thought Meyner had made his decision "clear."

CHARGES STEVENSON HOLDS RECORD FOR ABSENTEEISM

Adlai E. Stevenson apparently set "the all-time record for neglecting his duties" when he was Governor of Illinois, Illinois State Auditor Orville E. Hodge, unopposed Republican candidate for re-election, charged yesterday.

In a speech at Granite City, Hodge attacked Stevenson's statement that Senator Estes Kefauver has neglected his duties by being absent from Senate sessions in Washington while campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Hodge asserted that Stevenson was out of Illinois for more than 50 work weeks during his four-year term as Governor, from 1949 to 1953. He added that the record did not include time Stevenson spent traveling in Illinois "while campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination which 'he didn't want.'"

EDWARD L. DOWD REMOVES SELF AS CANDIDATE

in the 1952 primary in defeating Thomas Dowling, who was supported by the party faction headed by former Sheriff Thomas F. Callanan.

Ran on Record.

With little party support, Dowd ran on his record as an assistant circuit attorney in which he established a reputation as an aggressive, hard-hitting trial lawyer.

In the general election in 1952, he had an easy victory over his Republican opponent in the circuit attorney's race. In St. Louis, Dowd received more votes than Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic presidential candidate.

Recently Dowd's office has been criticized for holding accused persons in jail for "inordinate" periods of time and for confining material witnesses in criminal cases in jail or requiring them to give bonds. These practices were condemned by the Bar Association of St. Louis as violating constitutional rights of individuals involved.

Since taking office as circuit attorney Jan. 1, 1953, Dowd has clashed frequently with circuit judges and police officials. During the police pay-off investigation he became involved in a bitter dispute with Charles F. Ford, grand jury foreman, who finally resigned.

Dowd, now 38 years old, became an assistant circuit attorney March 17, 1947, after resigning from the FBI and practicing law for about one year.

While serving as first assistant to the late James W. Griffin, he was instrumental in getting telephone service discontinued to downtown handbooks.

One of his disagreements with police arose in 1953 over his charge that officers were too slow in presenting evidence to the circuit attorney's office for warrants, causing suspects to be held in jail beyond the statutory 20-hour limit.

His Conflict With Nangle.

His dispute with Circuit Judge James F. Nangle over the judge's right to reduce a charge against a criminal defendant went to the Missouri Supreme Court, which decided in Dowd's favor.

While circuit attorney, Dowd advocated changes in legislation to strengthen the law against carrying concealed weapons and to permit calling special grand juries to conduct major investigations. He also urged more drastic penalties for narcotics violators.

He announced that he favored passage of a state law that would permit wire-tapping under court supervision. He installed in his office a wire recorder connected to a hidden microphone, for use in interviewing persons without their knowledge.

Dowd tackled with vigor the police pay-off investigation, letting assistants handle other phases of office work after the inquiry began last June. The strain of the extensive investigation, which finally resulted in indictments against three police officers, took its toll on Dowd's health. He suffers from severe sinus infections.

A graduate of St. Louis University School of Law, he is married, has six children and lives at 3651 Dover place. His brother is Police Judge Robert G. Dowd. Their father, Edward P. Dowd, is a former police major.

HOODLUM-RUN PINBALL FIRM WORRIES COUNTY

moved last week into a new and larger headquarters in Pine Lawn. It formerly was at 3635 Kienlen avenue, but moved to quarters at 3401 Kienlen which was formerly occupied by a neon light firm. Police said the company paid $25,000 for the white concrete block building which is on a 50 by 80 foot lot.

Mayor Raymond L. Horstdaniel of Pine Lawn told a Post-Dispatch reporter he had been making a study of the situation pertaining to the Anthony Novelty Co. He said the firm had obtained a service business license in the proper way and there was nothing that could be done to force the company to move from Pine Lawn unless it could be proved that it constituted a nuisance. Thus far that situation has not developed.

Missing Partner.

Ralph (Shorty Ralph) Calico, another partner in the novelty company, has been missing since Christmas and there have been reports that he was killed in a gang fued.

However, Chief of Detectives James Chapman has pointed out that Calico faces trial on income tax evasion charges April 16 and might have circulated reports of his own death. Mrs. Mary Balogna Calico told police and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents when they interviewed her in her Shrewsbury home that she did not know what had happened to her husband.

Anthony Novelty was for a number of years at Fifteenth and Olive streets in St. Louis. Police harassment of the officers and salesmen when they tried to use strong-arm methods to increase business resulted in the move to the county, where there is a relatively new and untried police force and the scattered authority of 96 municipalities.

NAMED TO JEWISH BOARD

Milton Greenfield Jr., Irvin Bettman Jr., Herman L. Kaplow and Frederick Goldberg, all of St. Louis, were elected directors on the National Jewish Welfare Board at the organization's national convention in New York, it was announced yesterday.

The Jewish Welfare Board is the agency for providing the religious, welfare and morale needs of Jewish personnel in the United States armed forces and Veterans Administration hospitals, and it is the national association of 350 Jewish community centers and Y.W.-Y.M.H.A. groups.

ELECTION IN CITY THURSDAY ON $1.30 SCHOOL TAX

Simple Majority Needed to Pass Proposal for 15-Cent Increase Over Present Rate.

St. Louisans will vote Thursday on a proposal to fix the city school tax rate at $1.30 for each $100 of assessed valuation, an increase of 15 cents over the present levy.

Polls for the special election will be open in the city's 787 precincts from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. A simple majority of those voting is required for passage.

If the proposal is approved, it will add $2,400,000 to the School Board's annual income for two years, starting July 1. The biggest share of this would be used to help solve the teacher shortage by increasing salaries and hiring more teachers.

Consequences of Failure.

School officials said failure of the proposal to pass would be disastrous because the rate would revert to 89 cents on the $100 valuation, necessitating serious cutbacks in the school system.

Although the Board of Education is seeking only 15 cents more than the $1.15 rate in effect the last three years, voters must pass on a 41-cent proposal. The State Constitution requires voter approval for any part of a levy above 89 cents.

The 15-cent increase would cost the average home owner in St. Louis about 50 cents a month or $6 a year, it was pointed out. At the higher levy, the city's school rate would be considerably lower than any levied in St. Louis county.

Many Indorsements.

Organizations that have indorsed the proposed rate increase the St. Louis Public School Patrons Alliance, St. Louis Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, League of Women Voters of St. Louis, Metropolitan Church Federation, executive committees of the Chamber of Commerce and Junior Chamber of Commerce, St. Louis Industrial Union Council, Building and Construction Trades Council and Central Trades and Labor Union.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker also has indorsed the proposal. He said: "I fervently hope this measure is approved overwhelmingly at the polls."

Directors of the St. Louis Real Estate Board refused to indorse the rate increase.

John J. Dwyer, chairman of the Democratic City Central Committee, and Charles P. McBride, chairman of the Republican City Central Committee, have indorsed the proposed $1.30 school tax rate. Arthur Blumeyer, chairman of the Citizens' School Tax Campaign Committee, announced yesterday.

Other Indorsements.

Other indorsements of the levy have been made by the Bar Association of St. Louis, the Lawyers' Association, the Eighth District Missouri Federated Women's Clubs, Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley of Washington University and the Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert S.J., president of St. Louis University.

A parade of students from all St. Louis public high schools will be held Tuesday in the downtown area, starting at 11:30 a.m. at Washington avenue and Thirteenth street, to remind voters of Thursday's special election.

The League of Women Voters will discuss the school tax on a 30-minute television program on KWK-TV at 1:30 p.m. today.

Three special programs explaining the need for the school tax increase will be telecast by Station KETC, Channel 9, this week. The 30-minute programs will be tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday, all starting at 10 p.m.

MUNICIPAL OPERA SPEAKERS' BUREAU BEING ORGANIZED

Plans of the Municipal Opera's 1956 summer program will be told to St. Louisans by members of a speakers' bureau, which is now being organized, it was announced yesterday.

The bureau will provide a speaker and entertainment for business, social and church groups that request them. The speaker will discuss the forthcoming opera season and the entertainment will feature a musical preview of the summer's productions at the theater in Forest Park.

John H. Lashly, chairman of the bureau, will preside at an organizational bureau meeting at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow at the American Theater. The bureau's program will include the history of Opera, its achievements, backstage workings and plans for the future. Clubs desiring the bureau's service may contact the Municipal Theater Association, 1876 Arcade Building, St. Louis.

8 HOSPITALS IN AREA TO GET FORD CHECKS

First Foundation Payments to Be Given for Expansion at Institutions.

Eight hospitals in the St. Louis area will be among those to receive checks from the Ford Foundation in its first mailing to hospitals participating in its $200,000,000 program to help improve and expand their services, it was announced in New York yesterday by H. Rowan Gaither Jr., president of the foundation.

The mailing will include over 1000 checks, totaling $37,748,800, to hospitals in all 48 states, the District of Columbia, the territories of Alaska and Hawaii and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Gaither said.

Hospitals in the Greater St. Louis area and the amounts they will receive are: St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, $80,550; Alexian Brothers, $43,950; Barnes Hospital, $125,000; Christian Hospital of St. Louis, $34,550; De Paul Hospital, $87,500; Missouri Baptist Hospital, $104,450; St. Luke's Hospital, $55,900, and St. Mary's Infirmary, $36,150.

Gaither said the checks are the first payments of $500,000,000 in grants voted last Dec. 12 by the foundation's trustees. At that time the trustees allocated $200,000,000 to hospitals, $210,000,000 to private colleges and universities to help raise teachers' salaries, and $90,000,000 to medical schools to strengthen instruction.

The foundation's hospital program will give grants to the approximately 3500 voluntary, nonprofit hospitals which are dependent on private support. Requests are now being processed by the foundation and checks will be mailed for one-half of the amount of the grant as they are approved, with the remainder to be paid in March 1957.

By the end of July of this year, all of the participating hospitals will have received payment of the first half of their grants, Gaither said. The amount of each grant has been determined, in each case, on the basis of patient days of service and the number of births in each hospital.

"The help which the foundation is able to give meets only a fraction of the urgent needs of our private hospitals," Gaither said. "We hope that an important effect of the grants will be to encourage the citizens of every local community to give greater support to the hospitals which serve them. The strengthening of our hospitals contributes to the conservation of America's most valuable asset—our human resources.

$21,000 COLLECTED SO FAR IN CANCER CAMPAIGN HERE

A total of $21,000 has been raised in the American Cancer Society's 1956 educational and fund raising campaign in St. Louis and St. Louis county, L. John Gable, campaign chairman, announced yesterday.

House-to-house solicitations are being made in some areas of the county, Gable said, and on April 18 from 5 to 8 p.m. a city-wide house-to-house solicitation will be made. The campaign will continue through April, which has been designated as Cancer Control month by an act of Congress.

The results of the campaign, which started last Monday, have been "highly encouraging," Gable said. "If we can continue our present pace, we will raise considerably more than last year."

Complete Home Air Conditioning ... at Your Fingertips

Keep your home at the cool, comfortable temperature you want it this summer the easy way with a Homart Central Air Conditioning Unit.

Homart All-Purpose 3-Ton Add-On-Type Central Air Conditioning Unit

A 3-Ton Air Conditioning Unit is the Size Needed for Complete Air Conditioning in Most Homes

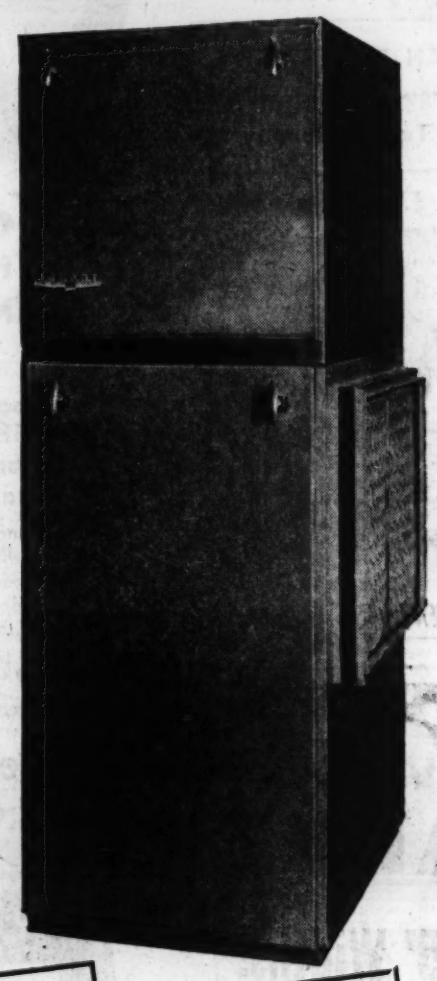
• 3-Ton, 36,000 BTU, Single Phase
• Complete Unit with Blower and Controls

$660 Installation Extra*

America's most compact and versatile cooling system . . . designed for converting present forced-air heating system to a complete year 'round air-conditioning system in basement or utility room. This unit and blower is housed in beautiful jacket 22½ inches wide, 29 inches deep and 63 inches high. It's the same top quality as you always can expect from Sears.

The blowers found in most warm-air furnaces do not have the capacity to handle cold air from an air-conditioning system. Sears Homart air-conditioning systems are equipped with powerful blowers, designed for use with central air-conditioning systems. Compact in size, but a giant for cooling. Outperforms about 4 one-ton window type air conditioners in cooling capacity—actual listed capacity 36,000 BTU's. Homart air-conditioner also cleans, filters and dehumidifies the air.

Installation can be arranged with direct water hook-up, or with water saving device, such as domestic water tower. Both material and labor can be financed on FHA.



*COMPLETE SURVEY NECESSARY
Call your nearest Sears store for FREE survey of installation costs. In order to assure you complete satisfaction with a CORRECTLY SIZED AIR-CONDITIONING UNIT in your home, all purchases are contingent upon a complete survey of your air-conditioning needs by Sears Sales Engineers. (No obligation, of course!)

NO DOWN PAYMENT
You can have your new Homart Air-Conditioning System installed in your home with NO MONEY DOWN! Up to 36 months to pay on FHA. Sears will arrange all the details when you visit your nearest Sears store or we call at your home.

POLICE CIRCUS OPENS APRIL 27 AT ARENA

Show Will Run Through May 6, Feature Former Zoo Trainers' Acts.

First performance of the 1956 Police Circus will be Friday, April 27, at 2 p.m., in the Arena, it was announced yesterday by Capt. Troy Ferber, president of the St. Louis Police Relief Association. The show will continue through Sunday, May 6.

Among the numerous animal acts are two that feature former trainers at the St. Louis Zoo. Jules Jacot, for many years the top lion tamer at the zoo, will present a two-cage wild animal act, and Al Antonucci, former zoo chimpanzee trainer, will put his troupe of trained chimpanzees through their tricks.

Along with a group of precision trained camels, there will be the usual elephants but the large animals will be presented in bright colors that produce striking effects when viewed under "black light," Lt. Frank Mateker, chairman of the acts committee, said.

Happy Kellems, one of the world's great clowns, heads a large list of funmakers. There will also be high wire and high pole acts plus a finale act that has not yet been signed, Lt. Matewer said.

Performances will be given nightly at 8 o'clock with the exception of Sundays when evening shows will start at 6:30 o'clock. Matinees will be given at 2 o'clock on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays.

General admission for adults is 75 cents and children 40 cents. Reserved seats are 80 cents and box seats $1. Reserved and box seats must be purchased in addition to general admission. Tickets are available from any police officer or at the Arena or Arcade Building ticket offices.

TRANSIT SURVEY ISSUE GOING TO HIGHWAY BOARD

City and county officials and members of the Citizens Metropolitan Transit Committee will meet Tuesday at Jefferson City with the Missouri State Highway Commission to seek aid in a proposed survey of mass transportation needs for the area.

A proposal to make a complete study of the transportation problems for $490,000 has been made by a group of engineering firms headed by the W. C. Gilman & Co. of New York. This proposal included $210,000 for a study of travel patterns and habits. It is this part of the study the State Highway Commission will be asked to finance.

The remaining portions of the study would be financed jointly by the city and the county. These would include surveys of land use and population; existing transit service and facilities; feasibility of rapid transit, and ownership, operation and financing.

The committee has said that the survey is needed to "provide the community with a blueprint for meeting the transportation problems which have plagued the area for many years."

NEW ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY DEDICATED IN FRONTENAC

Dedication ceremonies for the new St. Joseph's Academy were held yesterday at the school's new site, 2301 South Lindbergh boulevard, Frontenac, with the Rev. Francis J. O'Reilly S. J., St. Louis University vice president of development, as principal speaker.

Others taking part were Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis; Dr. Douglas A. Ries, president of the academy's fathers' club, who served as master of ceremonies; the Rev. Valentine B. Braun S.M., pastor of Our Lady of the Pillar Church, Clayton; the Rev. James T. Curtin, superintendent of archdiocesan secondary schools, and George M. Chaffee, mayor of Frontenac.

With accommodations for 500 students, the school has a current enrollment of 400. The faculty consists of 17 sisters of St. Joseph and two lay teachers. Since 1925, the academy has been on the Fontbonne College campus, Clayton. From 1841 to 1925 the site was 6400 Minnesota avenue.

LAMBERT FIELD PROGRESS OUTLINED BY BRISCOE

Improvements completed at Lambert-St. Louis Field since 1950 were outlined by Director of Public Utilities Conway B. Briscoe at a dinner ending the annual meeting of the Missouri-Arkansas section of the American Society for Engineering Education last night. The meeting was in the gymnasium of St. Louis University.

Briscoe said that, in addition to the new administration building, the airport program included construction of two additional runways, a new control tower, hangar facilities for airlines and taxiways and parking aprons. In addition, he said, operation of the airport has been seperated from other city functions, the McDonnell plant sold and the proceeds earmarked for airport use, and more authority given to the Municipal Airport Commission.

Future plans include better protection of runway approach zones, extension of the instrument runway and efforts to obtain better airline service for the city, he said.

CHRISTIAN HOSPITAL GRANTED $381,102

Funds Under Hill-Burton Act to Go Into Expansion Program.

Christian Hospital has received a $381,102 federal assistance fund grant under terms of the Hill-Burton Act, Dr. Harry A. Klein, president of the hospital's staff, announced yesterday.

Dr. Klein said the grant will be applied to a proposed $1,000,000 hospital expansion project. He said the project will include addition of another wing with a considerable portion of the new beds being allotted to chronic patients.

The project also will provide for construction of a modern operating room facilities, emergency room accommodations and enlargement of the X-ray and laboratory departments, Dr. Klein said.

Christian Hospital, 4411 North Newstead avenue, presently has 135 beds. The new wing will increase the capacity by 66 beds with 50 for chronic patients, he said.

The Hill-Burton construction and survey act was first passed in 1946 to provide federal funds, on a matching basis, for construction of non-profit hospitals and health centers by non-profit organizations and state or local governments.

TWO FIREMEN OVERCOME, ONE OF THEM IS INJURED

Two firemen were overcome by smoke and one of them, Fireman Edward Haltiner, Engine Co. 14, was seriously injured in falling downstairs, when fighting a fire in an apartment at 4268A Castleman avenue early yesterday.

The blaze, apparently starting from defective wiring, forced the occupants, Carl Parrott and his family, out of the apartment before firemen arrived.

Haltiner suffered a fractured right hip and was taken to City Hospital. He is 60 years old and lives at 4109 Shaw boulevard.

A second fireman, Aldo Farina of Engine Co. 29, was overcome by smoke but was revived at the scene. The fire caused damage estimated at $3500 to the building and $1500 to contents.

FIRE LOSS PUT AT $5500 TO 2 BUSINESSES ON PINE

Fire caused damage estimated at $5500 last night to two businesses occupying a two-story building at 708-10 Pine street, two doors east of the Mark Twain Hotel.

Most of the damage was done to Band Box Cleaners at 708 Pine, Fire Chief Hugh Lyon reported. Service Blueprint Photo Copy Co., 710 Pine, which also occupies space above the cleaning establishment, was less seriously damaged.

Chief Lyon said the cause of the fire could not be determined. It apparently started in the area in the cleaning firm where clothing was hung, he said. Two alarms were sounded. Traffic on Pine was temporarily blocked.

FIRE DESTROYS RESIDENCE

Fire destroyed the one-story frame home of William J. Day, 270 Buddie drive, south of Florissant early yesterday. Damage was estimated by firemen at about $7500 to the building and $3000 to contents.

Mr. and Mrs. Day, who have six children, were away from home.

FRONTIER TRIBE'S GUERRILLA WAR WORRYING INDIA

NEW DELHI, April 7 (AP)—Guerrilla warfare appeared to be raging today in a great area of Assam, India's northeast frontier state bordering China and Burma. Indian troops are pouring into the area.

Worried officials admitted that unless there was a quick change for the better India might find subjection of the hostile Naga tribesmen — who seek independence from New Delhi—as difficult as the British task of hunting down the Communist insurgents in Malaya.

There is much similarity between the two cases, though as yet there has been no indication of Communist or other direct foreign influence in the uprising of Naga tribesmen.

Reports from Shillong, Assam's capital city, described the abduction of seven Naga village headmen who were loyal to the Indian government and the subsequent discovery of four of their headless bodies. Other reports said two overseers of the state public works department were missing and believed to have been killed by the hostile Nagas.

LAFAYETTE GROUP TO MEET ON IMPROVEMENT PLAN

Discussion of the proposed study of the Lafayette Urban Renewal Area will be undertaken at a meeting next Wednesday of the South Twelfth Street District Improvement Association, it was announced yesterday.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at St. John Nepomuk Hall, Eleventh street and Lafayette avenue. Officials of the Land Clearance for Urban Redevelopment Authority have been invited to participate.

The area proposed for study is bounded roughly by Chouteau avenue, Dorcas street, Seventh street and Mississippi avenue.

Tree Falls, Kills Two Women.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 7 (AP)—A dead tree fell yesterday in a gust of wind and killed two women hanging out clothes. The women were Mrs. Ruth Wilson and Mrs. Lola Lee Freeman, who lived in an apartment near Piedmont Park.

BIOLOGICAL WARFARE HELD A POSSIBILITY

U. S. Bacteriologist Says Here It Is Ready Weapon for Saboteurs.

Biological warfare is both feasible and practical as a weapon in any future conflict, and the possibility that it will be used must be faced without panic, Dr. Donald S. Martin of the United States Public Health Service said yesterday at St. Louis University School of Medicine.

Dr. Martin, chief of the bacteriology section of the Communicable Disease Center at Chamblee, Ga., addressed a regional meeting of the College of American Pathologists and affiliated groups. The meeting ends today.

"It must be remembered," Dr. Martin said, "that biological warfare agents are cheap and easy to make, and almost an ideal weapon for a saboteur. . . . Our food industries have very few protective setups or guards to prevent sabotage of this type."

He said the most likely form of attack would be an attempt to infect a large number of people with an ailment, either by sabotage of a key industry or group, or by use of an aerosol cloud over a city.

The civil defense course in biological warfare at Chamblee includes familiarization studies of bacteria that produce undulant fever, rabbit fever, a type of glanders-like ailment, plague and cholera, the audience of physicians and medical technicians was told.

Dr. Martin said students of biological warfare formerly believed that certain types of germs were unlikely to be employed against this country, because the diseases they produced could not spread in a nation that had high sanitation standards.

Thinking Changed.

That kind of thinking changed with the advent of nuclear weapons, he said. The reason for the change was realization that nuclear weapons would cause widespread disruption of sewage and water systems, and otherwise nullify sanitation measures.

Experiments with mice have indicated, Dr. Martin said, that an ounce of crystalized botulism toxin could kill 224,000,000 persons. Introducing the toxin into a public water supply would be no difficult matter, it was pointed out.

Dr. Martin said an enemy might avoid use of nuclear weapons in order not to destroy factories, but choose instead to use biological warfare, with the objective either of killing the population or rendering it incapable of resistance.

Publicity Can Be Bad.

Too much publicity about biological warfare must be guarded against, the health official said, because a jittery citizenry might construe an ordinary epidemic as an attack. He emphasized that there had thus far been no cases in which use of bacterial weapons had been authenticated.

"We are living in very strange times," he said, "but let's keep our wits about us."

Another speaker, Col. Carl S. Tessmer, head of the radiation pathology section of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, Washington, discussed the type of cases physicians might expected to encounter after attack by nuclear weapons. He displayed pictures and other data concerning Japanese and Marshall Islands victims of radiation damage.

Dr. B. C. Portuondo of St. Louis, president of the Missouri Society of Patrologists, presided. A final session this morning will deal with blood banks.

Book Overdue 93 Years.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., April 7 (UP)—A book borrowed from the Willard Library was returned yesterday. It was 93 years overdue. Library officers said a librarian lent the book, a James Fennimore Cooper novel, to a reader in 1863. They said they found it in an outdoor book drop.

AIR TACTICS SAID TO BE TESTED BY LIMITED WAR

General Tells National Guard He Favors Keeping Bulk of Force in Reserve.

Limited war has assumed new significance in the struggle between Communism and the free world and presents a challenge to air warfare planners, Brig. Gen. William W. Momyer, a wing commander of the Ninth Tactical Air Force, told members of the National Guard Association of Missouri at Hotel Chase yesterday.

Defines Limited War.

Gen. Momyer, stationed at Clovis Air Force Base, New Mexico, defined a limited war as "action which satisfies immediate national policy without undue risk."

"It appears that this character of war has taken on new significance in the struggle between Communism and our concept of society," the speaker said. "To meet this challenge there are two basic approaches. A nation can dispose its air force to all the smoldering areas of the world, or it can send part of its force to troubled areas and maintain the preponderance of its air strength in strategic reserve.

"The tactics of the Communists, I think you will agree, are designed to spread us so thin that we are vulnerable at any point they choose to attack. The second course of action, under which tactical air forces are deployed to areas that must be retained while the Strategic Air Force remains as a deterrent to a general war, seems to have greater strategic value."

Greatest Threat.

The willingness of Communist nations to accept tremendous casualties in order to attain a military objective poses the greatest threat that has ever confronted the United States, Lt. Gen. William H. Arnold, Fifth Army Commander, declared.

Gen. Arnold, commander of United States Forces in Austria, before taking command of the Fifth Army at Chicago last year, said Russian officers have a stock answer to questions about their obvious willingness to sacrifice their troops to reach a specific objective. Their answer is, Gen. Arnold related, "It doesn't matter, we are many."

"This threat is real and because of it we must have a balanced strength ready to meet any situation," he said.

Threat From Russia.

Lt. Gen. Charles T. Myers, commander of the Air Training Command at Scott Air Force Base, said Russia is capable of launching an aerial attack of tremendous intensity on the United States.

The Soviet possession of aircraft and nuclear weapons "makes us vulnerable to attack right here in St. Louis," he said. "From a military standpoint the real threat and the only direct threat to the United States is an air attack by hostile forces using nuclear weapons. This we must guard against at all costs. Manned aircraft capable of intercepting hostile aircraft and destroying them are our best means of defense."

Another speaker, Maj. Gen. Frank O. Bowman, commanding general of the Sixth Armored Division at Fort Leonard Wood, said the fact that the post had been declared a permanent one by the Defense Department would be a boon to Missouri and permit business men to make improvements near the reservation.

Maj. Gen. Ralph E. Truman (retired), cousin of former President Truman, was another speaker. "When we have a strong National Guard, we have a strong army," he asserted.

Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, deputy chief, Air Division of the National Guard Bureau, said he was pleased that National Guard units are now getting first line equipment direct from manufacturers instead of equipment that has had prior use in one of the services.

Brig. Gen. Royal Hatch Jr., deputy commander for National Guard Affairs, Continental Air Command, praised the Missouri National Guard for rapid adaptation to new procedures and methods.

Col. Leslie J. Staub, commanding officer, Central Anti-Aircraft Regional Command, described Nike, the new country's defensive weapon, as an anti-aircraft missile of "amazing powers."

The conference will close today with the annual election of officers. The Missouri Association has 1000 members.

Yesterday's sessions were attended by more than 600 Missouri National Guardsmen, representing both ground and air forces. The current meeting is the organization's ninth annual conference.

HOME RAIDED, BET TABS SEIZED; MAN ARRESTED

The police gambling squad yesterday raided a residence at 1414 Morrison lane and arrested a man who identified himself as Manuel Missler, a Post-Dispatch printer, living in the 5800 block of Maffit avenue.

Scratch sheets and betting pads, indicating Missler was operating a handbook, were seized as evidence. While officers were in the apartment several persons called up to place bets on horse races.

Lt. John Bloecher, head of the squad, reported Missler said he had been accepting small bets from friends and relaying them to a bookie in East St. Louis. Missler was booked suspected of setting up and keeping a gambling house.

WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS SOUGHT FOR EX-MARINE

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus to free Gilman E. Day, who faces a year in the St. Louis county jail and a $500 fine for careless and reckless driving, was filed in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday. A hearing is scheduled for tomorrow at 10:30 in the court of Judge Michael J. Carroll.

Day, who has just completed a three-year enlistment in the Marine Corps, was the driver of an automobile which struck and killed Mrs. Myrtle T. Hadnot on Natural Bridge road Monday night. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accident, but in view of evidence the driver was speeding and had been drinking, Magistrate Raymond I. Harris refused to accept the verdict.

Appearing in court without a lawyer, Day pleaded guilty and was sentenced Thursday. Attorney Charles M. Shaw, who filed the habeas corpus petition, contended that Day had been deprived of his constitutional rights, citing a Missouri Supreme Court rule requiring that a defendant be given time to consult an attorney and a friend.

CIVIC MUSIC LEAGUE OPENS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE TODAY

The Civic Music League of St. Louis will open its thirty-third annual membership campaign at a dinner for about 250 workers at 5:30 p.m. today at the Kingsway Hotel. The campaign will continue through April 23.

Roy Williams of New York, midwestern director of Civic Concert Service, Inc., will speak. Williams formerly was on the faculty at the Julliard School of Music, New York, and Chicago Musical College.

For the first time, the 1956-57 series will have six concerts instead of five. All seats will be reserved and no tickets will be sold next year for individual performances. Clifford E. Drezda Jr. is chairman of the membership campaign.

DEAN SCHWITALLA PORTRAIT IS UNVEILED AT ST. LOUIS U.

A portrait of the Rev. Alphonse M. Schwitalla, S.J., dean emeritus of St. Louis University School of Medicine, was unveiled yesterday on the second floor of the school, 1402 South Grand boulevard.

Following the unveiling, Father Schwitalla was honored by friends and associates at a reception. Last night he attended a dinner in his honor at the home of Dr. and Mrs. James W. Colbert Jr., 6211 McPherson avenue. Dr. Colbert is dean of the medical school. The portrait was painted by Kurt J. Budabin of New York.

The annual Alphonse M. Schwitalla lecture, sponsored by the university's chapter of Alpha Omega Alpha, will be presented by Dr. Gideon S. Dodds, professor emeritus of anatomy at West Virginia University, at 5 p.m. Thursday at the Medical School here. Father Schwitalla was dean of the Medical School from 1927 until 1948.

LIGHT FOR EMERGENCY RUNS TO BE SHOWN COUNTY CHIEFS

Chiefs of police and other law enforcement officials of all county communities have been invited to attend a St. Louis police department demonstration tomorrow of an electronic control device to turn electric traffic signals red to stop traffic for emergency vehicles.

The county officials will meet at 9:30 a.m. at the Civil Courts Building at Twelfth boulevard and Market street, where the demonstration will take place. Mayor Sterling P. Davidson Jr., of Maplewood, president of the St. Louis County League, of Municipalities, will be in charge.

The electronic device was tested by city police last month. Director of Public Safety Joseph P. Sestric said, after the test, that it would be of great help in reducing accidents involving fire engines, police cars, ambulances or other emergency vehicles.

STEVENSON SAYS ADMINISTRATION OPPOSES UNIONS

America—all of us," he asserted.

He said that the pending farm bill "is not yet law."

"Up to two weeks ago," Stevenson said, "the Republicans countered every Democratic proposal with the threat of a presidential veto. They pointed out that the President has been opposed for three years to what this bill does.

"But then came the Minnesota primary, and the Democratic vote was two to one over the Republican vote. On Tuesday of this week we saw another heavy Democratic farm vote in Wisconsin.

"And on the very next day, Wednesday, suddenly the President indicated strongly that he might approve the bill."

Stevenson said that "what caused the President to change his mind was the Democratic farm protest in Minnesota and Wisconsin."

"The President still says, though, that he is uncertain," Stevenson said.

"Well, I predict he won't be uncertain if Illinois adds its voice to those of Minnesota and Wisconsin; if the vote in our Illinois Democratic primary next Tuesday says plainly that we here think too—all of us, in the cities and towns as well as on the farms—that it's high time that the farmers start getting a fair break again."

As he said in Jacksonville, Fla., on the racial integration issue, Stevenson told the predominantly labor audience that "whether you agree with the Supreme Court decision or not, it is the law of the land and I would only ask that law-abiding citizens comply with it in a lawful manner and as the courts find reasonable and feasible."

Declaring that tensions were mounting sharply in this country and all over the world, Stevenson said these were hard and dangerous times in which the choice of a President for the next four years had to be made.

As to his own candidacy for that office, he said: "I view this undertaking with humility, sobriety and with a profound concern for the welfare of our country in this time of acute trial."

Taking a leaf from the page of his rival, Stevenson cut short his prepared speech in order to have time for some handshaking before leaving to catch a plane back to Chicago.

An estimated 400 persons taxed the limited facilities of the hall, many of them standing throughout the speech.

At a press conference preceding the meeting, Stevenson said he would not be the least concerned if Senator Estes Kefauver received a write-in vote of 10 per cent, which, he said, he had been told was possible. He said he understood Kefauver letters had gone to all county chairmen and that there had been some telephone campaigning.

Stevenson said that charges of mudslinging and bossism by his rival, Senator Kefauver, would divide and injure the Democratic party.

On arriving shortly after 4 p.m. by train, the former Illinois Governor issued a statement in which he said he had not attacked Senator Kefauver's voting record but had merely disclosed "a portion of his non-voting record." This apparently was a reply to Kefauver's charge in Linden, N.J., that Stevenson was "distorting" his record.

"I said in Jacksonville (Fla.) yesterday (Friday) that there may be such a thing as wanting to be President too badly and neglecting first responsibilities," Stevenson's statement continued.

"I am surprised that Senator Kefauver would charge me with 'mudslinging' when I suggest that this absenteeism may partially explain why his candidacy is supported by none of his Senate colleagues and so few party leaders. When some of them prefer me and he charges them with 'bossism' I do not assail Senator Kefauver with 'mudslinging.'

"I repeat that I had hoped that we could conduct this primary contest with dignity and without injury to party unity. I still hope so but charges of 'bossism and mudslinging' not only will injure but they also will divide."

Stevenson is the only Democratic candidate on the Illinois presidential preference ballot in Tuesday's primary. However, in several speeches he has termed the primary "important" and has urged a heavy turnout of voters.

Stengel, who is seeking the Senate seat of Everett Dirksen, said it would take hard work and the efforts of the working man, the farmer, the consumer and all progressive and thoughful people to assure a Democratic victory in November.

He said he was seeking the support of the Illinois farmer who "has been Bensonized to a frazzle"; of labor; of those who advocate development and use of natural resources which have been "McKayed too long"; of small business "which has been Wilsonized"; of those who believe in a sound national defense, adequate education, adequate programs of Social Security, mental health, hospitalization and fair tax policies.

Before entraining at Chicago for Alton, Stevenson announced he was entering a writ-in contest with Kefauver for Oregon's 16-vote Democratic convention delegation.

"I am delighted that my supporters in Oregon have decided to organize a write-in campaign," he said. "I intend to take my campaign into Oregon."

The Oregon primary will be a write-in affair because no presidential candidates had been entered prior to the filing deadline last March 9. The election will be May 18 and Stevenson indicated he probably would be compelled to curtail his California campaign in order to make a swing through Oregon.

SPRING DELIGHTFUL IN MIAMI BEACH

Weather Ideal, Salt Water Fishing Superb, and Cost Reasonable.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—This is the time of year when hotels are cheaper at Miami Beach, when the famous weather outdoes itself in exemplary behavior and when the inland-America resident can treat himself to some of the finest salt water fishing extant.

April, May and June are favorite months also for honeymooners, who find in Miami Beach an unexcelled atmosphere of luxury and quiet, made more comfortable and attractive by the very reasonable costs. A room for two will average $10 a day in April, even less in May and June. The finest, in May and June, will run not more than $12 to $15, and nice lodgings may be obtained for as little as $25 a week, double.

In the oceanfront hotels, of which there are more than 100, guests have pool, private beach and cabana club in which to enjoy their leisure hours. In the less expensive hotels not right on the ocean the palm shaded beaches are but a block or two away. Bathers usually walk to these with a beach robe over their swimsuits.

Built on 30 Islands.

Anywhere in Miami Beach (which is built on 30-odd islands with a land area of about nine square miles), the visitor is within a few minutes of swimming, golf courses, restaurants, night clubs, shops, theaters, banks and brokerage houses. There also are tennis courts and community centers, the latter welcoming vacationers to daily and evening programs of varied activities at little or no cost.

As a community that entertains more than 1,000,000 vacationers every year, it is to be expected that Miami Beach is well provided to meet every need of visitors. Automobiles may be rented by the day or week, taxis are numerous, buses serve every section of the city and sightseeing may be done by bus, boat or limousine.

Interesting Surroundings.

Several interesting areas are within an hour's drive of Miami Beach, including the Everglades National park with its unique bird life, commercial attractions featuring birds, fish, animals and tropical plants, and the tropical fruit growing area southward on the mainland where crops include citrus, avocados, papayas and mangoes.

Fishing in nearby waters holds a special appeal for the angler usually limited to inland lakes and streams. The jolting power of a wahoo, the aerial displays of the tarpon and sailfish, measured in feet and pounds, not inches and ounces, will awe the fisherman familiar only with trout or bass. And for light tackle fishing the snook, channel bass and bonefish, all different in their methods of battle, have all the gameness and much more authority than the usual, small fresh water quarry.

Boats may be chartered in Miami Beach, with crew and tackle, for sailfish, tarpon, marlin, wahoo and dolphin expeditions in the blue waters "outside." Inside, in the bays and inlets, the plug caster, spinner and fly caster may use outboards in pursuit of species usually taken on light tackle.

YOUTH JAMBOREE ON APRIL 11-14 AT ASHEVILLE

Asheville, N. C. has long been known for its Mountain Folk Festival, and the Mountain Youth Jamboree, barely eight years old, is well on its way to the same sort of fame.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce of Asheville sponsors the latter event, to be held on April 11-14 this year. This is the youngsters' night to strut their stuff in the mountains of North Carolina, and strut they do to the tunes of music hundreds of years old.

The children dress in authentic costumes depicting the period of the pioneer or the region where the folk song originated.

The youngsters have the same respect and love for the folk tunes as did their parents, and are anxious to carry on the picturesque traditions for which the whole area is famous.

Important Industry in Peru

—Braniff International Airways.

Wool spinning is an important industry in the crisp air of Peru. A Peruvian native, wrapped in her many warm and colorful skirts, works away at a bright rug which some North American tourist may purchase for a few soles. Formulas for the bright dyes used in the Peruvian fabrics are closely guarded family secrets, handed down from generation to generation.

PREVIEW OF COMING SEASON IN KENTUCKY

The 1956 Kentucky Calendar of Events indicates an interesting year in the Bluegrass State.

During April, visitors may see such Kentucky events as a Mountain Folk Festival at Berea College, the opening of the exciting spring race meet at Churchill Downs, Louisville, and at Keeneland Race Course.

In May, the famous Kentucky Derby will again be run at historic Churchill Downs, Louisville; square dance enthusiasts will demonstrate their ability and fancy steps at the annual festival held in Hawsville. The Open House tour of Kentucky's lovellest homes and gardens, both old and new, will be held at Mt. Sterling, Versailles, Frankfort, Lexington, and Louisville.

May also marks the Centennial of Morehead, where a gigantic celebration is being planned, and visitors may also visit the traditional Big Sing at Benton, and the now famous and beautiful Mountain Laurel Festival, held at Pine Mountain State Park, Pineville. Kentucky's most attractive college women compete for the Queen's title to reign over the three-day event, coinciding with the first blooms of the mountain laurel for which the state's eastern region is well-known.

June offers such varied attractions as the Governor's Cup Regatta held on Kentucky Lake, the largest man-made body of water in the world, the American Folk Song Festival which keeps alive the haunting Elizabethean mountain ballads, the annual North-South basketball game, pitting the nation's outstanding high school cagers clashing at Murray, and the second season of Wilderness Road, a play held at Berea College, which many persons compare with the annual production, "Unto These Hills," staged in North Carolina.

One of the country's top horse shows will be staged at Lexington in July, sponsored by the Junior League. That month also marks the 100-year celebration to be staged at Paducah, and the Laurel County Homecoming at Levi Jackson State Park, near London.

Visitors are welcome at all events and information may be obtained from the Kentucky Division of Publicity at Frankfort, Ky.

A SECTION OF ENGLAND RECALLS AMERICAN HISTORY

Americans touring wooded valleys in England's rolling Chiltern Hills are coming face to face with their own history. It was here in the village of Jordans, one of the most beautiful settlements in England, that William Penn married, lived and was buried. Old Jordans' barn, once a Quaker meeting house, is believed to be built with timbers from The Mayflower.

This burial place of Pennsylvania's founder is only 24 miles from London. During the summer a music festival featuring international artists is held in Old Jordans' barn. Nearby is the town of Chalfont St. Giles, where tourists can visit the poet Milton's cottage.

An illustrated booklet describing this area may be obtained from The British Travel Association, 336 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

OPENING DATE FOR SECTION OF BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY

April 15th is the date for the opening of the Blue Ridge Parkway between Oteen, N. C. and Mount Mitchell. The Wagon Road Gap section will also open on April 15. The Parkway has been closed for the winter.

The Park Service Rangers are preparing for the largest season the highway has ever had. Last year over 4,500,000 visitors drove over the Parkway, which links Shenandoah National Park and Asheville, N. C.

SPAIN'S FIESTAS

Fiesta time is any time in Spain.

Nothing seems to be more typical of the Spanish, nor more fascinating to North American visitors, than the traditional observances of the country's old and established "fiestas." During the first half of 1956, Spain will celebrate more than 150 local fairs and festivals, at least a dozen of which will be of national importance.

LIST OF EVENTS FOR NEW ORLEANS SPRING FIESTA

Following is a summary of some of the events to be held during the annual Spring Fiesta in New Orleans:

FABULOUS BLUEGRASS

The fabulous bluegrass area is one of the most heavily visited sections in Kentucky. The region is composed of several counties with the city of Lexington considered as the "heart" of the bluegrass.

Here are bred and trained the turf greats and leading show horses of the nation. Throughout the bluegrass one sees large colonial mansions, immaculate barns, acre upon acre of rolling fields, miles of white fencing, and spirited yearlings.

Old Jordans' barn, once a Quaker meeting house, is believed to be built with timbers from The Mayflower.

This burial place of Pennsylvania's founder is only 24 miles from London. During the summer a music festival featuring international artists is held in Old Jordans' barn. Nearby is the town of Chalfont St. Giles, where tourists can visit the poet Milton's cottage.

An illustrated booklet describing this area may be obtained from The British Travel Association, 336 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

OPENING DATE FOR SECTION OF BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY

April 15th is the date for the opening of the Blue Ridge Parkway between Oteen, N. C. and Mount Mitchell. The Wagon Road Gap section will also open on April 15. The Parkway has been closed for the winter.

The Park Service Rangers are preparing for the largest season the highway has ever had. Last year over 4,500,000 visitors drove over the Parkway, which links Shenandoah National Park and Asheville, N. C.

SPAIN'S FIESTAS

Fiesta time is any time in Spain.

Nothing seems to be more typical of the Spanish, nor more fascinating to North American visitors, than the traditional observances of the country's old and established "fiestas." During the first half of 1956, Spain will celebrate more than 150 local fairs and festivals, at least a dozen of which will be of national importance.

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS EASED FOR TRAVELERS TO BRAZIL

Entry requirements for pleasure travelers to Brazil have now been eased for citizens of all Western Hemisphere republics and Canada.

Instead of a visa, a complimentary tourist card may now be obtained by citizens, native born or naturalized, of the 20 American republics and Canada, according to Pan American World Airways.

Transportation companies issue the cards which are good for a visit of 30 days and renewable for another 30 days. Two front view photographs with a white background are required. Children under 18 years of age may be included in the cards of their parents or guardians.

Brazil still requires pleasure visitors to possess a valid passport, a smallpox vaccination certificate and a ticket for onward passage.

Braniff Airways, Inc. have announced that other Latin American countries on that airline's routes which no longer require a visa for United States tourists include Cuba, Panama, Ecuador, Bolivia and Argentina.

Ouachita Forest.

The oldest national forest area in America and the Southwest's largest is the Ouachita National Forest in Arkansas which contains 1,300,000 acres lying in seven counties.

EAST SIDE VOTES TUESDAY; BOSSES DO BULK OF WORK

Competition Eliminated for All but a Few St. Clair and Madison Posts.

Voters in St. Clair and Madison counties will ballot Tuesday on candidates for major state and county offices in primary elections offering little in the way of choice. Party slatemakers have eliminated competition for all but a few posts.

Principal interest is on two Democratic races in Madison county, where Dick H. Mudge, Jr., candidate for nomination as State's Attorney, and Dr. W. W. Billings, running for Coroner, are waging an uphill fight against the firmly-entrenched machine bossed by Sheriff Kenneth T. Ogle and his lieutenant, retiring State's Attorney Fred P. Schuman.

Both candidates, promising strict law enforcement, are striving to get out independent voters to overcome the advantages of their machine-backed opponents.

Heavy Majorities.

Nomination on the Democratic ticket is regarded by political observers as assurance of election Nov. 6 in the two counties, which have long turned in lopsided Democratic majorities.

Mudge, Edwardsville attorney and war-time Army Air Force pilot, yesterday flew over the county and dropped 30,000 leaflets which called on citizens to "join the fight for honest government." It was his second flight of the campaign. He promised to close gambling places in leaflets dropped March 30. The dodgers loosed in yesterday's high wind reminded citizens that "your vote is your weapon."

Mudge, who was a prisoner of war for more than a year after 78 missions over Germany, also has been going from door to door soliciting support in his contest with Austin Lewis, an assistant under Schuman.

Lewis, a former State's Attorney, did not seek re-election at the end of his term in 1952 after Adlai E. Stevenson, then Governor of Illinois, made it known he did not consider him qualified for the post.

In the contest for Coroner, besides Dr. Billings, an Alton physician, candidates are Thomas J. Burke, machine-backed candidate and Ben F. Staten, incumbent, who has quarreled with Ogle. Both are Alton undertakers.

Sheriff Ogle is seeking renomination as a trustee of the East Side Levee and Sanitary District, which embraces large eastern sections of the two counties. His political power is based in part on his authority to dispense patronage in the district. He is also chairman of the County Democratic Committee.

Political Unknown.

Candidates with him, all incumbents, are Dan E. Costello, Lawrence Tolar, George Duff and John E. Molla. Charles Johnson, a political unknown, is running as an independent. Republicans seeking nomination are Seth Cherrington, William Uga, Charles Merritts, Herman W. Schoeber and George Bourbon.

Other Madison county Democratic office-seekers are Simon Kellerman Jr., for Clerk of the Circuit Court, and John L. Kraynak for County Auditor. Both are incumbents. Republican candidates are Charles A. O'Neil, Clerk of the Circuit Court; George E. Little Jr., Recorder of Deeds; Edward D. Groshong, State's Attorney; David G. Hodge and William G. Straube, Coroner, and Ruth McCormick, Auditor.

Congressman Melvin Price of East St. Louis, who has served six terms, is unopposed for renomination. He represents the twenty-fourth district, embracing the two counties. Republicans running are Waldo E. Schellenger and Bertram V. Jones.

State Representatives Lloyd (Curly) Harris and Paul Simon, who won a surprise victory against the machine two years ago, are up for renomination from their Madison county (fifty-third) district. A third candidate is Roy L. Wilimzig Jr. Two are chosen from each party in the primary, and of the four nominated, three are elected in November.

G.O.P. Candidates.

Republican candidates are Ralph T. Smith, incumbent, and Thomas Holland.

In St. Clair county (fifty-fourth district), Frank Holten, veteran of many terms, is running again, along with Alan J. Dixon, also an incumbent, and Virgil I. Calvert. Republicans are Otis L. Miller, incumbent, Theodore Kramer and Joseph D. Rountree.

Unopposed Democratic candidates for St. Clair county offices, all incumbents, are: For State's Attorney, Richard T. Carter; Circuit Clerk, Charles G. Becker; County Auditor, Adolph B. Nesbit; Recorder of Deeds, Walter Flannigen; Coroner, Dr. Clifford B. Kane; Board of Assessors, James Tierney; Board of Review, Edward Cunningham.

Republicans seeking nomination are: For State's Attorney, John J. Hoban; Circuit Clerk, Charles L. French; County Auditor, Charles V. Chance and Grace B. Fischer; Recorder of Deeds, Albert S. Rolek; Coroner, Dr. Dale Henry Rosenberg; Board of Assessors, Charles W. St. Clair Jr.; Board of Review, Thomas Wallace.

All ballots in St. Clair county Tuesday will be cast for the first time on voting machines.

BRITAIN TO MEET ON BAHREIN CLAIM, IRAN LEADER SAYS

TEHRAN, April 7 (AP)—Foreign Minister Aligholi Ardelan told newspaper men today Iran had officially informed Britain of Iran's claim to Bahrein and had protested against what he called Britain's "illegal interference in Bahrein."

He added that "fortunately nowadays Iran-Britain relations are quite friendly and therefore there is much hope of a solution of this problem. Britain has repeatedly rejected Iran's claim in the past but has now agreed to discuss the matter in a friendly manner."

Ardelan pledged that Iran would not use force to occupy oil-rich Bahrein, ruled by a sheikh and protected by Britain.

JULES H. TUCKER DIES; BARBER HERE 50 YEARS

Funeral services for Jules H. Tucker, a barber here for more than 50 years, were held yesterday at the Donnelly undertaking establishment, 3840 Lindell boulevard. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

Mr. Tucker, 82 years old, died Friday of infirmities at his home, 4453 West Pine boulevard. He was known as a man who took his citizenship seriously, having been the first voter to cast a ballot at his polling place in every presidential election since 1904. He retired three years ago, his last barbershop being in the Oriel Building.

Surviving are his wife, Winifred, and a son, Assistant United States Attorney Robert C. Tucker.

PAIR MARRIED 50 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Zackmann Sr., 2210 North and South road, Vinita Park, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary today at a dinner at the home of a son, William F. Zackmann Jr., 1260 Eighty-second boulevard, University City.

The senior Zackmann also will be 72 years old today. He retired in 1952 as a traveling freight claim adjuster for Wabash Railroad where he had worked for about 50 years. The Zackmanns have two other children and four grandchildren.

Tourists Take Note.

NEW DELHI, April 7 (AP)—The eastern Indian state of Orissa doesn't expect a tourist boom. Reports from Cuttack say snakes killed 850 persons in the state (population 15,000,000) last year and six man-eating tigers are still at large after having taken dozens of lives in 1955 and 43 in January and February.

RUSSIANS KILLED BELA KUN IN 1938, HUNGARIAN SAYS

STOCKHOLM, April 7 (AP) —Bela Kun, leader of the unsuccessful Hungarian revolution of 1919, was executed in Moscow after a secret trial 18 years ago, a prominent Hungarian Communist said today.

Dr. George Lukacz, professor of literature and philosophy at Budapest University, said hundreds of Hungarian and Polish Communists were sent before Soviet execution squads or thrown into jail with Bela Kun as Stalin was striking at Russian and foreign Communists alike.

He added that subsequently Bela Kun was sentenced to death and shot in 1938.

"There was no mention in the press of the trial or his death sentence," he said.

The Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda restored Bela Kun to the ranks of revered revolutionary heroes last month in the process of rehabilitating the memory of the victims of the Stalin purge of the 1930s. The article praising him, however, did not say how he died.

Bela Kun fled to the Soviet Union after the Hungarian revolution failed. He lived there for many years, it is known, and was an official of the Communist International—the Comintern. He was destroyed by Stalin, presumably as a Trotskyite. In Stalin's rewriting of history Bela Kun's name was erased from Soviet and Hungarian Communist accounts of the Hungarian uprising.

U. S. ECONOMIC GRANT TO BAGHDAD PACT EXPECTED

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

LONDON, April 7—Britain has asked the United States for an assistance grant for the Baghdad pact economic program command. Diplomatic quarters indicated that Washington has responded favorably and some such American move is expected when the Baghdad pact council meets at Tehran April 16.

The State Department's decision to send Assistant Secretary Loy Henderson as head of the American "observer" team at the Tehran meeting has been welcomed in London where there has been a growing concern at the divergences between the two countries on Middle East policy.

However, the British also have informed Washington that they expect something more tangible than moral support for the Baghdad pact—and that an economic assistance grant for some of the pact projects now under study would be welcome.

Chance for Arms Reduction Seen in London Discussions

U.S. and Soviet Russia Have Moved Closer to an Agreement — But Some Differences Remain.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Retired)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.

AFTER 10 years of deadlock the United States and the Soviet Union have made proposals at the current conference in London of the subcommittee of the United Nations Disarmament Commission that are close enough together to give rise to hope that a genuine start may be made toward prevention of surprise attack and toward a reduction of armaments.

The United States delegation has receded from the position taken by the President at the Geneva Conference of heads of state that required an aerial inspection and control system be established first, without any agreement on the succeeding phases of reduction of arms.

The Soviet Union has dropped its demand for dismantling United States overseas bases, for ancillary actions that would destroy NATO, for tieing the German question into the disarmament problem and for an immediate ban on nuclear weapons.

The Russians have, indeed, made such concessions that cautious United States officials are beginning to think the Soviets may be sincere in the quest for disarmament.

Reduction, limitation and regulation of armaments is the most important of all political objectives in the heart of President Eisenhower. But neither he nor his special assistant for disarmament, Harold E. Stassen, is so starry-eyed on the subject that the United States is apt to make concessions that will reduce its power without compensating gains.

IN THE PENTAGON there is considerable alarm that the United States position may be endangered by concessions. There is nothing, however, in the working paper presented to the Disarmament Subcommittee April 3 by Stassen that appears to justify the Pentagon's fears.

Stassen's proposals have all been agreed upon by the Interdepartmental Disarmament Committee of the United States Government, on which the Pentagon was amply represented.

The proposals approach the problem very cautiously, step-by-step, and no reduction of armaments is proposed until a new armaments regulation organization has been established and is prepared to operate an inspection and control system.

The preliminary phases before any agreed reductions can start, Stassen told Andrei A. Gromyko, the chief Soviet delegate, will take more than a year.

The United States scheme provides for an inspection and control organization that would use both aerial photography—the President's "open skies" proposal—and ground control teams at military installations, conventional arms plants, ports, railway and highway junctions. It would be tied together with a worldwide communications net, would receive reports of all planned movements of armed forces of all kinds and check that they were carried out as indicated.

This scheme is primarily devised to prevent surprise attack. The same organization would check on the "blueprints" of national military organizations and verify that planned reductions were carried out.

The Soviet proposal for an inspection and control organization is limited to ground control and inspection teams, but with as much authority, with one exception, as envisioned in Stassen's working paper. The exception concerns mobile inspection teams in the United States proposal. The Soviet proposal only states that they "would have free access at any time to all objects of control." This could be used to prevent inspection of places not agreed upon in advance.

The Russians are fearful that unlimited aerial reconnaissance would be used to undermine Soviet security measures before armaments were reduced and tensions lessened. They delay this aspect of inspection.

"The Soviet proposals," the Russian news agency Tass reported, "likewise envisage that at a definite stage in carrying out the over-all disarmament programs, when confidence among states is consolidated, the countries concerned will examine the possibility of using aerial photography as one of the methods of control."

This looks like an effort on the part of the Russians to give the President a chance to recede from his "open skies" idea without losing face.

The United States delegation will insist that aerial inspection must be accepted as part of the inspection and control system before any steps toward disarmament are taken. This is one of the most important points of difference and may be difficult to reconcile.

THE UNITED STATES has set a tentative figure for a first stage reduction of armed forces to 2,500,000 men for the United States, the Soviet Union and China, 750,000 for France and Great Britain, and 500,000 for other states.

The Soviet Union retains the figures first proposed by Great Britain and France, and later accepted by the United States of 1,500,000 for the United States, the Soviet Union and China, 650,000 for Great Britain and France, and from 150,000 to 200,000 for other states.

HAROLD E. STASSEN
After deadlock—hope.

The positions are not irreconcilable, since the United States proposal only concerns a first phase. The United States has established 2,500,000 men as the minimum under present international conditions that will enable it to keep its commitments to its allies around the world. The figure of 500,000 was used to protect the armies of such states as South Korea, Nationalist China and Germany.

The United States, proceeding cautiously, is unwilling to reduce further until a new look at international conditions has been taken, the Communist danger reassessed, and assurance reached that the free world can reduce armaments further without danger.

The Soviet Union proposes to set up a test inspection and control system in East and West Germany "and also of neighboring states." Along with this it demands that no nuclear weapons be retained in the test area.

The United States has proposed that test inspection and control systems be established in areas 20,000 to 30,000 miles in extent in the United States and the Soviet Union.

The Russians are not considered by United States officials to be immovable in their idea. The United States, however, will not consent to the elimination of nuclear weapons from Germany in the early stages of disarmament and for this reason will not agree to test inspection and control in Germany.

Stassen's working paper envisages the formation of an international armaments regulation organization, with an armaments regulation council including all signators, an executive committee consisting of permanent and non-permanent elected members and a director. This is somewhat similar to the organization of the United Nations and of NATO.

The armaments regulation organization would make "appropriate reports" to the United Nations Security Council and General Assembly, but would not be subordinate to the United Nations.

If the disarmament treaty were violated the armaments regulation organization could suspend or terminate the treaty or take countering steps.

'Open Skies' Plan Would Have to Be Put Off as Would Russian Ban on Atom Bombs in Germany.

In the Soviet plan the inspection and control organization is subordinate to the Security Council of the United Nations, where the Soviet Union has the veto. This difference may be difficult to bridge.

As soon as agreement is reached, the Russians would stop all nuclear tests and freeze all armaments and armed forces at the levels of Dec. 31, 1955. Also, independent of an agreement on disarmament, the Soviets would reduce military budgets 15 per cent.

WITH REGARD to nuclear weapons, the Russians made no specific proposal, except to bar them from Germany and to halt nuclear tests.

"The Soviet Government," Tass reported, "favors complete and unconditional prohibition of nuclear weapons, but to move the entire matter from the deadlock and to achieve constructive results, the Soviet Government has introduced a new proposal in which reduction of armed forces and conventional armaments is not made conditional upon agreement to ban nuclear weapons."

The United States provides that when the armaments regulation organization has been established all governments will report to it on the possession and production of fissionable materials, the possession of nuclear weapons and the planning of tests of nuclear weapons.

When the inspection and control system is prepared to account for future production of fissionable materials, all states will agree that future production of fissionable materials will not be used for the manufacture of explosive weapons.

This will be followed, according to Stassen's plan, by gradual transfer of fissionable materials from weapons to peaceful uses.

The Russians believe they could complete the reduction of armaments that they have proposed in three years. The United States thinking is by no means so rosy. It would be more than a year, according to Stassen, before the minor reductions his scheme envisages could start and the freeze on nuclear weapons could be accomplished.

The two positions are so close, in general, that officials in Stassen's office and the State Department believe, that with good will on both sides, an agreement can be reached and a start made on setting up the organization to control armaments.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union will have to make concessions. The most important that the United States will be called upon to make will be to put off implementation of the President's "open skies" inspection method. This will be strongly resisted in the Pentagon.

From the Soviet point of view the most important recession will have to be from their demand to bar nuclear weapons from Germany and to set up a test inspection area there. Nor will they easily agree to the increase of German forces to 500,000 men.

Nevertheless, there is for the first time a chance that the first cautious steps in the reduction and regulation of armaments may be agreed upon.

Gov. Averell Harriman

How Far From Albany to White House?

A Long-Odds Democratic Possibility — Chances Are Improving — His Record Distinguished.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.

ON a political form sheet, Gov. Averell Harriman of New York has over the past 20 years built up an impressive record in high level government that would make him a promising candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination this year. In person and on the public platform, however, he is under oppressive handicaps that today rate him as a long odds contender.

Those odds are being shortened as Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee continues to make good showings in the trial heat presidential primaries as in Minnesota and in the popularity contests with President Eisenhower. Should Kefauver pass former Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois in the purely Democratic races in Florida and California, the New Yorker's chances will be greatly improved. Then Kefauver and Harriman would be leading for the nomination prize with the "dark horses" trailing but moving up.

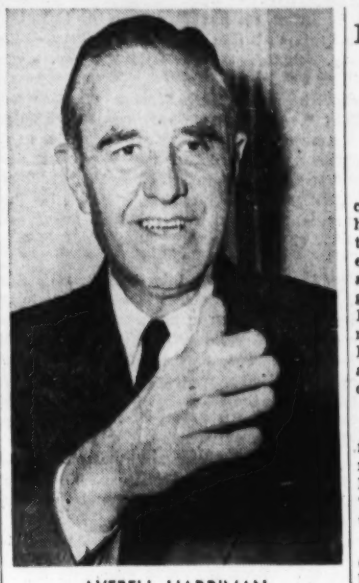
HARRIMAN, 64 years old, has persisted in saying that he is not an "active" candidate for the nomination while going through the traditional exercises for it by making transcontinental speaking tours, conferring with local politicians and huddling with national leaders, the most influential being former President Harry S. Truman.

Throughout the winter, he has had the legitimate argument that he has been busy with duties of his governorship, particularly with his hostile Republican Legislature. The Legislature adjourned late last month and the Governor has until April 27 to study whether he will approve or veto the voluminous mass of legislation it adopted. After that date, he will have more time to devote to national and personal politics. It is unlikely, however, that he will become an "active" candidate until he and his political advisers have analyzed the results of the California primary of May 5. If Stevenson does not win by a large margin, watch for Harriman, who has said he did not have the time for primaries, to make a bold bid for the presidential honors.

Harriman's opportunity comes from the seemingly irreconcilable division of the Democratic party between the "liberal" northerners and the "conservative" southerners which has been vastly widened by the Supreme Court's decision in the segregation cases.

For a while it looked as though Stevenson was the one candidate who could keep the two segments together through the election year. Of all those prominently mentioned for the nomination, he was the least objectionable to both the North and South, although neither section showed great enthusiasm for him. Kefauver was opposed in 1952 and this year by the northern political leaders and virtually all his senatorial colleagues. The northern group did not like the way he went after the racketeers and gamblers in his widely televised investigation which showed the hookup of some northern politicians with the underworld; the Senate group has had no use for his independence and what its members call his inattention to senatorial duties and customs.



AVERELL HARRIMAN
F.D.R. protege.

Harriman, most objectionable of all to many southern Democratic leaders, has a large potential following among northern Democrats and independents because of his foreign affairs record in the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations and his domestic record during his two years as Governor of the largest and most cosmopolitan state in the Union.

There is a growing tendency—how far it will go no one can tell at this time—among northern leaders to reject the claims of the southern Democrats at the Chicago convention in the selection of the presidential candidate and the writing of the civil rights plank of the 1956 platform.

The basis for this movement is a northern belief that if there are any more "manifestos" by the southern Congressmen against the Supreme Court decision for school desegregation or more situations like the Autherine Lucy case and the bus boycott suits in Alabama, the Republican party, with its Eisenhower "moderation," will attract the Negro vote back into its column.

The Roosevelt and Truman Administrations were put and kept in office by the regular Democrats plus wide support from Negro and farm voters. Roosevelt would have won all his elections without the solid South and Truman did win in 1948 although he lost Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina to the States' Righters. He probably lost New York and Maryland to the Republicans because the Wallace "Progressive" vote in those states was larger than the Republican plurality.

Many northern leaders believe that an outright "liberal" presidential nominee who could appeal to the farmers, Negroes and the low-income groups would make a better showing against President Eisenhower than a "moderate" or a compromise candidate.

Truman, as shrewd a politician as they come in intra- or inter-party affairs, says he is "neutral" among the party contenders at this time. It is no secret, however, that he wants a "liberal" nominee and a "liberal" platform that will fight aggressively for low-income voter support. He has gone out of his way to favor Harriman over Stevenson and Kefauver, and Harriman has returned the compliment by assiduously cultivating the former President both personally and politically.

ONE OF TRUMAN'S objections to Harriman as a candidate in 1952 has been removed by Harriman's election to the New York governorship. In his memoirs Truman has this to say about his attitude toward Harriman in 1952:

"One of the ablest and most deserving contenders for the nomination was Averell Harriman. His record of government service was long and distinguished. Harriman had served in many important posts during the critical war and postwar years. His work in the handling of lend-lease from London was outstanding. He served brilliantly as Ambassador to Russia and Great Britain. He was a very able Secretary of Commerce in my Cabinet and did a great job of administering the Marshall Plan in Europe. I held Harriman in the highest regard, and still do, but I felt that with his limited experience in elective politics and no experience in campaigning for an elective office he was somewhat handicapped at this particular time.

"Some weeks before the convention Harriman came to see me to ask if I would be agreeable to the New York delegation's putting him in nomination. I replied to Harriman that it was all right for him to take the step but that when the time came for the convention to nominate its candidate for President I wanted him to be in line to help nominate that man, whoever he was. Some of the party leaders also approached me to ask if they could help Harriman, and I told them that of course they could. There were groups in other parts of the country who wanted to put Harriman forward. I assured Harriman that, if it came to a show-down between him and Stevenson, I was committed to Stevenson because I felt that he would be the strongest candidate the Democratic party could offer at this time. This understanding between Harriman and myself was behind some of the developments at the convention in July."

At Chicago in 1952 Harriman, under great pressure from Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan and Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota to back Kefauver, switched his convention strength to Stevenson, thus clinching the Illinoisan's nomination. He had received a high of 123½ votes on the first roll call, of which 83½ were from the New York delegation.

One of the interesting current questions is whether Stevenson, once he is convinced he no longer has a chance for the nomination, will reciprocate by throwing his delegation support to Harriman this year. Both have conceded that they have an "understanding" about this year's convention, but neither will disclose what it is. It is hard to see how either, in a deadlocked convention, could transfer his support to Kefauver or a southern candidate like Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas. Either or both might be willing to go along with a "dark horse" like Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri or Gov. Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey. Together they could have the decisive block of votes.

Truman obviously believes that Harriman is eminently qualified for the presidency and that he would try to make the kind of "give-'em-hell" campaign that he himself successfully waged in 1948.

There is a tremendous difference, however, in the voter appeal of former Missouri farm boy, who went broke in the haberdashery business, and the possessor of a $50,000,000 fortune who was educated like a prince at Groton and Yale and has traveled almost exclusively in upper reaches of American and British society.

Truman has walked with kings and never lost the common touch; Harriman has walked with kings and is just beginning to get that touch which is so essential in American politics as Kefauver is proving against Stevenson.

FEW AMERICANS can approach Harriman's record for public service over so long a period at the highest levels. Born a Republican, the son of a railroad magnate and financier, Edward H. Harriman, who, it was said, "feared neither God nor J. P. Morgan," he turned Democrat to support Democrat Gov. Alfred E. Smith in the 1928 presidential campaign.

With the fortune and position he had inherited from his father, he became the head of the Union Pacific Railroad a few years after his graduation from Yale in 1913 and went into many other large business enterprises including shipbuilding and aviation, which were said to be unsuccessful although the details have not become known.

The late Harry L. Hopkins, adviser to Roosevelt, persuaded him to come to Washington in 1933 as a division head of the National Industrial Recovery program. Harriman and Hopkins made a complementary team. Hopkins had the power that Harriman admired; Harriman traveled in the moneyed set that the son of an Iowa harness maker enjoyed. He was active in the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council from the start of

Legality of Union Slowdown Before Supreme Court

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.

THE Supreme Court has before it for review the nettlesome question of whether a union which engages in slowdowns and other tactics of harassment against an employer to enforce contract demands violates the National Labor Relations Act.

Specifically before the court is a challenge by the National Labor Relations Board of a District of Columbia Appeals Court decision striking down a board ruling finding the Textile Workers' Union and its Chicago Local 1172 in violation of the "good faith" bargaining clause of the act.

The board accused the union because, during negotiations of a contract, its members took part in slowdowns, unannounced and intermittent walkouts and refused to work overtime or special hours as part of a plan to compel the Personal Products Corp. to accede to its wage demands.

The Labor Board concluded after hearings that the slowdowns and other harassing tactics were "irreconcilable with the act's requirements of reasoned discussion in a background of balanced bargaining relations upon which good faith bargaining must rest" and that the union in resorting to such tactics violated Section Eight of the act.

The Court of Appeals, however, ruled that "there is not the slightest inconsistency between genuine desire to come to agreement and the use of economic pressure to get the kind of agreement one wants."

The appeals court, in a 2 to 1 opinion, went on to say that "the board's theory that such harassing tactics are evidence that a union is not bargaining in good faith will not stand analysis," adding that the union might have called a full-fledged strike.

It said that no inference of failure could have been drawn from a total withholding of services during negotiations to put economic pressure on the employer to yield to the union's demands and that it was "equally clear that no such inference can be drawn from a partial withholding of services at that time and for that purpose."

Beyond that, the appeals court said, except for specified conduct, such as jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts, the act does not limit the use of economic pressure in support of lawful demands.

For its part, the union concedes that the Labor Board's version of the harassment activities is substantially correct. But it asks the Supreme Court to agree that there is nothing in the act, except the outlawry of jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts, which can be construed as impeding or diminishing in any way the right to strike, including any slowdown or other concerted interruption of operations by the employes.

The union says that when its "partial strike" tactics began in January 1953, bargaining had been in progress for three months and that such tactics were employed only after a contract had expired, good faith bargaining had failed to produce an agreement and at a time when a full-fledged strike would have been concerted activity protected by the act.

As the union sees the situation, the question presented to the high tribunal is whether the act forbids the use of economic pressure short of a full-fledged strike at a time when a full-fledged strike would not only have been permissible but would have been protected.

The union also makes the point that in the "partial strike" action there were direct losses to employes, such as accrued from their refusal to work overtime, short walkouts and extended rest periods. These incidents, for their duration, carried the same effects as a total strike—the employer received no work and the employes received no pay.

"These tactics are used only in unusual situations and the employer always has the right to cease operation when faced with such tactics and, hence, such tactics can only continue when the employer finds them less damaging than a full strike," the union contends.

The union finds fault with any contention that the act requires that all disputes between employers and employes be settled solely by a process of reasoned discussion.

"It (the act) requires discussion as a prelude to the use of economic strength, but it does not require either party to abandon resort to such strength after bargaining has failed to produce agreement," the union contends.

"This is seen most clearly with respect to the employer. The act does not compel him to accede to the most reasoned of union arguments. He must listen and bargain, as must the union, but neither is barred from resort to economic strength. His power, the counterpart of the union's right to strike or take other economic action, is simply the power inherent in the fact that he is the employer, to continue or put into effect whatever wages, hours and working conditions he wants."

As the union interprets what it terms "the long and short of the matter," the Labor Act is premised upon a belief that industrial disputes and the terms of economic settlement of those disputes are to be left to free collective bargaining and the notion of free collective bargaining includes the right of either party to use its full economic strength so long as (1) its bargaining position is genuine and not a sham to circumvent the status of the other party and its representatives and (2) none of the specific limitations set forth by Congress are transgressed.

Judge John A. Danaher, who dissented in the court of appeals decision, found the union wrong on all points. He said that the union was not bargaining in good faith and that the harassing tactics, considered by themselves, constituted "attempts unilaterally to change working conditions during the bargaining process" in violation of the union's statutory duty.

In its arguments against the appeals court decision, the board contends that the ruling permits a union to compel an employer either to discharge his employes and, perhaps, close down his business, or to bargain while the employes, at the direction of the union, continue in their employment, collect wages and, at the same time, "select what part of their allotted tasks they care to perform of their own volition."

The board contends that there is a substantial and significant difference between a full-fledged strike and a partial strike.

"Where a strike is called there are economic pressures on both the employer and the union to adjust and compose their differences in a spirit of give and take. However, where the union does not go out on a strike but resorts to tactics such as utilized here, it is in the felicitous position of having its cake and eating it, too."

The board contends that collective bargaining in good faith presupposes cooperation in give-and-take personal conferences with a willingness to let ultimate decision follow a fair opportunity for the presentation of pertinent facts and arguments.

"The harassing tactics of the union manifestly preclude such an opportunity and necessarily tend to reduce negotiations to sterile discussion," the board contends.

It has long been recognized, the board says, that unilateral action by employers in by-passing the collective bargaining process on bargainable matters is manifestly inconsistent with the principle of collective bargaining.

"By a parity of reasoning, the harassing tactics in this case, which also constitute unilateral alteration of terms and conditions of employment by the union, were held to be inconsistent with that principle," the board advises the court.

Unless the appeals court decision is reversed, the board adds, it will serve to encourage resort to tactics it condemned in the Chicago case, and it is important to both unions and employers to have an authoritative adjudication by the high tribunal of their rights and duties with the use of such tactics as a collective bargaining technique.

Too Great a Man?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Your recent editorial on "The Stevenson Situation" hovered around the truth but never did quite light on it. I can understand your reluctance to face up to it.

It seems apparent that mediocrity surrounds the presidency. When you consider Van Buren and Pierce and Fillmore and Buchanan; when you think of Grant and Arthur, McKinley and Harding and also the Coolidges and the Eisenhowers, it seems obvious that a certain lowest common denominator has always been at work in the magic formula of "availability."

There have been some splendid and memorable exceptions, but over the years there has been an "all things to all men" factor which has tended to rule out integrity and greatness and has made it essential to politics that a mediocre man be President of the United States.

This factor ruled out Clay and Webster, even Calhoun. It ruled out Taft. And what you came close to saying, and what everybody hates to say, is that it is beginning to look like Stevenson is too great a man to be President.

O. CARROLL ARNOLD.
Springfield, Mass.

I thank the Post-Dispatch for printing Marquis Childs's reports on the Minnesota primary.

No doubt many people suspected some skullduggery but few thought so much of it was planned by revengeful men in Stevenson's own party. Childs should know.

Stevenson has the culture, the intelligence, and above all, the integrity that we want to see in the White House. Let all his friends get out and work.

The Future Is What Counts

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Why all this racket about who our ancestors were?

If we ascended from monkeys I am proud of the progress we have made. But if we descended from a God-made perfect ancestor we ought to be ashamed of the low state to which we have fallen.

Whether we came up out of the cave or down out of the tree matters little at this late date. The important thing is what are we doing at the present time to improve ourselves.

Memories of Germany

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

My wife and I would like you to know how much we enjoyed the special feature of March 25, "Switzerland Speaks to America."

One thing which brought back memories was the advertisement from Brown, Boveri & Co. of Baden, Switzerland. For it was while we were employed in that company's branch factory at Mannheim, Germany, that my wife and I met each other. That was 34 years ago, and this is the first time either of us has seen the firm's name in print since we left Germany in 1922.

My father also worked at the same factory and held a leading position there from 1898 to 1931. The company's name naturally brought memories. Many were pleasant but overshadowed by the countless joys of the life we've had here in the United States. How proud we both are of our American citizenship!

And how proud you should be of your great newspaper. We've always found it a great source of enjoyment and education.

Not Like They Used to Be

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

If women were like they used to be men would gladly give them their streetcar seats!

But instead of staying home cooking and minding children they now wander the streets in skin-tight pants smoking cigarettes!

They wait till the rush hour when every bus is crowded with worn-out working men, then expect every man in sight to bow with gracious chivalry and offer them his seat.

TIRED WORKING MAN.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Since women hold men's jobs and smoke and cuss like men, let them stand like men.

Seriously, men are not the stronger sex. Insurance company figures show that, on the average, women live five years longer than men. Yet a railroad lady having 30 years service can retire on full pension at age 60, while a railroad man cannot retire at full pension until age 65.

One Terrier to Another

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I would never have had the temerity to reply to reader C. E. Owen had I known that it would bring into the picture the dog with the registry A.K.C. N-219272.

This amazing animal is not only twice the size of a typical specimen of his breed but is the wielder of an astonishingly facile pen—unless perchance he uses a typewriter.

His erudition puts not only his critics but his owner to shame. I have read his letter to my bull terrier, A.K.C. R-165952 (he can't even read), and he doesn't seem to understand a word of it.

However, he has a more conclusive if less subtle way of settling his differences.

Eisenhower's Opportunity

President Eisenhower soon will be filling the sixth major vacancy in his Cabinet in a little more than three years. This vacancy is in the office of Secretary of the Interior. It is one that presents the President with an opportunity, greater in some ways than any of the others that have come to him previously through Cabinet resignations.

The first top-level Cabinet change occurred in President Eisenhower's inaugural year when the late Martin P. Durkin of Illinois resigned as Secretary of Labor and was succeeded by James P. Mitchell of New Jersey. The second change was the departure of Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby of Texas from the new Department of Health, Education and Welfare and her replacement by the able Marion B. Folsom of New York.

Three major resignations have occurred in the Department of Defense, just below the level of Secretary Charles E. Wilson of Michigan. The President's first choice as Secretary of the Army, Robert T. Stevens of New Jersey, a central figure in the McCarthy battle, was succeeded by Wilber M. Brucker of Michigan. Robert B. Anderson of Texas was succeeded as Secretary of the Navy by Charles S. Thomas of California. Harold E. Talbott of New York, who got tangled up in conflict of interest troubles, resigned as Secretary of the Air Force; his successor is the eminently qualified Donald A. Quarles of New Jersey.

Now Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay will be leaving the Cabinet in a few days to go home to Oregon to run against Senator Wayne Morse who is the White House's No. 1 senatorial target this year. We hope the President chooses as well in selecting the McKay successor as he did in picking the successors to the Durkin and Hobby seats. For if he does he will raise the level of the Cabinet notably.

This would be good for both the country and for the Republican party. The conservation and natural resource policies of the Federal Government under Secretary McKay have favored oil, waterpower, timber and land exploiters. This record is so clear that it does not need to be reviewed here.

Why a constructive change from Secretary McKay would be so good for the Republican party ought to be equally clear. But somehow it seems to have been forgotten. Three years ago the Post-Dispatch printed an editorial entitled, "A Record to Be Proud Of." It told how many advances in conservation had been made under Republican Presidents. Here are a few of the high spots:

Grant: Creation of Yellowstone National Park as first of the national parks.

Harrison: Creation of first national forests.

McKinley: Passage of organic law under which national forests were administered.

Theodore Roosevelt: Establishment of the United States Forest Service. Passage of the Reclamation Act.

Taft: Authorization for national forests in other parts of the country besides the West.

Coolidge: Establishment of federal game refuges for migratory birds. Regulation of fisheries.

Hoover: Authorization of the first major public power and multiple purpose dam (Boulder, later renamed Hoover dam).

It is a strange thing that the Republican party which compiled this splendid record should go back on it under the first G.O.P. Administration in a quarter century. It is strange that the party has turned a deaf ear on the sound counsel of Republican Theodore Roosevelt, the first great conservationist in the White House. He said:

> In the administration of the forest reserves, it must be clearly borne in mind that all land is to be devoted to its most productive use for the most permanent good of the whole people, and not for the temporary benefit of individuals or companies.
> Where conflicting interests must be reconciled the question will always be decided from the standpoint of the greatest good for the greatest number.

As we said May 7, 1953, these words apply to every other national treasure as much as they do to the forests. They apply to minerals, to waterways, to range. They apply to still other resources. They apply today in Hell's Canyon.

The opportunity President Eisenhower has is to appoint a Secretary of the Interior who will be a watchdog for the interests of the American people. His opportunity is to find another Republican like Gifford Pinchot to battle for the public against the demands of predatory extractors and exploiters.

May he make the most of it!

Here's How

"How could I be hostile to a country that produced Mark Twain?" So asks Solomon West Ridgway Diaz Bandaranaike, the Oxford graduate who has overturned Sir John Kotelawala's pro-Western Government in Ceylon. The question is supposed to offer reassurance that the new Government will not be "anti-Western" or "hostile to the United States." It's an interesting question.

Sam Clemens was a "product" of the United States in about the same way that the swan was a product of the family of ducks in Hans Christian Andersen's story of "The Ugly Duckling." He disliked many things about the United States very much indeed—so many and so much that to be on the safe side in mentioning them he often felt obliged to pretend he was only kidding. It is precisely this sense of precaution that makes a humorist what James Thurber once said he was: "a man who sits in the house of life with his hat and coat on."

Our feeling is that the right answer to Mr. Bandaranaike's somewhat rhetorical question is "Easily enough," and that our eminent fellow-Missourian would have been the first to say so. We hope, however, that he will not be hostile; that we can keep about the business of remedying our shortcomings earnestly enough to deserve trust and friendship; and that Mr. Bandaranaike may find sounder reasons for liking us than that Sam Clemens lived and lives amongst us.

Is Just Lecturing Enough?

Is it good policy for the United States to lecture other governments about human rights when our own Government now opposes ratification of the U.N. covenants dealing with those rights?

When James F. Green of the State Department addressed the St. Louis chapter of the American Association for the United Nations last week, he gave a rather complicated explanation of our Government's position on human rights. What it came to is that we won't ratify a treaty guaranteeing to protect those rights, but we favor them and we urge all governments to protect them.

Why not sign a human rights covenant? That is an old story. Secretary Dulles abandoned support of such a covenant, even though this country had been one of the originators of the whole idea, as a concession to the Brickers, McCarthys and Southern Democrats who opposed it. Whether he was right or wrong in that, the deed has been done. But if we are unwilling to take international action in this field, how well grounded are we in continuing to press internationally for action by others?

On the whole, it might be best all around now if the United States quit preaching on this subject until our own pulpit is a little neater.

Speaking the Academic Mind

It is unnecessary to agree with all the actions taken by the American Association of University Professors at its St. Louis convention to appreciate the great importance of its work in the field of academic freedom and tenure.

Naturally enough, the governing authorities of St. Louis University differ sharply with the censure unanimously voted against that institution for its handling of the administrative controversy with Dr. Philip A. Tumulty, dismissed two years ago as head of the internal medicine department. Yet they agree that the investigating committee made a "serious and honest effort to get the facts." And there can be little doubt that the principles of tenure which the A.A.U.P. held to have been violated in this case will be given greater consideration should a similar case occur in the future.

Such, it may be hoped, will also be the result of the entirely different category of cases, having to do with the rights of faculty members in disputes over loyalty oaths, Communist party membership, invocation of the Fifth Amendment, and the like. Six colleges and universities were recommended for censure by the A.A.U.P. governing body, and the full convention adopted an important statement of principles covering this field.

Many college administrators and trustees no doubt will disagree with some of these principles, one of which is that Communist party membership alone should not be considered grounds for dismissal. But they will be obliged to think about them, and if that leads to more open-minded consideration of the facts of each new case as it arises, much will have been gained.

As we see it, the basic principle propounded by the A.A.U.P. is that whenever a faculty member is dismissed it should be for real cause having to do with his qualifications to teach. In other words, the particular facts in each case should be controlling—not an automatically applied formula or a label.

It is conceivable that Communist party membership might make a certain professor unfit to teach and have no effect on the capacities of another. It is conceivable that pleading the Fifth Amendment in one case might arise from qualities of character incompatible with faculty membership, but in another case might express a deep conscientiousness which deserved praise instead of punishment.

The A.A.U.P.'s point, and it is a good one, is that every case should be decided on its own merits, by competent authorities, and according to responsible procedures which permit fair trial. It is difficult to see how any college administration with a real respect for academic freedom could object to that.

Now, 13 From 45

The list of candidates for the 13-member board of charter freeholders has now been closed. In a sense this fact defines the intellectual and other limitations under which the new St. Louis charter will be drafted. No written instrument can rise above the intelligence, imagination and background of those who create it.

Happily for St. Louis there seem to be more than enough first-class candidates among the 45 who have filed. This provides assurance that the potential for a good charter does exist. The problem is how to realize that potential. Which 13 of the candidates would make the best board of freeholders?

This is the question the people will be called upon to answer at the special election May 8. With almost four aspirants for every seat, selecting a board could turn out to be a confusing assignment. One saving factor, however, will be the recommendations of the Citizens' Charter Committee.

The Citizens' group, through its executive committee, has been interviewing candidates and otherwise attempting to inform itself of the merits of those who have offered to serve. The Citizens have no ax to grind other than recommending qualified candidates. But while the committee's work may help the average voter make up his mind, it is no substitute for the independent examination of all the candidates that each voter ought to make. The list is closed; the time for study has begun.

Safety Aid at Lambert Field

With the development of the modern fast military planes and luxury airliners has come the necessity for the most modern in airport fire-fighting equipment and the best in trained crews.

St. Louis, because of the excellent equipment at the Naval Air Station, has one of the safest of airports. The Naval Station has now added the very latest in plane crash fire-fighting equipment—a massive turret truck with foam capacity believed sufficient for the most severe fire and able to cover a mile in 85 seconds from a dead start. Graphic color photographs in today's PICTURES section show it quickly extinguishing a burning jet fighter hulk.

With this equipment and a five-man crew on guard, ready for civilian or military emergencies, St. Louis can be assured that its airport is as safe as any airport in the nation.

Down the Catalogued Years

The Library of Congress has acquired a microfilmed set of Sears, Roebuck catalogues going back to 1888, and we do not blame L. Quincy Mumford, the librarian, for hailing the gift with lyrical enthusiasm.

The Sears catalogues are indeed important social documents. Through several generations they have mirrored changing tastes and living standards, especially in rural and small town America. And for a long time they have supplied the material, in richly copious abundance, for childhood reverie.

You pored over it by the hour, not exactly in an acquisitive spirit, but simply out of curiosity, as one would browse through a well-stocked museum. You mentally tried out all of the bicycles. You fingered the second-baseman's mitts, hefted the bats, and fancied yourself in the specially selected flannel baseball suit.

Hardware and tools you practically memorized. You learned all about cream separators, hay stackers, wells and pumps, base burners, kerosene kitchen stoves, patent oil lamps, building materials. A practiced devotee could even lose himself in wonder over harness.

So we're glad the Library of Congress is going to keep the Sears catalogues on microfilm as an important social document. Along with history they are going to embalm in the files many a lost hour of many a childhood.

GOLF GAME IN THE MIDDLE EAST

Missouri's Sleeping Beauties

Paul Tulenko, Chief, Game Section, Missouri Conservation Commission, in the Missouri Conservationist

Soft warm winds of spring come every year to waken the sleeping beauties in the wooded slopes and valleys of Missouri. And the most spectacular of these beauties are the several species of spring flowering trees which unfold their miracle of color high above their modest neighbors on the ground so that the eye of the passerby cannot miss their spectacular display.

Many of us associate the coming of spring with the flowering of some one particular species of tree. It may then be quite a surprise to know that the first of all to flower is the Serviceberry.

This small, oftentimes crooked tree is also known as Juneberry, Shadbush and Shadblow. The latter two names come from the fact that it blooms when the shad come in from the sea on the east coast. The tree we know best is known to botanists as Amelanchier canadensis. The Shadbush blooms near the end of March, having loose drooping clusters of long white flowers. The flower has five slim petals each about ¾ of an inch long and appears before the leaves. The tree may grow to 30 feet high but is more commonly found from 10 to 15 feet in height.

Hawthorn

The wood is tough, hard, pinkish light tan with walnut brown heartwood. It is the "Lancewood" of legend and has been used to make fishing poles and tool handles.

Although not flowering at the time, the next tree to attract attention is the common Buckeye, also called Horse Chestnut. The one we refer to is listed as Aesculus glabra pallida by the botanists. In late March or early April this small tree unfolds its large leaf buds from the tips of its stout twigs in a startling display almost flower-like. These are followed by an upright spike of creamy white flowers with a bell shaped calyx and four or five petals which appear as the leaves develop.

Rows of the Wild Plum

In Missouri the Buckeye may grow to 30 feet but is seen more commonly six to 10 feet high. The wood is white, soft and weak, and was once used for making caskets, boxes and crating. And no boy raised in the country will forget the glistening chocolate or chestnut brown fruits which were used for amusement in all kinds of ways by imaginative youth.

How often have you driven on country roads in early April and passed hedgerows of slender-twigged leafless small trees literally covered with tufts of small creamy white flowers? This is the Wild Plum or Goose Plum and may be Prunus hortulana or Prunis americana. Usually the trees are 10 to 12 feet high but may reach 30 feet. The bark is reddish-brown. The tiny plums in early summer are sharply tangy, sometimes used to make plum butter.

With many people the coming of spring is best associated with the blooming of the Redbud. Known to botanists as Ceris canadensis this tree is also known commonly as Judas Tree. In legend a European species is reputed to have been the tree from which Judas hanged himself in remorse from his betrayal of Christ.

The Redbud blooms in late March or April. Even before the flowers open the rich crimson lavender of the buds presents a striking picture. When fully opened the flowers, like tiny sweet peas, are lavender pink, appearing before the leaves and growing in clusters along the slender zigzag twigs.

There is always some question as to why the Hawthorn was selected as Missouri's state flower since it is not nearly as common nor as spectacular as several other flowering trees or ground flowers. This tree is also known as Red Haw and Thorn Apple.

There are reported to be over 150 species or subspecies in Missouri. They represent a botanist's nightmare since only a genius of a botanist can tell them apart. The one believed to be the state flower is Crataegus mollis. They begin blooming in late April.

The terminal clusters or corymbs of white to pinkish white five-petal flowers, each from one-half to one inch across appear with the leaves. The trees generally about 12 feet tall may reach 30 feet. They like areas where limestone crops out.

A Queen of the Spring

To many people the Flowering Dogwood is the Queen of Spring. Some feel that its flower would more truly represent Missouri. This beautiful small tree is called Cornus florida by the botanists. The Flowering Dogwood blooms near the first of May.

Actually the true flower is one of a group of tiny yellow blossoms in the center of what we consider the flower.

Fringe Tree

What we call the flower is really an arrangement of four huge white bracts surrounding the true flower. These bracts or "petals" are snow-white tipped with purple and are arranged in the shape of a cross. They have a spread of 3 to 4 inches.

The tree, usually 12 to 15 feet high, may grow to 40 feet. The Greek name Cornus means horny and describes the character of the wood. The extremely hard dense sapwood is white to flesh colored and was used for the manufacture of weaving shuttles.

A very lovely tree not commonly seen in the wild but available from commercial nurseries is the Fringe Tree, also known as Old Man's Beard and to botanists as Chionanthus virginica. It blooms in late May. The small fragrant white flowers with slender ribbon-like petals occur in large drooping sprays eight inches or so long with the oval pointed leaves. Usually seen about eight to 12 feet tall it may grow to 30 feet. It is a member of the olive family.

Because of the vagaries of Missouri's climate it is not possible to give an accurate time-table of flowering dates.

Those Stamp-Vending Machines

From The Louisville Times

Opinion differs as to the economical aspects of the newest thing in stamp-vending machines—a gadget which not only gives change but says to the purchaser: "Thank you. I am another example of the streamlining of your postal service."

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch wonders how many customers will believe this spiel. "The pilot model now in use," it goes on to say, "cost the Post Office $4000, but mass production will bring the price down to $1000. This strikes us as an expensive rather than a streamlined way of selling stamps."

Of opposite opinion is The Milwaukee Journal. The taxpayers' money, it declares editorially, "isn't being wasted—postal authorities are hunting ways to help save it."

Be that as it may, we wonder about the political aspects of the matter. That business about "another example" of streamlining (in government parlance a synonym for efficiency) is soon going to seem to some sensitive Democrats like a plug for the Administration.

What then? We've searched through the Hatch Act and federal civil service regulations and found no ban on political activity by robots. That, however, doesn't mean that an amendment to that effect may not be introduced in Congress any day now.

Born at Greenville 40 years ago, he tells in his new volume of verse of homecoming to his Delta country. The Circus

Where all those houses are was a wide field
Filled with goldenrod; across the canal
The canebrake began and stretched to the wood,
Dark reaches of swamp oak; and every fall
The circus came and set up in that field.

The train arrived in the night; we heard the whistles;
Then with the dawn we could see the painted carts
Rumbling along the street in front of our house,
The swaying elephants and the caged lions,
And curtained vans with the still sleeping stars.

In a little while a tent with many flags,
Like a dream city, rose white in that field;
And our sidewalk was lined with Negro stands:
Fried chicken and biscuits, cold drinks, cakes and pies.
Then the leaping life of acrobats and clowns,

Lion-tamers with curled whips, moustached and proud,
The beautiful ladies on horses, in diamond gowns,
And on into dark with music, lights and crowds.
It was a concentration of all the fire
Down the roads of time, the traffic of man;

And then in the hush again the rumbling wheels,
Rattle of hooves and swish of elephants,
Dim in departing night, and with the dawn,
The empty field, the trampled goldenrod,
And a boy standing alone as dusk returned.

Baptism

We drive this Sunday south into the country
Where a white frame Gothic church stands at the levee.
The Negroes, dressed in black, glistening with the heat,
Come early, carrying lunches, and stay late
In the steaming little church where they sing together.

Across the levee at the old landing they still Hold their baptisms. A live religion deals
In living symbols; so they prefer the river,
Their untamed font of darkness. I recall one evening
When the red sun broke through colonnades of cloud,

And the two tides met, brown and golden, of earth and air—
Light calm and pure, and that violence of water—
How they went down in white and moaning lamentation
To the mud-brown flood and under, then broke up singing,
Rolled on the earth, reborn out of death and nature.

Through all the aseptic channels of the modern
This wild release is pouring; and we who listen,
As the brooding ground and single imploration
Breaks in waves of answer, group-homing passion,
We whites, who can only listen, are blurred with our tears.

Flexible Soviet Tactics Succeed In Asia While U.S. Stands Frozen In Its Post-Korea Military Mold

How Small Nations Are Reacting to Moscow's Blandishments — Analysis of Southeast Asia Defense Treaty — Its Value to America Questioned.

Writer of the following article has traveled 14,000 miles through seven Asian countries during the last six weeks. He is a veteran observer in Asia, winner of a Pulitzer Award in 1951 for distinguished reporting of international affairs.

(FIRST OF TWO ARTICLES.)

HONG KONG, April 7.

AS USUAL, the United States is being outmaneuvered in Asia by the Communist bloc led by Soviet Russia. This is too bad, because with a certain amount of imagination and resourcefulness—qualities which are supposed to flourish in the American climate—it could be the other way 'round. At best, the American position in most of Asia today can be described as awkward. At very worst, it could lead to the loss of all Asia.

In the last year American policy in Asia has stood still, frozen stiff, inflexible, in the military mold of the post-Korean war period. By contrast Soviet Russia, especially in Southeast Asia, has been relaxed, yielding, flexible, moving ahead.

Where the Americans were clumsy the Communists were clever. Where America was uncertain Russia was confident.

Embarrassing though it is to report, it is America that appears to want to maintain East-West tensions. It is the Communists who seem to want to relax tensions.

U. S. in Own Policy Squeeze.

How did this happen?

One answer is that America has been the victim of its own rigidity in dealing with Asian problems. Another—and perhaps the most disturbing of all—is that the Communist system has shown far more flexibility and adaptability in dealing with Asia than American-style democracy.

This is a deliberate over-simplification, but if Soviet Premier Bulganin and party chief Khrushchev promise India 100 tractors you can bet they will be delivered on or before the deadline. If Secretary Dulles promises India 100 tractors—he hasn't—he will have to go ask Congress for the money.

What happened?

In one short year Communism, the international bully boy, replaced its scowl with a winning smile. The hand that held a stick now offered a carrot.

Unprepared for the switch, not knowing whether to scowl or smile, the United States was caught in a painful grimace. It continued to brandish its own stick and made very little use of its carrots.

Unable to Freeze Out Reds.

Basically, the question that faced Secretary Dulles on his recent Asian tour was this: Can the free but backward nations of Asia have American aid and friendship and at the same time have trade and diplomatic relations with the Communists?

Until recently at least, the American answer was an uncompromising "no." There are signs, however, that the answer is being modified to a reluctant "yes."

Ceylon, which is anti-Communist but sells rubber to Red China, is at last getting American aid despite the American embargo on trade with Red China. India, which is anti-Communist at home but gets along with the Reds abroad, will continue to receive American aid. And the United States has agreed to buy some surplus rice from Burma to feed famine-struck East Pakistan. Although anti-Communist at home, Burma finds it necessary to trade with the Communist bloc abroad.

This thaw in the United States attitude is welcome, unless the United States wants to freeze itself out of Asia. But the question that remains is whether the thaw will continue—or will be arrested by the big freeze of an American presidential election year?

Chou's Amiability Recalled.

The storm signals were plain when Red China's Foreign Minister Chou En-lai was so appallingly amiable at the Bandung conference nearly a year ago. Chou invited practically everybody present to come up to Peiping to see him.

Even before Bandung there was a remarkable procession of visitors to Peiping. After Bandung the flow increased—government leaders, trade delegations, journalists, educators, artists, all anxious to have a look at the new China, all seeing only what the Communists wanted them to see, all or practically all coming back impressed.

Prominent in the parade this year was Cambodia's Prime Minister Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who less than two years ago was vowing undying friendship for the United States.

The young prince, one of the cleverest politicians in southeast Asia, came back from Peiping with a treaty of friendship and plenty of nice things to say about the Red regime.

This doesn't necessarily mean that Norodom is pro-Communist, or that he is any less friendly to the United States, to which he owes a great deal including, in part at least, his country's independence. What it means is that Cambodia is a little country living very close to big Red China.

Thailand Sums It Up.

A spokesman for another small country, Thailand, put it this way: "Thailand supports the United States on practically all issues because our interests happen to coincide.

"But you don't hear me saying anything to provoke Communist China. Some statisticians differ as to whether there are 500,000,000 or 600,000,000 Chinese, but the figure is irrelevant. There are only 20,000,000 Thais."

He could have added that 3,000,000 of Thailand's 20,000,000 people are Chinese.

In neighboring, neutralist Burma, which is more dangerously exposed to Communist China than any other southeast Asian country, a Burmese diplomat put it another way:

"How do we expect to get along with China? Well, how does Finland get along with Russia?"

While the parade of visitors to Peiping continued uninterrupted the Russians executed their diplomatic grand slam. That was the triumphal Bulganin-Khrushchev tour of India, Burma and Afghanistan late last year.

Reds' Memory Lingers On.

Although the Russian leaders have long since departed, the memory of their visit is still green. While touring an ancient fort in New Delhi a few weeks ago, my Indian guide turned and said proudly:

"This is where Mr. Bulganin and Mr. Khrushchev stood."

His tone was the same as a serious American might have used to say, "George Washington slept here."

At the conclusion of their Indian tour the Soviet leaders received an unexpected assist from an unexpected quarter. Secretary Dulles joined the Portuguese foreign minister in a statement calling Goa, a Portuguese colony on Indian soil, a "far eastern province" of Portugal. Nothing could have more greatly angered the Indians or more greatly pleased the Russians.

While the Communists went about winning friends and influencing Asians with promises of trade and aid, the United States, clucked disapprovingly and paraded its military posture.

So much emphasis was placed on the military aspect of American anti-Communism, in both words and deeds, that America's good works in the economic field went largely unnoticed.

"It's not so much that we have been doing the wrong thing," said an American diplomat last week in Tokyo. "It's that we have been emphasizing the wrong thing."

Value of Defense Treaty.

America's only counter to the Communist diplomatic-economic offensive so far as this correspondent could observe was to fall back on the southeast Asia collective defense treaty.

A military exercise, originally billed by the United States Navy as a major maneuver to show that the treaty wasn't, as the Communists claimed, a "paper tiger," was held in Thailand in February.

What it turned out to be was a sort of armed forces' day demonstration of United States military men and equipment. Because Thailand was late in sending out invitations, Britain, Australia and New Zealand participated only at the last minute.

France, which had some warships lying in Saigon harbor only a few hours away, did not take part at all. Neither did Pakistan, which has enough troubles of its own without going to the defense of Thailand against some unidentified enemy.

However, American soldiers, sailors and marines had a good time exploring Bangkok's souvenir shops and night spots. And Bangkok profited handsomely.

The treaty exercise was followed by the treaty's council of foreign ministers' meeting at Karachi in March. Dulles seemed to have a pretty high opinion of this conference, which is perhaps natural since the treaty is his baby.

But this opinion was not shared by a number of others present including delegates as well as unofficial observers. As a British observer remarked, "SEATO shows more chinks than links."

Flaws in Manila Pact.

The seeds of the treaty's weakness were inherent in its birth at Manila in September 1954. They flowered at Karachi in a display of conflict of interest.

As one of its members remarked, "We are indeed a strange collection of bedfellows." One of the treaty's more obvious flaws was that among its eight members only three were Asian — the Philippines, Thailand and Pakistan.

The Southeast Asian group was also, and is, a geographical absurdity as a glance at its membership and a map will show. In fact, one of its members, Pakistan, is a geographical absurdity itself, with East and West Pakistan separated by 1000 miles.

The treaty might have overcome these more obvious flaws had it not been for one thing. Conceived in the wake of the French defeat in Indochina, it was viewed by the United States as an instrument of defense against Communist aggression only.

This was not only because the United States considered Communism the main enemy but also because the United States wanted to keep out of inter-Asian quarrels. Other member nations refused to go along with this view. So that the treaty could be signed in an atmosphere of harmony, Dulles wrote an "understanding" into it to the effect that where the United States was concerned the term "aggression" meant Communist aggression.

Payoff at Karachi.

At Karachi the chickens came home to roost. Pakistan, which is far more interested in its quarrel with India over Kashmir than in the Communist menace, got the treaty ministers to reaffirm an old United Nations resolution demanding that the Kashmir issue be settled by free elections. Pakistan also got support of the treaty members in its border dispute with Afghanistan.

This made both the Indians and the Afghans angry. And the United States found itself caught up in just what it had tried to avoid—involvement in inter-Asian territorial disputes.

Nor was Dulles able to get the strong anti-Communist stand he wanted. France and Britain paid only lip service to the anti-Communist cause. As for the Asian countries Dulles visited after Karachi, they may be aware of the Communist threat but they are not excited about it.

Needless to say, South Korea, Formosa and South Viet Nam did not need to be convinced.

As an American instrument of policy in Asia, the Manila treaty is probably more a liability than an asset. Militarily, the United States is the only power that has any teeth to put into it. And while the teeth should be kept strong and clean, this is not the time to bare them.

As for the treaty's economic side, the United States is the only western nation with the material resources to help the backward countries of Asia take their place in the twentieth century. But American aid will not, Dulles has repeated, be administered through the treaty group.

It seems obvious that as an instrument of policy the Manila treaty leaves something to be desired. Meanwhile, the United States has yet to come up with a policy of its own to combat Communist economic penetration of Asia.

The time is short.

COLD SNAP IN KREMLIN SQUARE

Priceless U.S. Medical Library In Building Rated as Fire Hazard

Armed Forces Agency Giving Invaluable Services—Move to Make It National Institution in Adequate New Quarters.

By JAMES DEAKIN

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.

A RAMSHACKLE 69-year-old government building, one of the few here still rated as a fire hazard, provides precarious housing for a priceless scientific collection which has been called "the largest and most important medical library in the world."

That description was given by a Hoover Commission task force, composed largely of physicians, in referring to the Armed Forces Medical Library, a hardy stepchild which is rendering valuable service under severe handicaps of financial neglect and lack of space.

The task force on federal medical services recommended establishment of a national library of medicine incorporating the present collection, a new building and "an adequate budget."

94 Pct. of Space Filled.

Almost a million books, statistical studies, treatises, scientific publications and reports used extensively by doctors, researchers and scientists now are crowded into space adequate for about one-third that number. Contrary to generally-accepted library procedures 94 per cent of the shelf space is filled.

Books, many of them fragile with age, are stored in damp basements, in rickety wooden shelves, in converted coal bins where plaster dust drifts down from the ceiling—anywhere space can be found or improvised. Chicken wire has been nailed up on one balcony to keep books from tumbling down on library workers below.

Built in 1887, the now-dilapidated red brick building at Seventh street and Independence avenue was found unsuitable for library use 37 years ago. It was one of Washington's three government buildings still classified as a fire trap by the Public Buildings Service in 1948, and this rating has never been changed. A few blocks away, in sharp contrast, is the modernistic, white-domed National Gallery of Art.

With only one small elevator and one central staircase and lacking adequate fire protection devices, the library is a potential tinderbox for employes and an obviously unsafe repository for an irreplaceable collection of scientific data from all over the world.

Hill-Kennedy Bill.

To remedy the situation, Democratic Senators Lister Hill of Alabama and John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts have introduced a bill to establish a national library of medicine and erect a new building. Hearings on the measure are scheduled Tuesday and Wednesday before a Senate subcommittee on health, of which Hill is chairman.

Backers of the authorization bill are optimistic about its chances for congressional approval at this session, but if it does pass an appropriation must still be sought for the estimated $6,639,000 required to build a new library.

On several occasions over the past 37 years, Congress has been loath to put up money for the project, despite the urging of the American Medical Association and numerous other professional groups. A new library was first authorized in 1919, but no funds were approved. Later attempts followed in 1938 and 1941, before war temporarily halted consideration of such projects.

A painting in the office of Lt. Col. Frank B. Rogers of the Army Medical Corps, director of the library, is mute testimony to the years of legislative neglect and efforts to obtain a new building. The picture, depicting plans for a "new" Army medical library, was painted in 1918.

Task Force's Comment.

Discussing the library, the medical task force declared in its report: "Today the largest and most important medical library in the world is the Armed Forces Medical Library.

"No other medical agency of the Federal Government serves the future of medical research so intimately and so widely as does this unequaled collection of books, journals and bibliographic services.

"Originally organized for military use in 1836, this library has become a great national research institution far surpassing the nature, size and level of activities required by the armed forces. It is in fact the national library of medicine of the United States."

The task force included two St. Louisans associated with Washington University, Dr. Evarts A. Graham, professor emeritus of surgery at the school of medicine, and Dr. Otto W. Brandhorst, dean emeritus of the school of dentistry.

On a modest annual allotment of $1,250,000 from the Defense Department, the library provides a variety of services. It fills over 100,000 orders a year for photoduplication of medical articles and lends more than 30,000 books a year to other libraries. Its staff conducts about 1000 searches a month for information needed by doctors and scientists.

Importance of this reference work cannot be overestimated. Hospitals, medical schools and research institutions intending to pursue a particular line of research frequently check first with the library to see if the project already has been tried.

Prevents Many Wasted Hours.

One 3-by-5 card, summarizing results of a completed experiment, Senator Hill has said, "can keep a dozen institutions from spending tens of thousands of dollars duplicating that same experiment.

"More important still, it may mean that a dozen scientists who might otherwise have wasted time repeating that experiment may instead leap years ahead in reaching the solution to the problem. . . ."

In World War II, the library's collection of works on diseases of other countries was used extensively by military physicians in treating soldiers with rare symptoms, particularly those of tropical diseases.

The library receives, catalogues and makes readily available scientific publications from every major country of the world. About 100,000 journals and research papers come in each year. There is an active exchange of publications with Russian scientific groups.

To inform physicians of current medical findings, the library publishes a monthly "current list of medical literature" and an annual catalogue.

The Hoover Commission's praise for the library as a sort of national clearing house of scientific information was in striking contrast to the facilities provided for that service.

There are, for instance, no controls against the humidity for which Washington is notorious. Steaming summer heat damages book covers and paper. In the basement, thousands of volumes are stored close to heat and water pipes and outmoded electric wiring. A few years ago, a water pipe broke, ruining dozens of books.

Files Go Back to 1094.

In these unprepossessing surroundings, the student of history can find first editions of classic texts by such scientific pioneers as Darwin, Jenner, Lister, Lavoisier, Pasteur, Agassiz, Osler and Florence Nightingale, together with a treasure house of medical memorabilia.

Writings in every language on every conceivable scientific subject, from anatomy to zoology, from asthma to zygoma, are jammed into the crowded shelves. The earliest manuscript is dated 1094. A German work on anatomy of the brain, dated 1584, contrasts with the latest public health statistics from Japan.

"In a very real sense," Col. Rogers told the Post-Dispatch, "The collection is priceless, because it is irreplaceable."

Although no estimate of value has ever been made, "it is surely in the millions of dollars," he added.

The director sums up the library's problem simply "What we haven't got, and what we've got to have, is room for these books." With a mile of new shelf space needed each year, it has been necessary to rent temporary space in Cleveland.

Suggestions for location of the proposed new building have centered around the national institutes of health in nearby Bethesda, Md., where space is available. The library presently has 101,000 square feet of floor space for its 961,631 items; it needs 299,000 square feet.

Possibly Used by Beaumont.

Founded in 1836, the institution originally was known as the Library of the Surgeon General's Office. Officials believe one of the first persons to use the few books granted by a reluctant Congress may have been Dr. William Beaumont of St. Louis, the Army surgeon who described the digestive process.

Beaumont treated a Canadian voyager with a freak abdominal wound which left a "window" in his stomach. The experiments were encouraged by Surgeon General Joseph Lovell, founder of the library.

Under the 30-year directorship of John Shaw Billings, the library became national and international in scope. Maj. Walter Reed, the conquerer of yellow fever, served as its director for a time.

The Hill-Kennedy bill would give the library express legal authority for the work it now does for other federal agencies and would remove its operating expenses from the defense budget. Under the bill, a board of regents composed of the surgeon generals of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Public Health Service, and the Librarian of Congress, together with 12 persons appointed by the President, would administer the national library.

Since introducing the bill, Senator Hill told the Post-Dispatch, he has received "a very large number" of indorsements from medical, dental and hospital associations and from "outstanding men in the medical research field from all over the United States." No opposition has yet been expressed to the measure, he added.

Important Conservation Gains Contained in Farm Measure

Bill Called Greatest Advance Since Founding of Forest Service by Theodore Roosevelt and Gifford Pinchot.

By GEORGE H. HALL

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 7.

THE VIOLENT election-year controversy over price-support features of the current farm bill has obscured the fact that the pending legislation contains significant advances in the field of conservation.

These advances are considered so important by conservationists that one of them, a United States Forest Service officer, was moved to exclaim:

"If this bill passes it will mean the greatest gain for forest and water conservation since the founding of the Forest Service 50 years ago by Theodore Roosevelt and Gifford Pinchot."

Provisions in the bill would enable the Forest Service which operates mainly in the western part of the United States, to move eastward with conservation programs that have proved sound in a half-century of experience. Under the legislation large amounts of money would become available for planting trees and cover on up to 17,000,000 acres of land.

It is thought passage of the measure would, for example, encourage Southerners to retire excess cotton acreage in favor of planting fast-growing timber for pulp, posts, mine supports, boxwood and wood plastics. Even corn and wheat land would take some timber.

Different versions of the farm legislation have been passed by the Senate and House and yesterday a 10-man joint conference committee completed the job of compromising the differences. The bill now goes back to the Senate and House and, if approved, to President Eisenhower for signature or veto.

Wide Scope of Service.

The scope of the activities of the Forest Service, which is a division of the Department of Agriculture, is not generally realized. The service administers about 150 national forests, together with land utilization projects, experimental forests and other land aggregating 188,000,000 acres, or about a third of the total land area of the United States.

Some 180,000,000 acres are in national forests in 39 states, Alaska and Puerto Rico. This year's Forest Service budget requests, which are separate from possible farm bill authorizations, are for $40,000,000 for forest portection and management, $24,000,000 for roads and trails, $11,000,000 for federal-state-private forestry co-operation, $9,000,000 for research, $5,000,000 for fighting fires and $5,000,000 for pest control.

The service is responsible for applying technical methods to the growing and harvesting of timber; for managing watersheds to protect sources of water for power, irrigation, navigation, and municipal and domestic use; for providing recreational facilities and maintaining wildlife resources, and for the regulation of livestock grazing.

The latter function was a subject of controversy three years ago when a bill affecting grazing was before Congress. The measure was written by western stockmen and was introduced in the House by former Representative Wesley A. D'Ewart (Rep.), Montana, now serving (though not yet confirmed by the Senate) as Assistant Secretary of the Interior. Opponents called the D'Ewart bill a "land grab"; supporters said it provided for "home rule on the range." The Forest Service opposed it strongly; it did not pass.

Little Administration Credit.

Conservationists are not inclined to give the Administration too much credit for the conservation features of the farm bill. There was no mention of trees or wildlife in the original proposals drawn up under the direction of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. When the conservationists called this to Benson's attention, however, Benson assigned experts to work with them in incorporating conservation principles in the bill. Most of this was done in the Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee with the co-operation of Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota.

When talk about the Administration "soil bank" proposal became current last fall a committee on natural resources, headed by Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, president of the Wildlife Management Institute and former chief of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service. Acting as individuals and not as representatives of organizations, they engaged Dr. Spencer M. Smith, a teacher at the University of Maryland, as secretary and lobbyist.

As a result of their leadership the 80-page bill is interlaced with numerous words, phrases and paragraphs bearing on conservation, and it contains an entire new section — Title Six—having to do with assistance to the states for tree planting and reforestation.

Title Six opens with a declaration by Congress "that building up and maintaining a level of timber-growing stocks adequate to meet the nation's domestic needs for a dependable future supply of industrial wood is essential to the public welfare and security; that utilizing the more than 50,000,000 acres of idle non-federal and federal lands for this purpose would not only add to the economic strength of the nation but also bring increased public benefits from the other values associated with forest cover; and that it is the policy of Congress that the Secretary of Agriculture in order to encourage, promote and assure fully adequate future resources of readily available timber should assist states in undertaking needed programs of tree planting."

Submission of Plan.

Any state forester or equivalent state official could submit a reforestation plan to the Secretary of Agriculture. On approval, the Secretary would furnish advice, technical assistance and money to the state. For planting on non-federal land the Federal Government would be barred from spending during any year more than the amount spent by the state during the same year.

Title Six as it passed the Senate also contained a section providing for a Department of Agriculture price reporting service for basic forest products. The object would be to provide owners of small forest properties with up-to-date information on markets and prices. This was opposed by the lumber industry and was removed by the Senate-House conferees.

Most of the conservation improvements were woven into Title Two of the bill. This is the Soil Bank Act, which is divided into an acreage reserve program and a conservation reserve program. In the Title Two declaration of policy, for example, such phrases as "to protect the national soil, water and forest and wildlife resources from waste and depletion" and "to carry out a program of soil, water, forest and wildlife conservation" were inserted among statements about increasing farm income and reducing crop surpluses.

Similar phrases, many having technical applications, appear from time time in the pages of the bill. They direct the Secretary of Agriculture to bear part of the cost of establishing and maintaining "vegetable cover or water storage facilities or other soil, water, wildlife, or forest conserving uses." The conservationist view of soil, water, wildlife and forest conservation as a unity is apparent. The original proposals did not conform to this view by omitting wildlife and trees. Conservationists also include recreational facilities in an over-all program.

Land Retirement Discussed.

The idea of retiring some cropland more or less permanently has been under discussion for five or six years because of increasing productivity of the land and the failure of farm programs to hold down surpluses. Two forms of retiring land were proposed by the Administration this year.

The main purpose of the "acreage reserve" was to clean out surplus stocks of wheat, cotton and corn. Storage costs for all Government-held surpluses have been running at $1,000,000 a day; the existence of the surpluses tends to depress the market. The acreage reserve applies to the 1956 through 1959 crops of wheat, cotton, corn, peanuts, rice and tobacco. It was estimated that 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 acres of cropland should be put in reserve for four years; the Government rental would be at least half of the gross income from this land in recent years.

The second part of the soil bank plan is the conservation reserve into which it is estimated 25,000,000 acres could be put over a period of 10 or 15 years. Contracts would be for not less than three years. Any specific acreages of cropland could be placed in this reserve; annual Government payments would be based on a variety of factors and would be aimed at providing "a fair and reasonable" return. No owner in any state could receive more than $5000 a year; the Government would pay costs of putting the land to conservation use.

Statement to Congress.

The conservationists' position was outlined to Congress in a statement by Dewey Anderson, director of the Public Affairs Institute and chairman of a special committee appointed by Gabrielson. Anderson also is chairman of the Forest Conservation Society, of which Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, widow of the first American professional forester and former Governor of Pennsylvania, is president.

Anderson said the original soil bank plan to establish and maintain a balance between supply and demand of farm products would be so costly that other benefits should be included if it was to be justified. He said:

"The only major item of agricultural production which is not surplus to the needs of the nation, and which will become increasingly scarcer as our population grows, despite changing uses and proportionately lessened demand, is timber and wood.

"Wholesale lumber prices reached their all-time peak during 1955. Viewing the long-term trends, wholesale lumber prices increased 283 per cent from 1926 levels, while wholesale prices of all commodities increased only 72 per cent. The diminishing amount of accessible timber of good quality is a principal cause of this tremendous increase in price."

Anderson said that if timber demands in the year 2000 are to be met domestic growth of saw timber must be increased by as much as 100 per cent or more. He estimated that present state and federal nursery capacity is 750,000,000 trees and that 400,000,000 additional trees a year would be needed if a half-million conservation reserve acres were planted to trees each year.

The multi-billion dollar soil bank would be financed substantially by urban taxpayers, Anderson noted. He said city dwellers could expect a healthier national economy in return, and should reasonably expect increased recreational opportunities.

These opportunities will become imperative, Anderson said, because of the growing population and the expected growth of leisure time brought about by automation. He said there are indications that by 1965 annual vacations for industrial workers probably will be six weeks instead of the two now customary.

HARRIMAN SIGNS BILL REDUCING INCOME TAXES

ALBANY, N.Y., April 7 (AP) —Gov. Averell Harriman yesterday approved a bill reducing the state tax on 1955 personal incomes by $40,000,000.

Harriman's action was somewhat of a surprise in the light of his sharp attack on the Republican measure as favoring the upper brackets.

The Governor, an often-mentioned possibility for the Democratic presidental nomination, says he is "not an active candidate."

Harriman said he had no choice but to sign the measure or "to deny any general tax relief this year. . . ."

The bill gives a 15 per cent reduction on the first $100 of tax due and 10 per cent of the next $200. The maximum cut is $35. New York collects about $400,000,000 of its 1½-billion-dollar annual income through the personal income tax.

The present rate is on a graduated scale ranging from 2 per cent on the first $1000 of taxable income up to 7 per cent.

Exemptions include $1000 for a single person, $2500 for a married couple and $400 for each additional dependent.

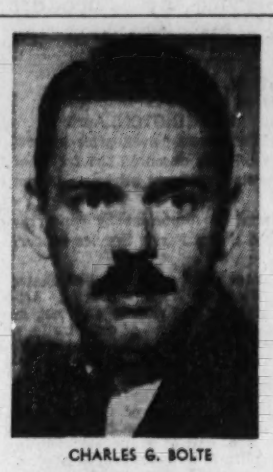
Total Disarmament Held To Be Only Way To Peace

By
THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.



CHARLES G. BOLTE

THE PRICE OF PEACE: A PLAN FOR DISARMAMENT, by Charles G. Bolte. (Beacon Press, 108 pgs., with index, $2.50.)

MOST of the discussion about a possible atomic war starts with the belief that mutual deterrents exist. This means that since the United States and Russia can destroy each other overnight neither nation will start such a suicidal conflict. Charles G. Bolte in "The Price of Peace" begs us to realize that a situation could develop in which the deterrent would no longer deter.

Let us imagine, he writes, that Russia acquires the power to destroy all American cities, all the European cities and all the American overseas air bases in a single surprise attack. The Russians then inform the European governments that their only quarrel is with the United States and that European nations will be spared if they will declare their neutrality and prevent the take-off of United States bombers from their overseas bases.

How many of these governments, he asks, would choose suicide for their peoples?

Or let us suppose that the Red Army marches into Western Europe. "NATO is all prepared to reply with the book answer: tactical A-bombs, whether the Soviet forces use them or not. But the advance is accompanied by a Soviet statement: 'We have no quarrel with the United States, only with the reactionary governments of Western Europe. We will not be the first to use atomic weapons. We march to liberate the workers of the West, not to incinerate them. But if these weapons are used against our troops, we will be compelled in self-defense to destroy the cities of Western Europe and the United States, as well as the overseas bases from which bombers might seek to attack the Soviet Fatherland.'"

THE choices facing the European governments would be to fight only with conventional weapons against vastly superior forces or knuckle under. The American President would then have to decide whether to retaliate with A-bombs and H-bombs, thus inviting the destruction of American cities, or to abandon his European allies.

With these possibilities in mind Mr. Bolte concludes that the atomic stalemate is not self-perpetuating and cannot last indefinitely. In consequence an "enforceable" disarmament plan is not merely an ideal arrangement that can be considered at leisure. Time is working against this, even if nothing but comparative military strength is taken into account, because when Russia reaches its optimum power it can maneuver from a superior position. The perfection of the intercontinental missile, for instance, would further jeopardize all disarmament negotiations, for then not only the bomb but its carrier could be so concealed as to escape all inspection.

So the drive for peace, in Mr. Bolte's opinion, cannot wait on events in the hope that they will be more favorable to the acceptance of an enforceable disarmament plan. Future events are likely to be unfavorable.

In presenting his own "scale model" for a workable plan Mr. Bolte analyzes the present disarmament policy of the United States along with various proposals—such as President Eisenhower's aerial inspection plan—which have been made by the United States and Russia. He finds that all of them lack an essential feature. Aside from not going far enough each would put one nation or the other at a disadvantage and hence would be finally unacceptable to one or the other. His own plan stipulates that in each stage of progress toward the ultimate goal the reduction of arms would not affect the relative strength.

THE ultimate goal is universal and complete disarmament with inspection and enforcement powers lodged in an international control organization. None of the features of Mr. Bolte's plan will be new to those who have followed the international discussions of disarmament. What he has done, however, is to outline a system of preliminary organization and permanent operation that has the appearance of being mechanically feasible.

Inspection, of course is basic in any disarmament plan; and while atomic material could be concealed the assembly of airplanes necessary to their effective delivery to a target could be detected as of now. Since both the United States and Russia have agreed in principle to inspection Mr. Bolte believes that a workable system will ultimately be politically acceptable to both.

But inspection is not enforcement, as Mr. Bolte says, and enforcement by an organization lifted above the national level is what governments and peoples find hardest to accept. Is this an insuperable obstacle? Mr. Bolte thinks it may be because it would require a partial surrender of every nation's sovereignty.

The only hope lies in the fact enunciated by President Eisenhower: "There is no alternative to peace." To this Mr. Bolte would add: "And there can be no peace, that may not be instantly disrupted, without complete and enforceable disarmament."

WIDOW'S WEB, by Ursula Curtiss. (Dodd, Mead & Co., 191 pgs., $2.95.)

PHOTOGRAPHS by Fennister, text by Torrant, have been familiar bylines in leading magazines before the two accept separate offers too attractive to turn down. After a long separation, Torrant goes to his friend's home to be told by a stranger occupying the house that Fennister has been dead for a year. He has committed suicide. Investigating the death, Torrant finds that his friend's suicide has been maneuvered by Annabelle, Fennister's widow, and traces her to a small town near Boston. Annabelle, who has collected a sizable sum of insurance from her husband's death, has come into another fortune. Her employer and his wife have been killed in an automobile accident and she is their beneficiary. Torant rents a room near Annabelle and waits for her to make just one false move. Highly entertaining. A shocking denouement.

"The Skyscraper in the Country": The Price Building, Bartlesville, Okla.

Architect of the Organic

THE STORY OF THE TOWER, by Frank Lloyd Wright. (Horizon Press, 133 pgs., $6.)

AN AMERICAN ARCHITECTURE, by Frank Lloyd Wright. (Horizon Press, 272 pgs., $10.)

Reviewed by
PATRICIA KREBS

THE country skyscraper has intrigued Frank Lloyd Wright about as long as shadowy city canyons have infuriated him. The first "city in the park" was built 25 years ago, but the new Price Building in Bartlesville, Okla., is the "full realization" of the skyscraper "where it belongs—in the country."

Pictures show the erection of the steel and concrete central shaft which encases elevators, air supply ducts and plumbing pipes. From this trunk project the floors; the walls hang from them. This backbone takes the weight and the outer spaces allow the sun and view which heavy masonry slabs prevent.

Blueprints of the floor plan show how Wright has dovetailed apartments and offices in the building. Close-ups of the building materials and processes present a piece-by-piece understanding of the final integration of copper, glass, and concrete bound with steel mesh.

The short text consists of revised earlier writings on "the truly modern skyscraper." It furnishes one chapter in Wright's voluminous prescription for the way free men should build in the Machine Age.

WRIGHT'S crusade for our ideal architecture moves at full steam in "An American Architecture," a collection of his writings. He explains his principles, praises the patterns of nature and rages at Greek temple skyscrapers, among other things.

Architecture is "life itself taking form" and should embody beauty and individuality. It has political personality: the "specious old box" for dictatorships; organic architecture for a democracy.

This architecture of order and integrity is well-programmed by the editing of Edgar Kaufman who has done extensive work in architecture and design.

Organic architecture uses tools and materials in ways appropriate to their natures. Its form serves function and natural surroundings. Bricks of natural, tawny or ruddy hues forming a substantial house base will bring the building closer to earth. Overhanging roofs protect walls from freezing and thawing, provide shade and suggest the primary principle of a house, shelter. In the Midwest, the gently rolling landscape is emphasized in the horizontal planes of structures.

HISTORY

More Like a Prose Poem

THE UNITED STATES IN HISTORY, by James T. Shotwell. (Simon and Schuster, 234 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by
A. MERVYN DAVIES

THE author of this short history of the United States—so short as to be scarcely 75,000 words long—is something more than the doyen of American historians, more than the dean of Columbia professors — he began teaching there fifty years ago.

He is more even than the foremost American planner for world peace — one who took a leading part in blueprinting both the League of Nations and the United Nations. He is a poet.

That fact might seem irrelevant to a review of a serious work of history. But the truth is, it is not. For it explains a quality of the book that would otherwise be puzzling — the fact that unlike most histories this one reads at times more like a prose poem than a work of sober scholarship.

That is not intended to be a criticism. Indeed, it could be the highest praise. For we are in such a prosaic age that we have lost poetic feeling about everything, not least about our nation's history and destiny.

TWO years ago Mr. Shotwell published a collection of poems in which he expressed his strong conviction that world peace can be attained. One reviewer said of the volume: "It offers an eloquent statement of triumphant belief." The same verdict can be passed about "The United States in History."

The first draft of the book was privately distributed many years ago to Dr. Shotwell's colleagues at Versailles—Aristide Briand, Gilbert Murray, Viscount Cecil—who found themselves in sudden need of increasing their knowledge of the United States and its history. It was written specifically to educate them. Now Mr. Shotwell has revised it and brought it up to date. And it can still serve a valuable educational purpose.

It can be regarded as both the last will and testament of a truly great American and as an apologia pro vita sua.

The theme is that of an unrepentant Wilsonian democrat — the part that America has played in the ever-broadening struggle for peace and freedom through an ever more comprehensive justice. Mr. Shotwell is not ashamed to be among those who feel that a nation's morality is the real heart of its history, its moral and spiritual life the final test of its durability and vitality.

THUS for him the greatest era in that history was the movement for reform which Wilson personified, and the statement of the 14 Points: "What we seek is the reign of law based on the consent of the governed and sustained by the organized opinion of mankind," is a statement of lasting purpose.

It is valuable to have his reminder that those who think that the League had little or nothing to its credit are quite wrong. For the League, he says, intervened in some 44 international disputes, none of which could find settlement outside it, and some of which held the threat of war, and on at least one occasion it stopped a war that had already begun—that was when Greece invaded Bulgaria in 1925.

Our own experience with the UN—especially in its effort to stop the Korean war —should make us better able to appraise the League's work than were those who judged it entirely on its failure to prevent World War II.

It is amazing that the kind of inspiration about the meaning of our history that this book contains should be given to us by a man in his eighties. He strikes a note of faith and hope that is too seldom heard in these days of despair and disillusion.

A Man Fated to Be Disillusioned

New Biography Explores the Complexity of Henry Adams

HENRY ADAMS, by Elizabeth Stevenson. (Macmillan, 425 pgs., $6.)

WILLIAM BLEIFUSS

UPON reading Elizabeth Stevenson's biography of Henry Adams, the enigmatic historian, medievalist, and Cassandra crying out to an inimical America, the reader encounters the critical intelligence of a man who merits examination and appreciation. But the book is also disheartening, for it reveals a man fated for disillusionment. Adams's description of his grandfather, John Quincy Adams, fits himself equally as well, for each was "always fighting on the outskirts—a kind of free lance, following the march of forces which he never commanded."

This detailed biography of the complex and demanding Adams not only records his observations, disaffections, enthusiasms, and soul-searchings, which could be those of any thinking person today, but also creates anew the issues important in America during his lifetime (1838-1918). Furthermore this is the first full-length biography of Adams.

Perhaps few would accept his cynicism and fatalism; certainly his effort to make history reflect laws of science has won little respect from historians. However, his denunciation of nineteenth century politicians and exploiters of the public purse seems contemporary enough. His two novels about politics have even been reprinted within recent years. Seventy-five years ago they were among the first of their type to be published.

HIS dismay with General Grant's administration led him to dabble in politics in the 1870s, but his efforts at reform failed. He was unsuccessful in his efforts to keep the party of Independents or Liberal Republicans alive during this time. Complexity and duplicity seemed to multiply side by side.

The suicide of his wife in 1885—an incident he does not refer to in his autobiography, "The Education of Henry Adams"—substantiated what he had intellectually come to accept—that happiness was but fleeting and that civilization was the product of forces running irresponsibly.

Direct descendant of two Presidents, Adams believed as a young man that he too was destined to have an important part in national affairs, but aside from friendships and dinners with Presidents Harrison and Roosevelt and a post in London during the Civil War, he never had the chance to influence policy except for some undercover maneuvering on behalf of Cuba in the mid-nineties. His disciplined, devoted, and informed mind was ready to solve the myriad problems facing his country, but no one in power cared to listen.

AN inveterate traveler, perhaps because he was never really at home in the United States after the death of his wife, he found satisfaction with the simplicity, straightforwardness, and self-forgetfulness of the Tahitians. Upon returning to his home across from the White House, he found merely boredom; "civilized life," he wrote in a letter in 1894, "seems to me more hopelessly idiotic."

This idiocy seemed to manifest itself in multiplicity, for Adams had discovered the virtue of unity, a quality that he felt characterized the twelfth century, when idealization of the Virgin and the splendor of the Cathedral at Chartres and the Abbey of Mont St. Michel provided a base for society.

In the Virgin men found love above law, logic, or the Church. Here was a unified society balanced by faith, albeit fated shortly to succumb to the multiplicity coming in with the Renaissance, rationalism, science, and the Reformation.

Adams's predilection for the Middle Ages and his willingness to accept the creature comforts of civilization (he enjoyed his inherited income of $25,000 a year) are summed up in a letter written in 1902: "My idea of paradise is a perfect automobile going thirty miles an hour on a smooth road to a twelfth century cathedral."

HIS veneration for the twelfth century led him from the intellectual position he had supported for 60 years to a feeling that intuition was above reason, love above logic, and art above science. Fearing his life had been wasted, "The Education" (1907) is a record of his failure, a warning to fellow Americans, and a herald of possible explosion and dissipation, for the forces of civilization (the dynamo being its emblem) were in his opinion accelerating and splintering. Adams preferred the world of the Virgin, even if he could not believe in her divinity, to the world of the dynamo.

Miss Stevenson explores the complexity of Adams and surveys adequately his complicated life and his achievements, but we rarely see deeply enough into his mind to understand adequately why he was what he was. To do that, however, would require another Henry Adams, and since there are few of those, the next best thing is to supplement the rich multiplicity of this book with the unity of Adams's own autobiography and his epical "Mont Saint Michel and Chartres."

Distillate Of Fantasy And Whimsy

THE BEST FROM FANTASY AND SCIENCE FICTION, FIFTH SERIES, edited by Anthony Boucher. (Doubleday and Co., 256 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by
SCOTT NICHOLS

IN this collection from the 1955 files of the Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction, Mr. Boucher presents a distillate of the essence that gives his magazine its distinctive flavor. Here are the delicate fantasies, the sophisticated whimsies, the tongue-in-cheek ironies and slapstick, the emphasis on the small detailed canvas that has given the Magazine of F and SF its almost New Yorker slant. The stories are uniformly competent and well-constructed and, if Mr. Boucher's love of the droll and the precious tempers his selection, the result is still excellent.

The two best selections are certainly Charles Beaumont's "The Vanishing American," a delightful fantasy about an invisible gentleman's adventure atop a stone library lion named King Richard; and Walter M. Miller's "A Canticle for Liebowitz," which tells of a post-atomic, anti-intellectual age in which the Catholic Church is the last defender of knowledge in a new Dark Age. Worth mentioning too is Mildred Clingerman's "The Last Prophet," a breathless little story about an amiable bore who had a message and couldn't find an audience.

Of the 21 stories in the collection only Alice Elenor Jones's "Created He Them" falls completely flat. In this bit of wifely swish about the post-disaster society in which only the fortunate few can have normal children, Mrs. Jones on occasion rises to the literary excellence of the detergent commercial.

Harriman of New York — Presidential Possibility

the Roosevelt Administration and council chairman from 1937 to 1940.

As World War II approached he was given greater responsibilities. In January 1941 he was put in charge of the raw material division of the Office of Production Management, and several months later was sent to England as a lend-lease expediter. This job brought him in close relations with Prime Minister Churchill and other British war leaders. It also took him to Russia with Churchill to confer with Generalissimo Stalin.

In 1943 he was named Ambassador to Russia and for a time in 1946 he was also Ambassador to Great Britain, following the suicide of Ambassador John G. Winant. He was the only American ever to serve in this dual capacity.

Truman appointed him Secretary of Commerce in 1946 after Henry A. Wallace was fired for interfering in American foreign policy. He resigned the secretaryship in 1948 to take charge of the European end of the Marshall Plan aid and in 1950 Truman made him a special assistant to the President. When the Democratic Administration left office in 1953, he was director of the Mutual Security Agency.

In his various positions, Harriman was in close association with Roosevelt, Truman, Churchill, Anthony Eden, the late Secretary of Defense, James V. Forrestal, State Secretaries James F. Byrnes, Dean Acheson and George C. Marshall. As Ambassador to Russia he had regular monthly meetings with Stalin, a fixture enjoyed by no other American Ambassador before or since. As Marshall Plan Ambassador in Europe, he met the leading statesmen and business men of all the free European countries. He attended all of Roosevelt's international conferences and was with Truman at Potsdam.

Whatever his power and influence in these high circles, he was unable to communicate his ideas to the public or to Washington correspondents. His formal speeches were dull and his private conversations with those who could report his ideas to the reading public were so vague there was little that could be written. He was described as "Honest Ave, the hair splitter" and "Misty Bill"—a reference to the William he dropped from his name.

Harriman's contributions to the war and postwar rehabilitations are just becoming known. Some of his official reports, long classified as secret, have been made public in the Yalta papers, the Forrestal diaries and the Truman memoirs. They reveal that he was among the first to recognize that the Russians were playing a double game with the United States and its allies and that their pledges were not to be trusted. Truman sent him to Tokyo to talk with General Douglas MacArthur and he sensed what Truman had not felt at the Wake Island conference—that MacArthur disagreed with White House and the Joint Chiefs of Staff on the Korean war strategy.

When Harriman let it be known in 1954 that he would run for the Democratic nomination for Governor under the sponsorship of Carmine de Sapio, boss of Tammany Hall, against Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, many cynical observers thought that De Sapio had found a plump pigeon in the multi-millionaire to finance the New York City Democratic machine.

Harriman, with all his seeming shyness, has been driven by an urge to win, whether in polo, where he was rated an 8-goal man, bridge, croquet and diplomacy. He and De Sapio brushed off young Roosevelt and went on to win over Republican Senator Irving Ives, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's associate, who earlier had been listed as a shoo-in victor.

Harriman won by only a 11,125 vote margin in a total of more than five million votes. Of his own total, 264,093 came from the Liberal party. The legislature went heavily Republican.

But he had won and that's what counts in politics. His election made him, as it has other New York governors, Democratic and Republican, a logical possibility for the presidency.

He lived up to his new position and possibilities. He had always been indefatigably industrious, having the power to concentrate. He hired an able press secretary in Charles Van Devander, a former Washington correspondent, and accepted his suggestions just as Roosevelt had had the services of Louis McHenry Howe and Dewey those of James C. Hagerty, now White House press secretary.

Called Good Governor.

The less partisan New York newspapers have editorialized that Harriman has given the state a good administration during the last two years. He has employed able advisers, such as Paul Appleby as his budget director, and Isador Lubin as his economic councillor, both old New Dealers. He has not, as the upstaters feared, shown undue preference for New York City and Tammany Hall.

Those who have known Harriman over the years say that his election has greatly changed his official personality, that he is more confident of himself, more relaxed and is a better mixer in crowds. His speeches have become more specific but he still delivers them with a throaty voice and broad accent that reflects his Groton-Yale-Long Island background. On television he has become more photogenic and looks 10 years younger than his 64 years.

In his "inactive" campaign for the Democratic nomination, he is getting the experienced and active help from De Sapio and Democratic State Chairman Michael J. Prendergast. On the national scale he has the less obvious but equally effective efforts of former Democratic National Committee Chairman Frank E. McKinney, who was fired by Stevenson, and former Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan, who is angered because Stevenson would not accept his farm program.

New York—96 Delegates.

Even if Harriman did not have his distinguished record of public service, he, as the New York Governor, would have to be considered at any Democratic National Convention. The state will have 96 delegates at the Chicago convention this year, over 14 per cent of the bare majority of 667 needed for the nomination. That is more than the combined strength of Missouri and Texas, or of Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina.

The party leaders, who really run conventions, will be looking beyond the nomination to the election. New York has 45 votes in the electoral college and Harriman won the state for the governorship in 1954.

Harriman's chances will depend on how the Democratic situation develops between now and Aug. 13. He has overcome some of the handicaps of his great wealth during his governorship. President Eisenhower is reported to have called him "a Park Avenue Truman." As such he will make an interesting figure at the convention and would be a paradoxical Democratic presidential candidate—a multi-millionaire representing the political views of the farmers, Negroes and the low-income groups.

MASS PRICE CLIMB MARKS GRAIN TRADE

CHICAGO, April 7 (AP)—Grain futures on the Board of Trade drove upward this week in a mass price climb which hasn't been equaled for months. Oats were the only exceptions to outstandingly strong activity, ending the week with net gains of less than 2 cents. The star performers were the soybean contracts, driving upward 8½ to 15 cents a bushel. Wheat, rye and soybeans scored a sweep in registering new high marks for the season in all contracts, and corn hit new tops in all but the nearby May delivery.

Wheat closed the week 7¾ to 9¾ cents a bushel higher; corn 4⅞ to 5⅞ higher; oats 1⅛ to 1⅞ higher; rye 3 to 5¼ higher; soybeans 8½ to 15 higher, and lard 27 to 47 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Four considerations had their affect on wheat contracts. There was especially, blossoming in midweek, a feeling among traders that Congress may produce soon a package farm bill which President Eisenhower could endorse, despite the likelihood that it will put off flexible price supports for the basic commodities for another year and extend fixed price supports at 90 per cent of parity.

HOG MARKET UPTURN FOR FOURTH STRAIGHT WEEK

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., April 7—"Aided by moderate receipts, the hog market extended its rise into the fourth week and reached the best level since last fall," reported the Producers Live Stock Marketing Association.

"Hogs registered a net gain of 25@50c for the week and are approximately $3 a hundredweight or 23 per cent above the March 1 level. High for the week was Monday when a few lots of select offerings reached $16.25, and the closing peak was $16. Bulk of mixed butcher hogs Friday cashed at $15.25@15.50 cwt.

"Recovery in the porker trade stems from seasonally smaller runs and reports of a 7 per cent drop in the spring pig crop as compared with a year ago. Earlier indications had been for a reduction of only 3 per cent.

"A broad demand for steer and heifer cattle above average good lifted prices for these 25@50c, although lower grades managed to close little better than steady. High choice and prime 1203-1078 lb. steers topped at $21.50, and bulk of choice was $19@20. Veal calves declined $2 in sympathy with weakness in the dressed product and closing sales were downward from $25.

"Influenced by smaller numbers, lambs gained 50c@$1 or more, and a deck of choice and prime woolskins reached $21.50 for the highest price since early October. A few good and choice spring lambs brought $21@22.50."

U.S. TREASURIES SLUMP

NEW YORK, April 7 (AP)—Tighter money conditions sent price trends downward on both the corporate and Government bond markets this week.

The pattern of Government bonds in the over-the-counter market was sharp and decisive. All Treasury issues gave ground heavily both Monday and Tuesday, recovered strongly Wednesday, picked up slightly more Thursday, then sank again on Friday.

For the week, the drop in Governments was sharp, despite the midweek rally. The Treasury's 2½ per cent bond of 1963 gave up 16-32 at 95 22-32 bid. The Victory 2½s of December, 1972-67, lost 14-32 at 93 10-32 bid. The 30-year 3¼s and the 40-year 3s dropped 22-32 each at 103 6-32 and 98 6-32 bid, respectively.

Systems Engineering at The Ramo-Wooldridge Corporation

Most Ramo-Wooldridge work is of a systems character, frequently requiring the concurrent solution of a wide variety of interrelated technical and operational problems. Prominent examples are the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile and the Intermediate Range Ballistic Missile, Air Force programs for which we have overall systems engineering responsibility. Other examples are communications, fire-control, and computer programs for the military, and automation and operations research projects for business and industry.

Successful execution of systems engineering programs requires that the technical staff include experts in a wide variety of scientific and engineering specialities. At Ramo-Wooldridge the pertinent fields include aerodynamics, propulsion, digital computers, information theory, radio propagation, radar, servomechanisms, gyroscopy, and nuclear physics, to mention only a few.

A qualified systems engineering staff must include unusually capable theoreticians and analysts who can predict the behavior of complex systems, as well as ingenious experimental physicists who can devise suitable new techniques for measuring actual physical parameters. In addition, the team must include experienced apparatus and equipment development engineers, to insure a high level of practicability in the resulting end products.

Scientists and engineers who are experienced in such systems engineering teamwork, or who have specialized in certain technical fields but have a broad interest in the interactions between their own specialties and other fields, are invited to explore the wide range of openings at The Ramo-Wooldridge Corporation in:

GUIDED MISSILE RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT
AERODYNAMICS AND PROPULSION SYSTEMS
COMMUNICATIONS SYSTEMS
AUTOMATION AND DATA PROCESSING
DIGITAL COMPUTERS AND CONTROL SYSTEMS
AIRBORNE ELECTRONIC AND CONTROL SYSTEMS

HOW $20 SPENT FOR THE WALL STREET JOURNAL HELPED ME EARN $14,000

By a Subscriber

Since I started reading The Wall Street Journal, my income has increased from $9,000 to $14,000 a year.

But that is only part of the story. The Journal not only helps me earn more money—it also tells me how to get more value for the money I spend.

For example, an automotive article in The Journal helped me trade in my old car at the right time. An article on building supplies gave me ideas on remodeling my home and showed me how to save $700.

Articles on food and clothing point out the things to stock up on in order to save money. Articles on taxes guide me on what to do to keep my taxes down.

The Journal also gives me a better understanding of what is going on in the world. In conversation with other men I find that I know how to interpret business and government trends a little better than they do. They wonder where I get my "inside dope."

This story is typical. Because the reports in The Wall Street Journal come to you daily, you get quick warning of any new trend that may affect your income. You get the facts in time to protect your interests or seize a profit. The Journal is a wonderful aid to salaried men making $7,000 to $20,000 a year. It is valuable to owners of small business concerns. It can be of priceless benefit to ambitious young men.

The Wall Street Journal is the complete business DAILY. Has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs $20 a year, but you can get a Trial Subscription for three months for $6. Just tear out this ad and attach check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you. SLP 4-8

Published daily right in the Midwest to bring you vital business and Washington news immediately.

BANK STATEMENTS REVEAL HIGH LEVEL OF BORROWING

News Developments Turn Up Surprisingly Good Earning Reports for 1955 and a Few for Early 1956.

By JOHN G. FORREST
Financial Editor, The New York Times.

NEW YORK, April 7.

APRIL trading started briskly in the stock market this week, but mild profit-taking tempered the enthusiasm and contributed to a highly irregular pattern. Average prices rose on Monday, fell on Tuesday, recovered on Wednesday, and set an historic high early on Thursday, when the New York Times combined average of 50 stocks hit 346.05. Then the market slid off sharply, only to rally on Friday and again ease toward the close. For the week, the index was up 2.29 points.

(The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained $1.10 on the week and closed at $191.50, a new high. Dow-Jones industrial stock index on the week rose 9.26 to 521.05, at the peak; rails eased 0.24 to 171.58; utilities slipped 0.25 to 67.14; and general market average at 182.70 was up 1.55.)

News developments continued to reveal surprisingly good earning reports for 1955 and a few for the early months of 1956. Some first-quarter production reports were not so good, but these had been anticipated.

Borrowing is Heavy.

One of the week's highlights was the condition statements of banks for March 31. In most instances they reflected a high level of borrowing in the first three months of the year.

Swelled by an expansion in loans, at higher interest rates, the operating earnings of the leading New York City banks ranged from 5 to 30 per cent above those of the first quarter of 1955. Demands for loans forced some of the institutions to sell considerable amounts of Government securities at a loss to obtain funds.

Consumer installment credit rose $15,000,000 in February. This contraseasonal increase was due principally to on-the-cuff buying of automobiles and to personal loans. The month's gain compared with a rise of $72,000,000 in such credit February last year and a drop of $274,000,000 for the same month of 1954. Outstanding installment credit at the end of February totaled $27.8 billion, or $5.3 billion more than the figure of a year earlier. Automobile credit totaled fourteen billion dollars, a rise of $3.8 billion.

The tightness in the money market was emphasized by another sharp decline in the price of United States government securities early in the week. This was a continuation of the selling pressure on "governments" that followed the rise in rates on brokers' and dealers' loans by major banks in this city.

It was also an extension of the liquidation of such securities by banks in their efforts to obtain funds for business loans. Prices on treasury issues firmed up in midweek, but there was no indication that the scarcity and costliness of money had ended.

The increase in the discount rate of the Bank of Canada from 2¾ to 3 per cent added new concern to the money rate situation.

A Look Ahead.

Looking ahead, the First National City Bank of New York said the chances of reducing excess inventories in key industries were "excellent," and stocks could be worked off without any adverse effect on the general level of business. Charles T. Broderick, chief economist for Lehman Brothers, investment bankers, said business prospects for the last half of 1956 were better than those in the first half.

Reports on two "ailing" industries showed the patients holding their own. Automobile production in March totaled 575,758 cars, a gain of 3.8 per cent over February, but 27 per cent below that of March, 1955. First-quarter output was down 18 per cent from a year earlier, at 1,700,000 cars. And the Fedeal Reserve board reported that contracts awarded for construction in February on a seasonally adjusted basis increased for the fifth consecutive month to a record high. This lifted the level of building awards to a level 18 per cent above that of a year earlier.

Weight of Farm Support.

The staggering stake that the Government now has in the farm support program was revealed by the Department of Agriculture: A record total of $8.9 billion. The Government in the eight months Feb. 29 sustained a loss of $608,000,000 in supporting farm prices, compared with $429,000,000 in the similar period a year earlier.

Pointing out the need for sound financing of industrial expansion in the next decade, Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said this week that too much emphasis was being placed on debt-financing and not enough on equity-financing. He said industry would have to raise the "incredible" sum of $60 billion in "new equity money" by 1965, or triple the amount obtained over the past 10 years.

Carloadings Gain.

A new high figure for railroad activity in 1956 was scored in the week ended March 31. Carloadings totaled 724,944 cars, according to the Association of American Railroads. This was 27,696 cars, or 10.7 per cent, more than in the 1955 period and 125,642 cars, or 21 per cent, more than in the corresponding week of 1954.

STOCKED AND EQUIPPED
UNION (MO.) AREA
Very productive, fertile, nicely located 140-acre valley farm. Just 3 miles, nearly all paved and oiled road, from Union, Franklin county's thriving county seat town, and only about 50 miles from St. Louis. All churches; fine educational community. 70 acres rich plow land, most of which is nearly level branch bottom; recently limed and phosphated; balance very good pasture. Only a few acres of woods. 15 acres choice alfalfa. A couple of very busy ever-flowing spring branches (enough water for 2 or 3 farms); BIG, BIG BARN; 14 stanchion grade A milk parlor; 2 nearly new large Missouri-type layer houses; (running water); carry about 500 hens. Granaries, machine storage building and others. 6-room, 2-story frame home; furnace heat, automatic hot and cold water; nice room for bath; electric. This home is not new but it is sound, solid, comfortable and modern enough. It does need painting. A few gallons of paint would do wonders for this house. Mail delivery, school bus, milk route to farm; Franklin county's highest producing dairy herd on this farm for years. (1-HI-1-A Tests). I don't want you to get the idea however, that this is only a dairy farm, in fact very much to the contrary. This farm set up is really very flexible. To name a few: General stock and grain farm; dairy and poultry, or since it's an easy drive from St. Louis, you continue to work at your present job and farm this place too. You could use a few thousand dollars a year additional income, couldn't you? Can you afford to continue to want economic stability and security, with little or no success? When an opportunity such as this is yours for the asking? You do have confidence in your own ability, don't you? Are your boys and girls may join our local 4-H clubs, gain valuable knowledge about all phases of farming, participate in out-lays of activities. Did you ever know of a 4-H boy or girl who became a juvenile delinquent? Seven whiteface cows, 3 to 4 years old, calving now, 2 dairy cows, fresh as will freshen soon. A couple of nice sows ready to farrow. Ford Ferguson tractor recently overhauled and mischievous implements, machinery; cattle and hogs; all for one price, $16,000. This will prove to be a winning number for you. Just one more thing: This is not a spending money proposition, but instead it is an investment of the highest caliber. Health, happiness, contentment, financial security today, in the future, and always. Now if you really want to get ahead and are satisfied with letting someone else chart your course for you and are not sick, or lazy, or both, come see me. I will be happy to work with you and for you.

EXTRA INNINGS

By J. Roy Stockton
SPORTS EDITOR OF THE POST-DISPATCH

Lane and Hutchinson Make Excellent Team.

CARDINAL fans who were fearful when Frank Lane was made general manager that he'd make wholesale trades, just to field a personally selected team, probably have been reassured by this time. And they need not worry along those lines. There still is a chance that a trade or two will be made, but if there is any swapping, the idea will be to bolster the ball club, not just to have new faces at Busch Stadium.

Lane thus far has made two deals. He swapped Brooks Lawrence for Jackie Collum and he obtained Hank Sauer from the Cubs for Pete Whisenant and cash. He may have made a mistake in parting with Lawrence, but he wanted left-handed relief and a spot pitcher and Lawrence certainly didn't look like an asset last season. The Sauer deal will be worth while if the right-handed slugger can discourage the enemy practice of saving left-handers for the Redbirds. It takes a real good right-hander to stop the Cardinals.

It wasn't for lack of opportunity that Lane didn't do more trading. At least four clubs, the Phils, Redlegs, Cubs and Braves, offered to swap. One trade that could have been very important was almost made. The Cardinals were going to give two and possibly three men slated to stay on the roster and two other margin athletes for an infielder and an outfielder. At deadline time, set by Lane, the other clubs developed cold feet, and changed demands to include young players who figured in Lane's future plans. That was when Frank walked out.

We believe Cardinal fans would have approved that deal. It would have given the Cardinals a solid right-handed hitter for the No. 4 spot in the batting order, and would not have weakened the Cardinals in any department.

Touring Writers See Cardinals as Improved.

AFTER seeing Lane and the club's new manager, Fred Hutchinson, in action for six weeks during spring training, we'd rate the two as one of the best management teams in the business. Without telling Hutchinson what to do, Lane has made substantial contributions to the progress of the ball club.

Many observers have paid compliments to the Cardinals this spring. Two news service writers described the Redbirds as the best-conditioned squad they had seen in Florida. Warren Giles, president of the National League, said the Cards were the "best club he had seen in Florida." Most observers picked the Cards to climb to the first division.

Lane can join Hutchinson in taking a bow for the compliments. It was his idea to have the long training period, with special instruction for roster players and outstanding minor league prospects. It was his idea to have Billy Jurges and later Luke Appling, to coach infielders. It was Lane who built a fire under Ken Boyer and the ball club when it showed signs of too much complacency early in March.

Boyer was acting too much like a coasting veteran sure of his job. There was no spark in his fielding and at bat he was swinging half-heartedly, as though tired of it all. Lane, who has a fierce vocabulary, shocked Boyer. Starting the next day, Ken contributed circus stops in game after game, and batted as though trying to knock over the infielders.

Nobody will be saving himself for the Junior Prom with Lane hanging around the ball club. They'll give out or hear about it. His idea of a good ball club is one like the Cardinals of the Gashouse Gang days.

"What a ball club that was," Lane recalled. "I was with the Reds then. But when the Cardinals came into Cincinnati they took over the ball park. They did everything but chase our boys right out of the park."

Sportsfolio.

INSPECTION of the talent was about as thorough at Al Lang Field during the Redbirds' training as it possibly could be. Jackie Brandt spent a lot of time learning about infielding, but during a late-March conference between Lane and Hutchinson it was decided it wouldn't hurt to improve the outfield. "We can't send that kid out to learn to be an infielder and not know how good an outfielder he is," Lane told the manager. So Brandt was given a whirl in the outfield through a stretch of games. As a result the youngster may open the season in right field. . . . And after Dick Schofield and Alex Grammas had battled for the shortstop job and each had been appraised, Don Blasingame was switched to short, to see if he could make the long throw. . . . Hutchinson was a good manager at Detroit. He should be a better one with the Cardinals, with Frank Lane on the job to help thresh out problems.

Arway Increases Lead.

Arway Recreation's blowers increased their first place margin to five games by beating Golden Eagle, 3-0, in the BPA Travel League session last night at Sports Bowl. Terry Moore five kept up its winning streak by downing Bowl-O-Crat, 3-0. Saratoga, rolling 935 and 2664, nosed out Midway Lanes, 2-1, and Eddie's Lanes did the same to Sports Bowl. Paul Boeger had 234 and 600 for individual honors.

MIDDLECOFF ON TOP BUT SLIPS BACK

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7 (UP) —Ken Venturi, a San Francisco amateur with a heart as stout as a giant redwood, lost a four-stroke lead to Cary Middlecoff today but grabbed it back in a near gale to go into the final round of the Masters golf tournament still very much the top boy.

The wind was blowing 40 miles an hour but neither storm nor the terrific pressure on the tortuous Augusta National backstretch dismayed the 24-year-old Californian. He saved his lead with a 75 although he had jumped up to 40 on his first nine.

And in the end it was Middlecoff who cracked, coming up to the eighteenth hole after a labored round and needing only a par to stay within hot breath distance of Venturi in tomorrow's payoff. Instead, he miserably three-putted after getting out of a trap for a double bogey six and again fell four strokes back.

Middlecoff also wound up with a 75 although he had gone out in 35 to Venturi's 40 and early in the second nine was tentatively two strokes ahead.

But under windy conditions which many Masters veterans called "impossible" the lithe amateur, bidding to be the first of his class ever to win the classy Bobby Jones tournament, was the only one to find a solution. He began putting his drives on a clothesline under the wind and reeled off three straight birdies, 13 through 15, that will become a Masters legend.

It appeared mostly a two-man contest again tomorrow but several of the pack crept a little closer in the turmoil of scoring brought on by the wind.

Venturi now stands at 210 for 54 holes, six strokes under the Masters par of 216. Cary Middlecoff had 214 and they were the only two under par.

In a switch recalling Jim Ferrier's loss of a commanding lead in the last round of the 1950 Masters, Venturi's fat four-stroke margin melted away and Middlecoff went on top in the first nine holes today. Venturi, his drives and irons soaring off with the gale, overshot five of the nine greens and he did well to turn with a 40 as Cary passed him with a 35.

Ford is Third.

Doug Ford, of Mahopac, N.Y., shot a 75 today and wound up in third place with a 217.

Venturi couldn't knock in an eight-footer after going beyond the first green and took a bogey five. He got past the next two with pars only by chipping stiff to the pin from an overshot lie on the third.

He couldn't get down a three-footer to salvage another too-strong approach on the fourth. But after pars on five and six he had to save himself from still another windblown wallop on the sixth by chipping back close enough to sink it.

He got by eight with a par five but on nine he showed his first—and only—symptoms of the pressure by missing a two-footer before a sympathetic gallery of several thousand.

Venturi laid into a beauty of a drive against the wind and parred the 10th but chipped poorly 15 feet past the pin on 11 and wound up with a bogey five. The feeling grew that Venturi was through, but he was only through with bad golf.

He parred the twelfth, then measured himself for his comeback against all the pressure the Masters can generate and against almost unprecedented playing conditions.

Three Birds in Row.

Ken got a birdie on the par five thirteenth, the hole that has been the turning point in more than one Masters. He did it with prodigious long shots which enabled him to chip within six feet and sink his putt.

On the par four fourteenth, Venturi got his drive and iron

Autographs were in order again for the amateur golfer of the hour, KEN VENTURI (left). In the third round of the Master championship at Augusta, Ga., he lost but regained a four-stroke lead. CARY MIDDLECOFF (right), who on occasion in his pro golf career has been allergic to grass, was the man who overtook Venturi, then fell back.

11,169 See Collegians Defeat Globetrotters

By Harold Flachsbart

Ray Meyer's College All-Americans held on grimly in thrilling finish last night to defeat the Harlem Globe Trotters, 65-61, before 11,169 fans at the Arena, for their third victory in the current cross-country basketball tour. The trotters have won five times.

With 30 seconds to go, the Stars held only a slender one-point lead, 61-60, but then De Paul's Ron Sobieszszyk sank two free throws after a foul by Charles Hoxie, Handy Andy Johnson made one point for the Trotters, and Sihugo Green of Duquesne stole the ball and drove in for a lay-up in the last two seconds to seal the Collegians' decision.

It was said to be the first defeat ever suffered by the Trotters, Abe Saperstein's widely-traveled Negro team, in the St. Louis Arena.

It was a 36-point output in the first half that won for the Collegians, who had to play without the services of the country's leading scorer, Darrell Floyd of Furman, sidelined with a thigh injury.

The All-Stars had a 12-point lead at the intermission, but then saw their margin cut to five by the end of the third quarter and to only one on two occasions in the fourth period. The Trotters never were ahead in the second half.

High point man for the Collegians was Julius McCoy, with 19 points. Johnson, a 6-6 fast-moving "big man," also tallied 19 for the Trotters.

Tom Heinsohn, the Stars' best rebounder, a 6-7 product of Holy Cross, tallied 13 points for Meyer's squad and Sobieszczyk had 12. All of Johnson's points, incidentally, came in the Trotters' great second-half drive. Sweetwater Clifton, who previously played a full NBA season with the New York Nicks, made 13 points and cleared the boards frequently for the Trotters.

It was Green, the 6-2½ Duquesne driver, who flipped in the shot that gave the Collegians of Ray Meyer a 14-13 lead, their first advantage since the opening moments. Heinsohn made it 16-13, and soon Julius McCoy, a Negro southpaw from Farrell, Pa., a Michigan State sharp-shooter, sank a nifty bucket that made it 18-15. Holup's fielder on a drive-in lay-up gave the Stars a 21-15 edge by the end of the quarter.

Clarence Wilson of the Saperstein forces and Green exchanged baskets to start the second period. Sweetwater Clifton made a free throw but Sobieszczyk of Meyer's own De Paul squad started a rally that put the Collegians in front by 10 points and more.

The score at the intermission, as the floor show entertainers took over, was 36-24, one of the biggest leads the All-Stars had in the series to date.

Coach Red Holzman and Publicitor Marty Blake of the St. Louis Hawk N.B.A. team were in the stands and Holzman conferred with all-star coach, Meyer, between halves. The Hawks are reportedly interested in Joe Holup, 6 ft. 6 in. George Washington ace who plays a rugged type of ball that could be useful in the pro league.

The tour will include 21 games in 19 days in 18 cities and already some of the stars, not accustomed to night-after-night play, are getting tired. "It's when I substitute," said Meyer, "that I frequently weaken my team. We don't have as strong a squad, in an Olympic year, as we have had in the past."

Warriors Win 99-88 to Take N.B.A. Crown

PHILADELPHIA, April 7 (AP) — The Philadelphia Warriors defeated the Fort Wayne Pistons, 99-88, tonight to win the National Basketball Association championship and climax one of the great comebacks in recent sports history.

Joe Graboski with 29 points, and Paul Arizin with 26, led the scoring for the Warriors who broke open a tight game with a sensational rally in the waning seconds of the third period.

Just three years ago, the Warriors won 12 and lost 57 games, finishing 34½ games out of first place, probably the worst mark in modern pro basketball. Two years ago, they were last, 15 games off the pace, and last season wound up in the cellar 10 games behind the champion Syracuse Nats.

But tonight, the young talent, which kept Owner Eddie Gottlieb from throwing in the towel despite defeat and financial reverses, paid off handsomely. Arizin, Graboski, Neil Johnston, Tom Gola, and company won Philadelphia's first pro basketball title since 1946-47 to wrap up the team's most successful year both on the court and in the box office.

The Warriors won this final best four-of-seven games series 4-1, losing only the second game in the set by a single point at Fort Wayne.

North Carolina Club Sets World Swim Record

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 7 (UP)—The North Carolina Athletic Club 400-yard medley relay team of William Sonner, Jack Nelson, Richard Fadgen and David McIntyre set a new world record of 3:46 tonight in the final event of the National A.A.U. swimming championships.

They broke the world record of 3:48 set by Ohio State at Columbus, O., on Jan. 22, 1955. With that first place the North Carolina Athletic Club won the team championship of the A.A.U., beating the New Haven Swim Club by a score of 72 to 70.

Up to that point the North Carolina Club had trailed, 60-58. New Haven Swim Club team of Jerry Dolbey, Charles Hardin, William Yorzyk and Rex Aubrey took second in the 400 with 3:47.8—also under the previous record time.

Aubrey started the New Haven club off right in the first event of the night when he thrashed his way to victory in the 100-yard freestyle in 49.1 seconds. McIntyre was second in 50 seconds.

Don Kutyna of Army set a new American and meet record in the 100-yard breaststroke with a time of 1:03.0 that bettered the afternoon trial time record of 1:04.5 set by Manuel Sangiuly, swimming unattached for Cuba. Sangiuly was second tonight in 1:04.3 with fadgen third in 1:04.5.

Frank McKinney of the Indianapolis A.C. set a new meet mark of 2:21.7 in winning the 220-yard backstroke; Al Wiggins, swimming unattached from Columbus, took first place in the 100-yard butterfly in 54.5 seconds and George Breen, AAU and NCAA 1500-meter champion, beat Ford Konno, the defending champion, in the 440-yard freestyle in 4:30.1.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 7 — Harvey Haddix, who had thrown like an infielder and pitched about as ineffectively as one earlier in spring training, continued today to give happy assurance that the Cardinals can count on the southpaw star who won a total of 38 games in 1953 and '54.

Following up a seven-inning, two-run performance against the Yankees last Saturday, the Springfield (O.), bridegroom today checked the Chicago White Sox on one tally and six hits for eight frames of a game won by the Redbirds, 5 to 1.

A 9080 topcoated crowd at Russwood Park watched as Haddix characteristically pitched his best with men on base and then retired the last nine American Leaguers to face him. Stu Miller, hurling the ninth, yielded Chicago's seventh and final safety.

During most of spring training in Florida, Haddix looked like low man on the totem pole instead of a staff leader, and General Manager Frank Lane turned the air blue with his sulphuric observations about the soft stuff the Kitten was throwing at instead of past—enemy bats.

No Deception.

The trouble, said Pitching Coach Bill Posedel, who had waited patiently until the pitcher asked him for help, was that Haddix had lost his flowing pitching motion, the rhythm of his delivery. As Harvey related happily afterward, "Bill told me I was throwing like an infielder instead of whirling deceptively."

Posedel's analysis and a corrective warm-up came two days before Haddix faced the Yankees. With that good effort and today's fine performance behind him, the nimble 30-year-old lefthander can be said to be considerably farther advanced than at this time a year ago. Then an unsatisfactory spring was followed by an unsatisfactory 12-16 season.

With Haddix ready either for the National League opener a week from Tuesday at Cincinnati or the second game there against the lefthanded-hitting Redleg lineup, the Redbirds also tuned up for Cincinnati southpaws.

After scoring four times the first two innings against Bill Fischer, rookie White Sox right-hander, the Cardinals were given a stern test the final five frames by Billy Pierce, stylish Chicago southpaw who just might be the best left left-hander in the majors. The good-looking ace, whose 1.97 earned-run average was the lowest in the big leagues a year ago, gave up four hits, one unearned tally and fanned six.

Too Late for Sox.

By then, as mentioned, however, the Cardinals already had won against Fischer, whose spring work as a starting candidate for Marty Marion's ball club had belied a horrible 5-15 record with Memphis in 1955.

In the first inning Fischer walked three of the first four Redbirds he faced, then gave up timely singles to Ken Boyer and Jackie Brandt, making it a three-run inning for the Cards. In the second Red Schoendienst, hitting safely in his eighteenth straight game, delivered his first of two blows and his fourth spring homer.

The only other Redbird run came in the seventh when Jim Rivera dropped Alex Grammas's grounder for a two-base error and Schoendienst, boosting his average to .368, sliced a single off Walt Dropo's glove at first base. Grammas, faced with rugged shortstop competition, scored on a daring run. The Golden Greek, no speedster, swept around third and kept on going as he saw that the giant Dropo was on all fours, pawing feebly for the ball like a near-sighted man looking for his glasses.

Pinch Pitching.

Haddix, meanwhile, bothered by early wildness, stopped Bob Nieman after issuing two walks in the first frame. In the second, following two-out singles by Luis Aparicio and Fischer, he fanned Rivera. The Chisox scored in the fourth on Nieman's leadoff triple and Sammy Esposito's sacrifice fly.

But the Redbirds' seventeenth victory in 26 exhibitions, their thirteenth in the last 16 games, was safe after Haddix's pinch pitching the next two innings.

With one out Rivera tripled in the fifth and Nelson Fox walked, but Minnie Minoso bounced harmlessly into a double play. And in the sixth after singles by Dropo and Nieman put runners on first and third with none out, the Kitten struck out Sherm Lollar and retired rookies Esposito and Aparicio on feeble flies.

Infielders should look so good pitching.

Kansas City Bowlers Lead in National Lutheran Tourney

The Immanuel Lutheran Eager Beavers of Kansas City, captained by A. Bockelman, had a 2993 total, including 615-pin handicap, to take an early lead in the National Lutheran bowling championship tournament starting last night at Arway Recreation. Tourney continues today at 12:30 p.m. and continues weekends through May 6.

Others among the leaders: Immanuel No. 1 of St. Louis 2968, Christ Austin of Chicago 2855, Arts of St. Louis 2830, Grace Chapel Men's Club No. 2, 2770.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 7. HARD-LUCK ARCHIE WILSON, Cardinal rookie outfield retread, was hurt again today. The 32-year-old Wilson, who chipped a bone in his left wrist some time ago, ran into big Hank Sauer in the outfield during practice today and suffered a deep vertical gash in his upper lip.

Eighteen stitches were used inside and outside the lip, not only to close the wound, but to prevent scarring, a doctor said at Baptist Hospital across the street from the ball park.

Manager Fred Hutchinson, who seldom permits himself the luxury of a smile, had a happy gleam in his eye after Vinegar Bend Mizell, warming up before the game, cut loose and grinned that he'd felt no pain.

In Sunday's game here the Cardinals' pitchers will be Larry Jackson and Ben Flowers. Dick Donovan will hurl for the White Sox.

Russwood Park, the home of the Memphis Southern Association Chicks, had undergone a pleasant $200,000 face-lifting under Nat Burning, new owner of the Double-A franchise.

The Chicks' general manager now is Danny Menendez of East St. Louis.

Three members of Memphis's 1955 Southern Association champions — Shortstop Luis Aparicio, Third Baseman Sammy Esposito and Pitcher Bill Fischer—were in the White Sox lineup.

Walker Cooper set back his conditioning when he suffered a split nail and laceration on the thumb of his right hand as a low sixth-inning pitch glanced out of the dirt and struck him.

Two Grand-Slammers for Kaline; Eight RBIs for Jim Lemon

Newcombe Sharp but Byrne Dull

NEW YORK, April 7 (AP)—Al Kaline, the American League batting champion, returned to the Detroit lineup after an extended session with a dentist yesterday and made up for lost time by blasting a pair of grand-slam home runs as the Tigers bombed Houston of the Texas League 10-1 in exhibition play.

Kaline, whose arm miseries were traced to some troublesome teeth, fanned his first time up, then started laying the wood to the ball. Wayne Belardi also homered for the Tigers, who were outhit 8-7.

Homers also paid off for the Brooklyn Dodgers in their 10-5 victory over the Milwaukee Braves. Duke Snider brought them from behind with a three-run crack in the fifth and Jackie Robinson packed it away with a two-run homer in the seventh. Both came off Ernie Johnson.

24 Walks in Game.

The best news for the Brooks, however, was the work of Don Newcombe. Looking his best of the spring, the big righthander scattered seven hits while going seven innings for the first time and walked none while striking out four.

Washington's Jim Lemon matched the eight RBIs collected by Kaline as the Senators belted Cincinnati, 16-12. There were 24 walks in the game, with Lemon drawing a pass the first three times he came to the plate. Then he started the slugging, swinging for a double, triple and grand-slammer.

The Cleveland Indians whacked the New York Giants again, 8-3, with Rocky Colavito hitting a two-run double off Don Liddle to break a 3-all tie in the eighth. The Tribe iced it with three in the ninth off Marv Grissom. Gail Harris had pulled the Giants into the tie by rapping a three-run homer off Don Mossi in the sixth.

Trigger Man.

Philadelphia took off on a six-run spree against Tommy Byrne in the fifth and went on to beat the New York Yankees, 8-6. Stan Lopata triggered the big inning for the Phils with a three-run homer, while Richie Ashburn killed a half dozen potential Yank runs with three great catches.

Boston's Red Sox got 15 walks and 11 hits, one Jackie Jensen's two-run homer, to thrash Birmingham of the Southern Association 14-1.

Granite City Takes Quincy in Twin-Bill

Granite City High School won two more ballgames yesterday, taking Quincy, 2-1, in a nine-inning contest and 3-1 in the regulation seven innings. Both were varsity games.

Jack Roberts singled in the winning run in the last of the ninth to take the opener. John Boyer pitched eight innings of relief and allowed only one hit. Bill Diak had three for four for Granite.

In the second game, Rich Wade gave only two hits during five and one-third innings for Granite, but errors helped get him in trouble in the sixth. Ron Parker then came in and retired Quincy without trouble the rest of the way.

Venturi Holds 4-Stroke Lead in Masters Golf

through the gale and the latter stopped six feet from the cup to let him hole out with a three.

Then, on the fifteenth, Venturi played his first two cautiously to get a good lie before the green and knocked the ball up to the hole where he only had to sink a five footer.

On the par three sixteenth Canny Ken teed off to within 12 feet of the cup and just missed another birdie. But on the seventeenth a mighty gust swooped down just as he shot his second and carried his ball over the green. With the sun directly in his eyes, Venturi chipped short and two-putted, taking a bogey five.

On 18, his second went into a sand bunker but Venturi blasted neatly to the green and sank a six-footer to come home with 35, one under par, for the back nine and a creditable 75 considering his early trouble.

Middlecoff, like Venturi, bogeyed the first hole but went on for a sterling nine with only 12 putts, he had six one-putt greens, three in a row from two through four.

He birdied the second with a four-footer after blasting out of the trap. On three he came in short, chipped to the back of the green but holed out a two-footer from the fringe.

The 35-year-old former National Open champion made routine pars with his steady putter on the next four holes but scored a birdie on the eighth by looping his ball within two feet of the pin from 50 feet out.

Middlecoff parred nine to turn in 35. But on 10 he was short with his second, chipped too far and just missed his first putt to take a bogey five.

Middlecoff was on in two and two-putted from 50 feet to par 11, but on the short twelfth his tee shot went on a ledge back of the green and he chipped on short. He couldn't get down from 12 feet and took another bogey. At this point Venturi went back ahead to stay.

Middlecoff drove his second to the green with a spoon on the long par-five thirteenth and two-putted for a birdie. He was short with his second on 14, chipped short and missed a 12-footer to take another bogey.

Cary then settled down for workmanlike pars on the next three holes as the wind shifted in his favor and still stood in favorable position to go after Venturi tomorrow. Then came calamity on the eighteenth.

Sam Snead and Ben Hogan, who had been favored to battle it out for the crown they have won between them, five of the last seven outings, found themselves together instead at 221.

Hogan shot a 74 today and Snead a 72.

Jimmy Jackson, St. Louis amateur, had a 76 in the third round to give him a total of 227 for the 54 holes.

Ed Furgol, former National Open champion, professional at Westwood Country Club, St. Louis shot a 78 and also had 227 for the three rounds.

Sailor Wins, Appears Hurt

BOWIE, Md., April 7 (AP)—Sailor enjoyed a watery course today and won easily the $110,750 Campbell Handicap, but a possible leg injury beclouded his immediate future and the dazzling prospect of becoming handicap star of the year.

Jockey Willie Hartack told Trainer Preston Burch after the race that he thought the 4-year-old colt might have wrenched an ankle in the mud.

Hartack said Sailor seemed to "bobble"—falter in his stride—and he appeared a trifle unsteady in the last sixteenth of a mile and he appeared unsteady coming back to the winner's circle where his owner, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, was waiting.

The injury was disclosed to be on the ankle of the left foreleg. At his barn, Sailor was unable to put full weight on the swollen ankle and at first diagnosis it appeared he would have to be laid up at least three or four weeks. Whether it might be any longer depends on another examination tomorrow.

Despite that, Sailor won by four lengths from Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Joe Jones, which was three lengths to the good of C. V. Whitney's Fisherman. Maine Chance Farm's Jet Action was fourth, Mrs. Jacobs' Man of Destiny fifth, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Find sixth and Miss Ann Uhlar's Ann's Love last.

Sailor had everything his own way after three-quarters of a mile and finished the mile and sixteenth in the remarkably good time of 1:43 3-5, on the sloppy track. The track record is 1:42 3-5.

Find kept up with Sailor past half a mile until Jockey Hartack decided the pace was too slow. He gave Sailor the word to go then and the 4-year-old took leave of Find to open up a three-length lead going around the second and last turn.

Joe Jones moved into second place next, but coming down the stretch Sailor had as much as a five-length lead. He was moving easily although Hartack kept on the pressure.

The rain-soaked crowd of 21,530 sent Sailor off as the even-money choice and he paid $4.00, $2.60 and $2.20. Joe Jones, winner of two straight stakes at Bowie, returned $3.20 and $2.60 and Fisherman $3.00.

Crying About Russian 'Pros' Won't Win Olympic Medals, Or Friends, Brundage Warns

CHICAGO, April 7 (UP)—The United States "need fear our national complacency, not the strength of other people" in Olympic competition, Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, said today in assailing "hysteria in certain circles about Russian performances."

Brundage said that the complaints, "from a country that has been notorious internationally for gross irregularities in sports in educational institutions," sound like "sour grapes to the rest of the world."

"So far as extra food and better living conditions are concerned," he said, "I doubt if the best that is available in Communist countries today is as good as that enjoyed by our poorest (financially) athletes.

"The five-day week and the eight-hour day are almost universal in the United States. Anyone who cannot find ample time to train under such conditions is not much of an athlete.

"No country has better material than the United States. No country has better facilities, no country has better coaches and there is no reason why our athletes should not win, if they are willing to apply themselves, work hard and make the sacrifices that are necessary for victory.

"Champions are not made by subsidies or training camps, but by diligence and intelligence."

Now Way to Get Rich

Brundage cited a recent magzine article in which a Czech figure skater said she was given a job at $200 per month.

"When I was in Russia recently," he said, "I paid 13 rubles, $3.25, for two packages of cigarettes. At that rate $200 a month represents very little."

His secretary added a footnote that "the Russian cigarettes were for someone else. Mr. Brundage does not smoke."

Brundage said that Communist countries have adopted "enthusiastically" the Olympic preachings of the value of national programs of physical education and competitive sport in building stronger and healthier boys and girls and making better citizens.

"Sport has been placed on a higher level in their society and their champions are acclaimed as national heroes," he said. "This program was started 25 years ago and begins to produce results. Their athletes do not have to be paid. In Communist countries sport provides an outlet and sometimes the only outlet for natural competitive instincts.

No Distractions.

"Moreover they have no professional sport and because their countries are not so advanced, they do not have so many distractions, automobiles, cinema, television, etc."

He pointed out that although American athletes have won as many Olympic medals as the rest of the world combined in track and field, still 10 of the 24 events, the 5000 and 10,000 meter runs, the marathon, the 400 meter hurdles, the 3000 meter steeplechase, the 10,000 and 50,000 meter walks, the hammer throw, hop, step and jump, and decathlon, are not on American track programs and "therefore have few participants."

"We must always remember that about half the sports on the Olympic program, fencing, cycling, soccer, canoeing, women's track and field, hockey, gymnastics, etc., have few participants in the United States.

"I was told in Moscow that there are 800,000 expert gymnasts in the U.S.S.R. Try to find 800 in the United States."

Cunningham Thinks A.A.U. Code Outdated

Other thinking on amateur sports, division of track and runners, was expressed in St. Louis by Glen Cunningham, star miler of the 1930s. Too many A.A.U. officials, and too much A.A.U. official thinking, is out-dated, Cunningham believes. Such lagging behind the times imposes standard-of-living hardships upon any athlete who takes the A.A.U. definition of an amateur literally, outside the college ranks, Cunningham indicated.

Cunningham is here to fulfill a speaking engagement at Memorial Presbyterian Church.

St. Louisans Shine in M.U. Grid Workout

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 7—St. Louis district freshmen accounted for 20 of 47 points scored as a veteran Gold team defeated the less experienced Whites, 34-13, in a University of Missouri spring practice football game today.

The Webster Groves trio of Charles James, Henry Kuhlmann and Glen St. Pierre contributed 14 of the points, James on touchdown plunges of six and nine yards, and Kuhlmann and St. Pierre an extra point each. Fred Henger, St. Louis Beaumont, made another on a plunge from six yards out.

Otherwise it was veterans that accounted for the points.

Most spectacular was a 58-yard pass from Robbin Wright to Larry Plumb and a 50-yard run by Dave Doane. George Cramer was nearly as spectacular in a 27-yard run, and the other counter was made by Gene Roll on a lateral from Jim Hunter. Roll kicked two extra points and Dick Stuber one.

Coach Don Faurot said that the White team, chiefly composed of freshmen, has shown much improvement in two weeks of spring practice, but play of both teams was somewhat spotty. He thought the running by James and the defensive play of St. Pierre were outstanding, but couldn't forget, either, that Kuhlmann had intercepted a vital pass. All three played and scored for the winning Gold team.

Heavy Early Entry In C.Y.C. Baseball

The Catholic Youth Council is headed for a record baseball entry with Our Lady of Mount Carmel topping the list so far with 12 teams. Holy Cross has entered 11 teams, Holy Family and St. Jerome (Bissell Hills) 10 each. Last season the 213-team total fell short of the record by five teams.

Tentative opening dates set by the executive committee are: parochial, April 16; juvenile, junior and senior, May 6; crusader, bantam and atom the last week in May.

The committee has requested that senior clubs which wish to affiliate with the American Amateur Baseball Congress inform the C.Y.C. office by tomorrow.

Hurley Not Interested In Manager's Job.

JACK HURLEY, boxing promoter and manager of boxers who now makes his headquarters in Seattle, Wash., said over the telephone that he was not interested in becoming a co-manager or assistant manager of Floyd Patterson, Brooklyn boxer.

It had been rumored that Jack had been approached by Cus D'Amato relative to helping him out with handling Patterson, No. 1 ranking challenger for Archie Moore's light-heavyweight championship and considered a likely opponent for Rocky Marciano in the near future.

Hurley said he had told D'Amato that he would be glad to promote bouts with Patterson as the principal both in the northwest and in other parts of the country.

"I'm a promoter now," said Jack," and I'm not interested in managing. I told D'Amato that I would assume all the risks a promoter takes when he puts on boxing shows but that I was sure that Patterson would do well, anywhere.

"Cus does not seem entirely satisfied with the way he is being treated by the International Boxing Club and is interested in an independent promoter. I'm available."

It has been reported that D'Amato is being urged to send Patterson against Marciano in September despite Floyd's comparative youth and inexperience but the manager has steadfastly refused offers for such a match before 1957 when he thinks Patterson will have obtained sufficient ring knowhow.

Tommy Hurricane Jackson, the perpetual motion heavyweight from Long Island, rated No. 2 among possible opponents for Marciano's crown, goes into action this week against Johnny Williams, former champion of Great Britain.

They are to meet in 10 rounds at Washington's Uline Arena, Wednesday night in a nationally telecast bout (here by KTVI, Channel 36 at 9 o'clock).

Jackson is a puzzler to fight fans. He has a great record with 26 victories and a draw in 31 bouts, his triumphs including 12 by knockouts. But he has lost twice to Jimmy Slade and was stopped by Nino Valdes.

He rates to be favored over Williams who was kayoed by Don Cockell in a bout for the British title. Williams has an impressive record, too, with 57 victories in 68 bouts but he hasn't met much top opposition.

That September bout with the champion is an attraction, however, and the winner of Wednesday's contest will be in position to put in a loud bid for it, provided Archie Moore doesn't get there first with his demand for a return.

Moore was knocked out in nine rounds by the champion last September and there never has been much demand from any source other than Archie for a return. But if Marciano decided to defend in September the list of possible opponents has dwindled to the point where Moore will have to be considered along with Patterson, Jackson and others.

Sullivan Shows Class.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, who was born John Hallmark in England, lost a close fight to Joey Giambra of Buffalo in Syracuse, N.Y. but displayed top class despite the setback. Sullivan hasn't had too much luck in this country. Among his losses was a knockout at the hands of Eduardo Lausse in Cleveland last December. Lausse hit Sullivan after the bell rang ending the fourth round and the Englishman was meat for Lausse in the fifth.

Giambra, recently released from the Army, did well in a bout with Bobo Olsen in a non-title scrap and rates high among the possible successors to Ray Robinson as champion of the 160-pound division.

Sullivan made Joey travel all the way, however, and only a good rally by Giambra in the last few roupds earned him the unanimous decision of the two judges and the referee, Harry Kessler.

It was one of the best bouts seen on TV recently.

Put Up or Shut Up.

THE Illinois Athletic Commission demands that those who are claiming boxing in the state should be cleaned up, put up or shut up.

In a bulletin by Livingston Osborne, chairman, the commission declares " * * that boxing should receive the same fair treatment as other sports. The public are great fans on the screen as well as reading the various stories written about it and they are entitled to the truth. Also boxers, their managers and assistants, the officials and the men who devote their lives to seeing that boxing is kept on a high plane are entitled to a fair shake. . .

"The State Commission welcomes any factual information which will uncover and help correct any wrong doings. * * We do not want just general statements—give us facts and lend your help to back them up.

"To that end all future statements by air or written that Illinois needs to clean up its boxing and a hoodlum element in it will be carefully considered by the commission, and if in their opinion an investigation is warranted, a public hearing will be called and the parties making such statements will be subpoenaed as witnesses to give their testimony under oath."

Battle To Wire; U. City 7th

By Harold Tuthill
Of The Post-Dispatch Staff

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 7—Springfield Central scored 23½ points to become the State Class A indoor track champion here today in a struggle which was carried down to the very last event—the pole vault.

Vashon, second with 21½ points, had a chance to beat out Jim Mentis's Bulldogs from the Southwest part of the state, but Vashon failed to place in the pole vault when Robert Harrison went out at 11 feet six inches with five athletes still vaulting.

The closing event was won by Ronald Ragland of Kansas City East, who set one of four records in the twenty-fourth annual event. Two other records were tied. Ragland's winning vault was 12 feet 1⅛ inches, just slightly better than the old 12-1 mark owned by Karl Raglund of Kansas City Southwest, set in 1952.

University City, which had triumphed 18 times in the past 23 years, including a victory in the 1955 meet, came in seventh. Henry Schemmer's Tribe, without an individual champion, scored 14 points, finishing behind Sumner, which had 17. Kansas City schools, East and Central, scored 16 apiece and Northeast 15. Roosevelt was eighth with 14 points.

Relay Boost Helped.

Good performances in both relays helped Springfield to become the state king all by itself for the first time. The Bulldogs shared the crown with Kansas City Southwest in 1951. Today they won the half-mile relay in record-tying time, 1:36.1, and came in second in the mile event which went to Kansas City Paseo with a new mark of 3:38.6. Roosevelt set the half mile record two years ago, when Beaumont posted the mile relay mark of 3:39.0.

Jerry Wilkes, husky St. Louis U. High weight man who looks big enough for college competition, broke the shotput mark with a heave of 53 feet 1½ inches. The old mark, 53 feet, 3⅞ inches, was set by Lynn Goodman of Kansas City Southwest in 1953. Wilkes was second to Ritenour's Bob Beck a year ago.

Jumpin' Jim Hoffman, Kansas City Northeast's star athlete, bettered his high jump record. The defending champion of the event went 6 feet, 3¾ inches, an improvement over his former mark of 6 feet 1 13-16 inches in the 1955 meet.

New Heights of Glory.

His leap today exceeded the height of any previous jumper in state competition. The outdoor mark is 6-3, set by Jack Wood of Kansas City Southwest, in 1947.

Bill Appleton of Kansas City Central was the only double victor. He won the high hurdles final in 7.8 seconds, beating out Robert Harrison of Vashon and Bill Comfort of University City.

Appleton captured the 65-yard low hurdles in 7.5, which equalled his time in this morning's preliminaries and that of Charley Batch of C.B.C., who was clocked in the same time in 1953.

William Sanders, Vashon, won the broad jump, although he was short of the 23-foot mark with a leap of 22 feet, 5½ inches.

Ron Gregory, state outdoor mile champ, added the indoor laurels to his lengthy list. He was timed in 4:34.7 and held a decided advantage over his rivals in the eight-lap event. A year ago Gregory was second in the indoor mile. Roosevelt's Lionel Moore won the half mile in 2:07.2 and Joe Baker of Springfield, anchor man of both relay teams, took the 60-yard dash in 6.5 seconds.

The meet climaxed three days of competition in classes C, B and A, which attracted 138 schools and 1331 individuals, the largest in the history of indoor competition.

Bakewell Dog Wins in Trial

High wind that made it rough going on land and in the water posed a problem for the retriever dogs as the annual spring trial, held by the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club, began at Weldon Spring, Mo., yesterday.

Conditions failed to faze a young Black Labrador named Mike's Black Mike, however, as he put on a steady performance to capture the derby stake. Mike is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bakewell III and was handled by D. L. Walters.

Succeeding places in the derby stake went in order to Golden Star of Oak Ridge, owned and handled by K. K. Williams of Milwaukee; Stilrovin Chum Fun, owned by Ralph Boalt, Winona, Minn., and handled by William Wunderlich; Heather Sweep of Audlon, owned and handled by Dr. Gene Starkloff, St. Louis.

Open stake running was started yesterday with two tests and the field was cut from 28 to 20 dogs. It will finish today, starting at 7:30 a.m.

Following the open stake will be an amateur stake in which 35 dogs are entered. Twenty-three handlers in the amateur stake are from St. Louis.

Johnny Tobin Demonstrates at Bears' Clinic

JOHNNY TOBIN, star outfielder of the Browns in the 1920s, demonstrates the benefits of the level batting swing as he takes part in a baseball clinic at Washington U. Field House. Catching is another former major leaguer, BORIS (BABE) MARTIN. Tobin, a batting stylist, hit above .300 in five straight seasons, 1919 through 1923, reaching a peak of .352 in 1921. Looking on are local college players. The clinic was sponsored by the St. Louis Athletic Association.

Walter Reed Swimmers Win A.A.U. Meet

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 7 (UP)—Three more national records fell today as the National A.A.U. women's indoor swimming meet ended. Two world records also were toppled. Records were set in 10 of the 12 events of the three-day meet and a total of four world marks fell.

Dougie Gray, 16-year-old star of the Walter Reed Swim Club of Washington, D.C., which easily retained its team title, today shaved four seconds off the American record for the 250-yard freestyle. Her time was 2:45.4. The old mark was held by teammate Shelley Mann, who didn't defend.

(Helen Hughes of St. Louis was third in the "250." A Purdue student, she is a member of the Lafayette, Ind., Club team which finished second to Walter Reed with 62 points to 110).

Miss Mann set a possible world mark in the 100-yard butterfly. Her time was 1:04.1. The Walter Reed "A" team bettered the American record for the 400-yard medley relay, being timed in 4:27.4.

Other winners today: 100-yard backstroke, Carlon Cone, unattached, Ridgewood, N.J., 107.2; three-meter dive—Barbara Gilders, Detroit A.C., 416.85 point.

Tennis Titles To St. Louisans

CHICAGO, April 7 (AP)—Two St. Louis lads triumphed and one failed in two title attempts today in championship play of the Western Indoor tennis tourney.

Charles McKinley, 15 years old, of St. Louis, lost to fellow townsman Rod Susman, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1, 7-5, in the junior finals and bowed to defending champion Marty Reissen of Hinsdale, Ill., 7-5, 6-3, in the 15-and-under division.

The other St. Louis titlist was Cliff Buchholz, who defeated Peter Grossman of Chicago, 6-0, 6-0, for the 13-and-under crown.

Senior championships will be settled tomorrow night with one non-Illinoisan, Andy Paton of East Lansing, Mich., still in contention as a semifinalist.

Preachers Cancel Game.

Concordia Seminary canceled yesterday's scheduled baseball game with Culver-Stockton because of the wind and cooler weather. The Preachers won their opener against Eden Friday, 12-0.

Chicagoan in Table Tennis Tourney Here

A master's Inter-City round robin will climax an invitational interscholastic table tennis tournament, to be staged at Sherman Community Center, Easton avenue at Kingshighway, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 20 to 22.

The Catholic Knights of America, sponsors of the event, has received the acceptance of Allan Levy, now of Chicago, who rose to world stature as St. Louis junior player, to lead a picked squad from the Windy City. The St. Louis team will be assembled by a committee headed by Bill Price, assisted by George Hendry and Melvin Nichols, each in his own right a great player.

As part of the coming event, clinics will be held, which will give young entrants a chance to double with the stars in exhibition play. Among those expected for the exhibitions is Al Holtzman, currently at the University of Illinois.

HandballChamp And Top Rivals Triumph Easily

Defending champion Jimmy Jacobs of Los Angeles and his two outstanding title challengers, Vic Hershkowitz of Brooklyn and Bob Brady of San Francisco, scored first-round victories in the United States Handball Association's four-wall championship tournament yesterday afternoon at the Y.M.H.A.-Y.W.H.A., Union and Enright.

The 25-year-old Jacobs, who lost here in the semifinals of the 1953 National Y.M.C.A. event, coasted to a 21-6, 21-10 victory over Gus Kopaytic of Milwaukee. Jacobs won the first game in four and one-half frames, making runs of two fives and a six. He drifted through a "17-inning" final game. Kopaytic, a former Wisconsin State champion, is a member of the Milwaukee fire department.

Hershkowitz, seeded second to Jacobs, defeated Alex London of Madison, Wis., 21-4, 21-6. The 1954 USHA champion, a Brooklyn fireman, used his powerful service to hasten the match to an end.

Brady, seeded ony seventh because he did not compete in last year's tourney, eliminated the Canadian champion. Bernard Prichard of Toronto, 21-14, 21-10. Brady, who competed in the 1947 National A.A.U. tourney at the Downtown "Y," losing to Gus Lewis in the final, made his best scoring effort in the sixth frame of the second game when he tallied a cluster of eight points for a 16-5 lead.

Four other seeded players had little trouble reaching today's second round in singles action. Phil Collins of Chicago, No. 3, beat Donald Kress of Minneapolis, 21-9, 21-3; Paul Stobbe of Detroit, No. 4, eliminated Dick Peterson of Chicago, 21-2, 21-3; John Sloan of Chicago, No. 5, ousted Ron Sibbald of Toronto, 21-4, 21-5, and Alvis Grant of Dallas, No. 8, defeated Wayne Stewart of Minneapolis, 21-5, 21-8.

Four matches will start today's second round program at 1 p.m. Four matches also are scheduled at 2, 3 and 4 o'clock. Third round singles will be played tomorrow afternoon. Quarterfinals will be played Thursday, semifinals Friday and the championship match Saturday afternoon. First round in the championship doubles and Masters' doubles will start Tuesday. The collegiate singles and doubles, and the team competition, begins Wednesday at the Downtown Y.M.C.A.

Cape's 10 Points In Last Event Capture Meet

Ten points in the javelin throw enabled the Southeast Missouri Teachers College of Cape Girardeau to capture first place in the seventh annual Harris Teachers' track and field meet yesterday at Public Schools Stadium. Cape totaled 152 points.

Defenders Fernandez, Cucchi Have Major Soccer Roles Today

Semifinal Contests Scheduled

By Dent McSkimming

While the pressure will be felt all along the line, two players will be under special stress in today's District soccer semifinals at Fairground Park. Center halfbacks Joe Fernandez of the Spanish Club, and Gene Cucchi of St. Ambrose will be in position to swing the trend of the game. If Fernandez holds Simpkins' center forward, Dean Wilson, in reasonably tight control, his own team has a fair chance of scoring an upset; and if Cucchi is effectual against Bob Rooney of the Kutis team there may be a surprise outcome there, too.

Wilson, who scored three goals last Sunday as he led Simpkins to a quarterfinal victory over Sacred Heart, is the scoring sensation of the season here. In the only game in which he was completely bottled up, Simpkins lost to Chicago Schwaben, at Chicago, and was knocked out of the U. S. Open Cup tournament.

Rooney, rarely shut out, is a slippery foe when he gets within firing range of the goal and he sets up scoring plays for his potent inside forwards, Bill Looby and Ruben Mendoza. He got only one goal the day St. Ambrose defeated Kutis in the Open Cup tournament. It was the superior defensive play of Sam Sapienza, St. Ambrose center half that day, that thwarted Rooney. Sapienza, now in the Army, will not be on the scene today, so it is up to Cucchi to match Sam's performance of Nov. 27.

Key Men, and Locks.

Of course, Simpkins can score goals without Wilson's help, and Kutis has done pretty well on days when Rooney is in eclipse. But, they are definitely the key attackers, hence the special pressure on their guardians, Fernandez and Cucchi.

It is in this matter of superior scoring power that Simpkins and Kutis have the edge today. Most fans expect that when the tournament final is played, next Sunday, these two will be the opponents.

Three of the four teams involved have special goals in today's activity. Simpkins have an eye on their match with Occidente of Guadalajara, Mexico, May 6; Kutis must keep improving for its U. S. Amateur Cup series with Chicago Eagles, April 22 and 29, and many of the St. Ambrose players are on the C.Y.C. all-star squad which is booked to oppose Everton of England on June 2.

Start of the Simpkins-Spanish game will be 1:15; of the Kutis-St. Ambrose game 3 o'clock.

Brcic Drafted.

Charley Miramonti, the regular inside left of St. Ambrose, who has been nursing an injured leg the past two weeks, may remain out today. . . . Emil Brcic, taking Miramonti's place, was drafted from St. Agatha club to fill in for soldier Sapienza. . . . Frank Borghi, star goalie who was out of the city last Sunday when his team won from Sacred Heart, will be in goal for the Simpkins today.

Leading tournament goal scorers are: Wilson and Don Dallas five each; John Galimberti 4; Paul Pisani 3; Tony Arias, Frank Ferrara, Looby and Freddie Vasquez, 2. Twenty-eight others have scored one goal each.

In the lineup of the Everton team, coming here in June, will be four Irish stars, three whom played on Eire's international team.

Bear Bites Back at Tigers

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Washington University's TOM BRADY stepped into a pitch and walloped it into left for a single in the second inning as the Bears tried to overcome an early Missouri University lead in their game at Liggett Field yesterday. The Missouri catcher is JOHN GRACE. Missouri won, 7-5.

Mizzou Beats Bears, 7-5, on Windy Hilltop

By Harold Flachsbart

It was a day not even good for football and much too gusty for kite-flying, but that didn't deter the University of Missouri and Washington baseball teams from going through a nine inning game yesterday afternoon at Liggett Field.

Gusts up to 50 miles per hour swirled dust from the bare infield into the pitchers' eyes, but the batters had a hard time seeing, too, because six of them were hit by pitched balls and a seventh was nicked by a fourth ball called a walk.

Hi Simmons's Missouri Tigers proved best in the wind on the Hilltop and walked off with a 7-5 victory, their fourth of the season against one defeat. Norm Stewart, a high-scoring basketball star for Ol' Mizzou, was the winning pitcher, although he needed help from southpaw Wade Ladue in the eighth.

About 1200 hardy fans braved the chill wind and a temperature in the low forties and either sat, stood or stomped through the two-hour and 50-minute struggle that came to a dramatic end with a brilliant, diving catch by Jay Hankins, former Ritenour High athlete and "A" student, considered a good professional baseball prospect.

The Bears, behind at one stage by 6-0, were trying to put on the heat, if you can do that in a dust and wind storm, in the late innings. After scoring two times in the eighth to come within striking distance, the home team used a single by Nick Ollinger—his second of the game—with a hit batsman and base on balls to fill the bases with one away in the ninth.

LaDue fanned Tom Brady, the tenth Washington strikeout victim, and Catcher Len Marglous carried a big war club to the plate. The fans who weren't too cold pleaded for Len to bash one. He did. It was a sinking liner to the left-center slot that looked like a winning extra-base hit, with all three runners moving homeward.

But Hankins, a mite of an athlete of the Richie Ashburn type, with an intense desire to win, sped over from center field and reached the ball with his glove knee high while diving at full speed. It wasn't surprising that he finally fell on his stomach at least 10 feet beyond the point where he made his sparkling catch.

Thus the Bears lost for a second time in five games. Four Washington errors, eight bases on balls by Hilltop hurlers, four hit batsmen and, of course, always that wind, went into the downfall.

Allan Wasserman, tagged for seven hits and five runs, only two of which were earned, in the first three innings, was the losing pitcher.

The decisive output by Mizzou, a nationally-prominent collegiate baseball power, was in the first inning. Four runs were scored on three singles, by Paul Stehr, Bob Musgrave (who looks pretty much like Stan Musial batting) and Emil Kammer, plus two errors and one of those hit batters who couldn't decide whether the ball would curve with the wind or not curve at all.

Don Carter Rolls 1387 in U.S. Doubles

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURGH, April 7—St. Louisan Don Carter, after starting the day with a poor six-game total of 1066, came back with a brilliant 1387 in tonight's action in the national doubles tournament sponsored by the Bowling Proprietors Association of America. Carter's recovery, plus steady shooting by his partner, Pat Patterson, put the Budweiser pair back in contention at the half-way mark.

With one-third of the 64-team field still to roll their second six-game block, Carter and Patterson were in third place with a 4917 total. They had been forty-seventh.

Patterson shot 1219 in the afternoon and 1240 at night.

Carter's big series came on games of 196, 220, 236, 233, 246 and 256.

A Detroit pair, Pete Carter and Lee Jouglard, led after the first six games with 2657. Their teammates from the Stroh team, Buzz Fazio and Tony Lindemann, were second with 2570.

St. Louisans Billy Welu and Whitey Harris had a seventh place total of 2504. Ray Bluth and Dick Weber had 2385.

The tournament is being shot on two sets of alleys, one group having been used mostly for duckpins and therefore much more difficult to score on. All the first round leaders, as well as Welu and Harris, shot on the "good" alleys in the afternoon. The other St. Louisans rolled on the duckpin lanes, but all bowlerrs will eventually roll the same number of games on both sets.

Total pins for the 24 games will determine the new national champions when the meet winds up Sunday night.

Chuck Snyder of St. Louis and Ed Easter of Burbank, Calif., had 2307.

L.S.U. Board Tables Bar on Mixed Events

BATON ROUGE, La., April 7 (UP)—The Louisiana State University board of supervisors refused to act on a move today made by a pro-segregation leader to bar mixed athletic events of LSU at home or away.

The board unanimously tabled a resolution proposed by board member J. Stewart Slack of Shreveport, La., executive of the White Citizens Councils Association of Louisiana.

Although Slack agreed to defer action, he promised to bring up his resolution again at the next meeting of the board, probably in May.

Slack said if the university goes through with its present policy of playing racially mixed teams, the University of Wisconsin will send Negroes to play in the LSU stadium.

At its Feb. 18 meeting, the board adopted a policy which okayed a home and home football match with Wisconsin.

Slack was not present at the Feb. 18 meeting when the board agreed not to ban mixed athletic contests.

Before Slack offered a "color clause" proposal, the board heard Troy Middleton, president of LSU, read a statement on segregation policy at LSU, approving contests with teams using Negro players.

Later the board accepted the statement as a "fair and correct statement of LSU's policy."

TOKYO, April 7 (AP)—The mixed doubles pair of 17-year-old Erwin Klein and veteran Leah Neuberger was the only American team to survive another action-packed day in the world table tennis championships.

Klein, U.S. junior champion from Hollywood, and Miss Neuberger, American women's titleholder from New York, dropped only one set in three matches to advance to the quarter-finals along with five Japanese teams, a Romanian pair, and a Czech-English combination.

The Japanese also dominated the men's and women's doubles division. They had two teams in the semifinals of each competition. In addition the host team is favored to win both the men's and women's singles championships which get under way tomorrow with entrants from 17 nations and territories.

Semifinals in the three doubles tournaments will be held Tuesday. All finals will be Wednesday.

The Klein-Neuberger team advanced by the following victories:

Over Hong Kong's Sih Su Chu and Baguio Wong, 21-13, 22-20, 21-18; over Tage Flisberg, Sweden, and Hideko Nakayama, Japan, 21-17, 21-13, 20-22, 21-17; over Japan's Seiji Yamada and Taeko Nanba, 21-19, 21-18, 21-17.

$15,000 Race Set for June 16 At Fairmount

By Herman Wecke

A handicap valued at $15,000, the largest purse to be offered at Fairmount Park since 1930, when the last Fairmount Derby was held, has been scheduled for the meeting which opens at the Collinsville track, April 28.

The race, for three-year-olds and up, will be run on June 16 and will be over the one mile and one-sixteenth route.

Originally, the Fairmount officials planned to revive the Fairmount Derby, but this idea was dropped because too many owners had their three-year-olds lined up for engagements at different tracks and a representative field could not be lined up for the race.

"I believe with the handicap we will be able to get a better field than we would have by reviving the Derby," said General Manager Ray C. Bennigsen.

The last Fairmount Derby, run May 24, 1930, was for $15,000 added and netted the owner of the winner, Gallant Knight, $12,770. Reveille Boy was second and Longus third. Previous derbies, from 1926, when Haste was the winner, were for $25,000 added. Winners after Haste were Buddy Bauer, Misstep and Karl Eitel. Haste earned $24,725 for his owner; Buddy Bauer $24,400, Misstep $24,950 and Karl Eitel $23,650.

Since night racing was introduced at the Collinsville course, the largest purses have been for $5000.

Top purses in the district in the past two years have been at Cahokia Downs with the running of the St. Louis Derby. The first renewal, Oct. 9, 1954, was for $10,000 added, while last year, when Prince Eric was the winner, it was for $12,000 added. Prince Eric's owner's share of the purse was $10,225.

For the Fairmount handicap, the winner will receive $9750, second place $3000, third $1500 and fourth $750.

"I am certain that we will be able to line up a representative field for the feature," said Bennigsen, on hand to complete arrangements for the opening of the 60-day-and-night meeting, which will run from Tuesday through Saturday nights each week, with afternoon programs Memorial Day and July 4.

Bennigsen said that arrangement of the handicap was in keeping with the policy of bigger purses in an effort to obtain better horses for the Collinsville track. While nothing official has been done, stake races also are planned for the two holiday programs.

HOOFBEATS: Bennigsen and George Edw. Day, secretary and managing director of Cahokia Downs, at a meeting last week, agreed on a unified admission price of $1.20 for grandstand and $1.70 for the clubhouse this season. . . . Racing Secretary Jack Klucina is scheduled to report in a few days. . . . More than 500 horses are quartered at the track and at Creekside Farm.

Kansas U. Runs Away With Texas Relays

Jayhawks Win Six Events

AUSTIN, Tex., April 7 (UP) —Kansas' flashy Jayhawks dominated the Texas Relays today as they swept the weight events for the first time in the 29-year history of the meet and breezed to two Relays crowns.

Coach Bill Easton's trackmen won outstanding team honors and massive Jayhawk Bill Nieder was voted the top athlete in the two-day meet, wound up today before a record crowd of 14,000, for his performance last night in which he set a national outdoor collegiate record in the shot put.

The Jayhawks' Al Oerter won the discus throw crown with a heave of 165 feet, 3 inches, to chalk up Kansas' third weight title, along with Neider's record shot put display and national collegiate champion Les Bitner's meet record performance in the javelin throw.

Kansas also registered victories in the four-mile relay today, combined with titles in the distance medley and Kent Floerke's broad jump victory last night.

Abilene, Tex., Christian College's Bobby Morrow also shared in the glory as he raced to his second straight meet crown in the 100-yard dash with a time of 9.5 seconds and anchored his team's winning efforts in the college class 440 and 880-yard relays.

Kansas' six championships included the four-mile relay, with distance star, Al Frame anchoring the Jayhawks to victory for the second time, after last night's distance medley relay crown.

Frame's teammates on the four-mile team were Harold Long, Bernie Gay and Jerry McNeal.

Record-breaking performances dwindled as the trackmen faced a strong headwind which cut times for many events.

Abilene Christian raced to three relays victories—the quarter, half-mile and mile—to dominate the college division, and tied the meet mark of 1:26.0 in the 880-yard relay which the same school established last year.

Host Texas posted victories in the quarter-mile and mile relays as a foursome of George Schneider, Jerry Prewit, Bob Whilden and J. Frank Daugherty closed in 40.8 seconds in the 440 and the mile relay quartet raced the distance in 3:14.2.

Texas also registered second place finishes in the two-mile and half-mile relays.

While Kansas gained outstanding team honors, no team titles are awarded in the Texas relays.

Floerke posted third-place for Kansas in the open hop, step and jump, and the Jayhawks registered fifth-place finishes in both the two-mile and half-mile relays.

Don Stewart, Southern Methodist freshman, leaped 6 feet 8 inches to register a new mark for the freshman-junior college division.

No Spring Series Here Next Sunday, So Muny Teams Book Big Shows

By Neal Russo

Because no major league spring exhibition game is scheduled in St. Louis for the first time in some 50 years, the Municipal Baseball Association is arranging a special program for next Sunday at various public parks.

Bands, drums and bugle corps and appearances of former major leaguers already have been scheduled. But the big feature will be a game between Carondelet Sunday Morning Club No. 1, reigning Muny champions, and Florissant, the County League titleholder. This contest will be at 2:30 p.m. at Carondelet Park No. 1 diamond.

Also announced by the Muny's National Baseball Week committee for next Sunday's program were games at Fairground Park No. 1 diamond, Heine Meine Field and Berkeley Field.

At Fairground No. 1 Kutis North, Muny champion in 1954 and runner-up last season, will oppose Kutis South. Babe Martin, St. Louisan who played in the majors, will take part in special ceremonies that will include flag-raising and band music.

At Meine Field, Manager Johnny Tobin, the former Brownie, will send his Red Villas of the Meine League against the Pioneer A.C. in a game starting at 10 a.m. In a 2 o'clock contest on the same diamond, Carondelet No. 2 will face the Union Printers. A drum and bugle corps will take part in the program at Meine field.

The Berkeley senior league, a new Muny affiliate, has arranged a 1 o'clock midget game between the Berkeley Hawks and the Berkeley Comets. Then at 3, the Schmersahls and the Overland Braves, members of the Berkeley senior loop, will meet. Mayor Bill Bangert of Overland will speak in pregame ceremonies and a band will perform.

The Carondelet No. 1-Florissant contest is a natural, for Playing Manager Pat O'Reilly of Florissant was a regular on the 1948 Carondelet nine which barely missed taking the Muny crown. Then, too, Dave Bartosch, Florissant outfielder, was a pitcher on that Carondelet team which was managed by Monte Gummels, who still is pilot of the South Siders.

Johnny Sturm, ex-Yankee, will throw out the first ball at this game.

The Greater St. Louis Umpires Association has donated its entire roster and has invited the Muny to pick up to four men for each game.

Nance's Lad Wins Paumonok in Rain

First Big Triumph Of Year

NEW YORK, April 7 (UP)—Nance's Lad, winner of five stakes a year ago, scored his first of the year at rain-soaked Jamaica today with a powerful stretch run which carried him to a three-quarter length victory in the forty-seventh running of the $22,700 Paumonok Handicap.

Getting away to a slow start in the six-furlong sprint and racing wide all the way, Nance's Lad ran down horse after horse in the stretch until the race developed into a two-horse battle. In the last few strides Nance's Lad then broke away from Albert J. Mesler's War Command to win going away.

Valley Farms' Impasse was five lengths behind War Command in third position. Another three and one-half lengths behind was Brookmead Stable's Gandharva.

Nance's Lad, bred, owned and trained by Ex-Jockey Hilton (Rabbit) Dabson, carried 125 pounds over a track covered with three inches of soupy mud in the sparkling time of 1:11 3-5. With Jockey John Choquette in the saddle, the speedy son of Slide Rule returned $6.50, $3.80 and $2.80 across the board.

War Command returned $4 and $2.90, while Impasse paid $4.30.

Goodwin Named Head Coach at Western M. A.

First Lt. Lane A. Goodwin, who earned 14 athletic letters at Western Military Academy before his graduation in 1948, has been appointed head coach in football, basketball and track at the Alton school, it was announced today. Col. Ralph B. Jackson, superintendent, said that Goodwin's appointment would take effect in September.

Goodwin, who is 26, is now attending the University of Missouri, where he will receive a Bachelor of Science degree in June. He is married and the father of two children.

Goodwin attended Arkansas University for two years and the University of Missouri another two, playing varsity football at both schools. He was a paratrooper during two years in the Army, when his service included duty with the Eleventh Airborne Division in Germany.

While attending Western, Goodwin participated in football, basketball, baseball and track. He was co-captain of the academy's undefeated football team in 1947.

His father, R. B. Goodwin, was graduated from Western Military Academy in 1922.

Banding Reveals Amazing Wildfowl Facts.

A PINTAIL DUCK banded in California was shot three months later on a Pacific island 4500 miles away. A Caspian tern banded in Michigan was killed in Ohio 26 years later.

The story of surprisingly long flights and long lives of some wild birds is told in a leaflet just issued by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service.

Among ducks, the pintail seems to range the farthest. One was killed in England just 21 days after being banded in Labrador. Another, banded in North Dakota, was killed in South America.

In the longevity category, there is a record of a wild Cape Cod black duck that lived 17 years after being banded.

Banding of wild birds, the leaflet explains, was started by a Danish schoolmaster, H. C. C. Mortensen, in 1899. He began with storks, teals and starlings.

Since then, 7,000,000 birds have been banded in North America alone in a program that has provided valuable information to those engaged in the study and management of wild birds, particularly waterfowl.

More than 600,000 of the banded birds have been recovered or records made of their return to the place of banding.

Coast Guard Promises Aid

Irwin W. Frankenstein of Osage Beach, Mo., reports he came to St. Louis to discuss with Coast Guard officials the recklessness of some speedboat drivers at Lake of the Ozarks, a subject to which Outdoors gave attention last week.

Frankenstein says he was assured that the Coast Guard will have men on hand at the lake to deal promptly with speedboat operators who annoy or endanger fishermen this year.

A member of the Coast Guard auxiliary who served with a flotilla on Lake of the Ozarks last season told Outdoors the speedboat complaints were justified.

"Many of these operators are like Sunday drivers," he said. "They violate all the rules and laws.

"Some of them roar around the lake with their motors wide open, cutting in front of other boats. In many instances, tragedies are narrowly averted."

Tennessee reports it has had trouble with reckless speedboating on its big lakes. Offenses include speeding and creating wakes that nearly swamp fishing boats, operating at high speeds near swimmers and cutting across trolling lines of fishermen.

The Coast Guard points out that persons who operate boats in a reckless or negligent manner can be fined or sentenced to jail.

Fishing Issue Keeps Boiling.

Edwin B. Rives of Ashland, Mo., an employe of the United Soil Conservation Service, writes that he would like to get his "two bits in" on the question of whether fishing is slipping in Missouri and how it compares with Illinois.

"About two years ago I was transferred from Milwaukee, Wis., where I had been stationed several years," he says.

"On weekends the highways in Wisconsin were very unsafe because of the thousands of Illinois drivers who were going to Wisconsin to fish. I never saw such wild drivers. If that was a true sample, I must say Illinois has little or no fishing.

"In Wisconsin, the fishing licenses for residents costs $1 and a collection fee was prohibited. In Missouri, the license is $2, plus 25 cents for those who issue them, even our public officials like county clerks.

"I am unable to explain the $2 charge because most certainly fishing in Missouri is nothing to compare with Wisconsin. Are we being gypped?

"I am going to make a trip back to Wisconsin for two weeks this summer to again get some fishing."

Recognition for Bear Athletes; Lane to Speak

Washington University's annual, formal bow to its athletes in recognition of their deeds during the year will take a different form this time. An "Athletic Assembly" will be held Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock in Graham Memorial Chapel, and the entire student body will be invited to attend. Frank Lane, general manager of the Cardinals, will be the principal speaker.

The Athletic Assembly replaces the sports banquet previously tendered the athletes, with attendance limited to the athletes themselves and a speaker or two. The change, a university spokesman said, has been made "in an attempt to give the athletes greater recognition." In times past, many of the athletes didn't stay at the evening award dinners long enough to recognize themselves when their names were called. Straight-faced coaches assured, out loud, that the youths left to catch up on their evening studies.

J. D. Nolan, chairman of the assembly committee, will introduce the Bears basketball, baseball, football, swimming, tennis and track teams and give a resume of the teams' records this school year. Tom Adams, student senate president, will present the annual Senate trophies to football captains Bob Ladd and Mel Siegel.

Landy Renews Membership in 4-Minute Mile

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 7 (UP)—Australia's John Landy, running with virtually no opposition, broke the four-minute mile barrier for the fourth time today with a 3:53.6 clocking that equalled the second fastest performance ever recorded for the distance.

Immediately after he heat, the 25-year-old school teacher said he planned to run in the 5000-meter even in the 1956 Olympic Games here and that he would compete in the mile "only if I have enough speed left." The mile is scheduled after the 5000 meters in the Olympics.

Landy's time today, over a track slower than normal because of an overnight rain, was only six-tenths of a second off the world record of 3:58.0 he set at Turku, Finland, on June 21, 1954.

The lanky Australian's performance was remarkable, considering the fact that he has had little time to train since injuring his ankle in the national championships March 10. Landy's competition, consisting of 19-year-old Ron Clarke, John Murray and Geoff Warren, also did little in the way of pressing him to his fast clocking.

Landy whipped around the soft Olympic Park track in a speedy 58.6 seconds on the final quarter-mile lap to win by 100 yards over Murray.

Thus, the feat that escaped the world's greatest distance-runners for centuries, now has been achieved nine times. Dr. Roger Bannister of England was the first man ever to run a "miracle mile" when he clocked 3:59.4 at Oxford, England, on May 6, 1954.

Beagle Trial.

The Western Association of Beagle Clubs will hold its 28th annual derby winners stake at the Busch area, Weldon Spring, Mo., April 14-15. Winners will qualify for the international stake scheduled at Pittsburgh, April 27-29.

WHAT MAKES "THE ROCKET" ROCKET?

Here's why the engine that started the high-compression era still tops the field today!

WHEN THE TALK TURNS to automobile engines, you're pretty sure to hear about Oldsmobile's Rocket. And that's as it should be! The Rocket brought true high-compression performance to motoring. The Rocket set the standards . . . broke the records.

Today the same thing is going on. With a high in compression of 9.25 to 1 and a displacement of 324 cubic inches, the Rocket packs a potent new wallop.

THERE'S AN EFFORTLESS SMOOTHNESS, a freedom from vibration that tells you this one is a masterpiece of balance and precision. Then, too, this power plant is "big-bore, short-stroke" design. That means shorter piston travel for less friction, less wear and longer, economical engine life.

You'll rarely use the full 230 horsepower† under the hood, but you'll certainly know it's there! And, in all your driving, you'll go for the Rocket's high torque—that's the force that makes the wheels go 'round! Your toe can call a hefty 340 pound-feet of torque into play—to move you away from a light, to conquer a hill or pass by any emergency.

You'll meet Rocket Engine action at its finest and smoothest when you try it with Jetaway Hydra-Matic*. Gear transitions are liquid-smooth—take-off is immediate and positive.

VISIT OUR SHOWROOM today! Take your choice of Oldsmobile's 13 exciting models — a luxurious Ninety-Eight, dazzling Super 88 or low-price "88". Find your favorite! Then we invite you to "Rate the Rocket" . . . on the road!

†240 h. p. and 350 lb.-ft. of torque in Super 88 and Ninety-Eight models.
*Standard on Series Ninety-Eight; optional at extra cost on all other series.

Big Changes as Coast League Opens Tuesday

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7 (UP)—The Pacific Coast League looking a lot sharper than it has in years, opens its fifty-fourth season of continuous baseball next Tuesday amid a flock of new deals and new faces which have generated a fresh wave of hope for the loop's survival.

Three key developments took place at the end of last year's campaign which saw total attendance fall dismally short of the 3,000,000 predicted by former president Claire V. Goodwin.

In one major change, the Oakland Oaks moved their franchise up to Vancouver, B.C. for the first league shift in 18 years. President C. L. (Brick) Laws of the Oaks made the switch after his club drew only 141,397 paid at home last year. The novelty of having a Coast League team in Vancouver is expected to bring out the fans, although Laws has had some disappointments there already.

In another key development, the Boston Red Sox bought the floundering San Francisco Seals and are under the gun to give this critical city its first pennant contender since 1949. General Manager Joe Cronin thinks winning baseball will bring the crowds back. Last year's second division team drew 158,476.

New Portland Park.

The Portland Beavers, who had played in musty Vaughn Street Park since the turn of the centry, made another revolutionary move by transferring into the vast and modern Multnomah Stadium. The fact that the club climaxed this change by entering into a working agreement with Brooklyn and hiring the popular Tommy Holmes as manager is expected to bolster attendance considerably there.

There also is a new league president in the chair—Leslie O'Connor who formerly was an assistant to baseball commissioner Judge Landis and later was the P.C.L. attorney.

O'Connor has refused to go out on a limb and make any predictions on the attendance, which finished at 1,774,149 last season.

"Such predictions are silly because you can have so many variables," O'Connor said. "But we are looking for a better season than last year."

O'Connor pinned a lot of this on Boston's move into the San Francisco picture.

"I've always regarded San Francisco as the hub of the league and now that they are in strong hands, competition should be stepped up," O'Connor said of last year's sixth place club. "Good competition should help attendance in general."

No Sunday Baseball.

On the negative side is Laws's gamble at Vancouver. The failure by the Legislature to approve Sunday baseball was a shock to Laws, and already reports are abroad that the "Mounties" won't stay there more than one year.

As matters now stand, the schedule has been revised so that Vancouver will play day-night doubleheaders on Saturday followed by a game on Monday, which usually is an off night.

The league jazzed up its 168-game schedule by adopting the so-called "split week" series. Under the old setup, clubs would stay in town from Tuesday through Sunday. Now they will change partners in the middle of the week.

With the exception of Sacramento, all teams have definite major league tie-ups. This is expected to result in improved baseball in the Triple A variety.

Texas League Opens Friday With Five New Team Managers

DALLAS, April 7 (AP)—The storied old Texas League shoves off next Friday night on its sixty-first campaign in 69 years with more cause for optimism than any time in a decade.

President Dick Butler found that every club would have more money in the treasury on opening day that ever before and that pre-season ticket sales indicated a marked increase over 1955.

One new club faces the barrier. It is Austin, returning to the league after an absence of 42 years. Austin replaces Beaumont, where the franchise dried up.

The league starts the race with five new managers, one of the biggest upheavals in the piloting department. So precarious is the managerial job that the senior skipper is young Mel McGaha of Shreveport, who is starting his third season. McGaha at 29 is the youngest manager in the league.

Managers returning are John (Red) Davis at Dallas, Rudy Laskowski at Oklahoma City and McGaha. New skippers are Clay Bryant at Fort Worth, Joe Schultz at San Antonio, Al Widmar at Tulsa, Connie Ryan at Austin and Harry (The Hat) Walker at Houston.

Southern Hopes to Reverse Trend in Dwindling Attendance

ATLANTA, April 7 (AP)—The Southern Assn. begins its fifty-sixth baseball pennant race Tuesday night with President Charlie Hurth and most of the club owners optimistic that 1956 will mark the end of an eight-year attendance decline.

Paying patrons to the Class AA League's eight parks have dwindled annually from a record-breaking 2,180,344 in 1947 to last year's 1,127,112.

Season inaugurals send Atlanta to Birmingham, where the biggest opening night turnout is expected; Chattanooga to Nashville; Little Rock to Memphis's Russwood Park, where new owners have shelled out $200,000 in a lavish modernization program, and New Orleans to Mobile.

Secondary openers are set for Friday with Nashville at Atlanta, Birmingham at Chattanooga, Mobile at Little Rock and Memphis at New Orleans.

Hurth is confident that attendance will turn upwards. In 1955, five clubs bettered their 1954 figures, but whopping decreases in Atlanta and New Orleans and a lesser drop in Little Rock brought about the eighth consecutive over-all sag.

O.K., Mr. Thomas, we'll prove it. Independent testing laboratories report that there is NO gasoline of finer quality or higher octane in St. Louis than Cresyl 110 (we'll be glad to show you the reports). And as for price, we keep it low purposely to get larger volume. That still gives us a profit and it gives you savings. Why pay more when you can get the "best" for less.

World's Largest Retail Hardware Store Scheduled for Formal Opening at Big Bend at Lindbergh, in the County

This is the newly completed store of Central Hardware Co. at the southwest corner of Lindbergh boulevard and Big Bend boulevard, just on the outskirts of Kirkwood in St. Louis county. Said to be the largest retail hardware store in the world, it has more than 50,000 square feet of space under roof, illuminated parking area for 400 cars, all on a five-acre lot. All departments of the new store, which went into service a few days ago on an informal basis, will be opened officially next Wednesday. Initiating a pioneer procedure (for the Midwest) in hardware merchandising, the store has been set up on a self-serve basis for the benefit of the do-it-yourself home repair man and hobbyists. In conjunction with Better Homes & Gardens magazine, a kitchen planning center with six typical kitchens has been installed at one point in the store.

Biederman Buys Site Southwest

The Biederman Furniture Company, whose main store has been at Eighth street and Franklin avenue since the founding of the firm more than 70 years ago, has acquired a site for its second outlying city store at the northeast corner of Chippewa street and Jamieson avenue, in southwest St. Louis. The site includes a lot 165 feet by 122 feet, at the corner, on which a two-story 38,000-square-foot building is to be erected, and a lot to the east, 105 feet by 130 feet, for parking of 65 cars. Purchase of the ground was negotiated by Gladys Manion, Inc., and the Harry M. Fine Realty Co.

Construction of the building, which has been designed by Sterling B. McDonald, nationally known expert on furniture store planning and design, is expected to begin soon. The principle of "look-thru" used in the Normandy store, opened just a year ago, is used in the Chippewa design. The slow grade of Chippewa will permit motorist or pedestrian to see into both first and second stories of the new building.

Among special features of the store will be an entrance for shoppers using the parking lot. Upon entering a split-level lobby, the shopper will have a short flight of stairs to second or first floor.

The building will be air-conditioned year round. The store will be lighted to show merchandise colors and finishes in their true state by use of lighting units emitting the full spectrum color range in the light rays.

There are to be 19,000 square feet of display space on the street level floor, and an additional 19,000 square feet on the second floor. Both floors will be carpeted. Interior walls will be covered with peg board so that hanging mirrors, pictures, and shelvings can be placed in any position without damage to the walls.

Structurally, the building, of concrete and masonry, will be fireproof. The exterior will be in a textured facing of light coral with two daylight panels of polarized glass, one over each entrance, to diffuse strong sunlight. Full-length show windows of over 275 lineal feet will be topped by a broad aluminum canopy.

Biederman's will follow the same policy as the other stores, carrying a complete selection of furnishings accenting the modern trend. There will be a large floorcovering department and most of the well-known brand name appliances. A radio and television department will, likewise, feature most of the well known makes.

The selection of this site, as well as that of the Normandy store, was made with the idea of better serving the rapid-growing population outside of the central downtown district. This new store, which will serve south and southwest St. Louis and county, will make it possible for shoppers to avoid heavy traffic congestion and yet do selective buying, a representative of the store said.

Biederman's original store at 805 Franklin was opened in 1886 by Emanuel Biederman, when St. Louis was a bustling river town whose downtown section ended at Twelfth street. In fact, at that time, the entire section of St. Louis's population area extended less than three miles from the riverfront. At present under the management of William and David Biederman, sons of the founder, the firm is composed of a chain of seven stores.

In addition to the original headquarters store, Biederman's operates two more St. Louis area stores. One, the Bargain Outlet store at 724 Franklin, was acquired in 1940 because of the need of an outlet store for traded-in used furnitures, samples, and factory seconds. Last year, Biederman's opened its first St. Louis county store at 7400 Natural Bridge, Normandy.

Out-of-town expansion began in 1945 with the establishment of a store at 210 East Walnut, Springfield, Mo., to serve the southern part of Missouri and adjoining states. It is the largest of Biederman's branch stores, with more than 48,000 square feet of selling space. Within three years, business grew so rapidly it was necessary to acquire an annex store a half of block from main store there.

Design for New Biederman Furniture Store in Southwest Area

This is an architect's perspective of Biederman's Southwest, new furniture store to be erected at northeast corner of Chippewa street and Jamieson avenue. Design is by Sterling B. Meat Packer Buys Contractor's Suburban Home

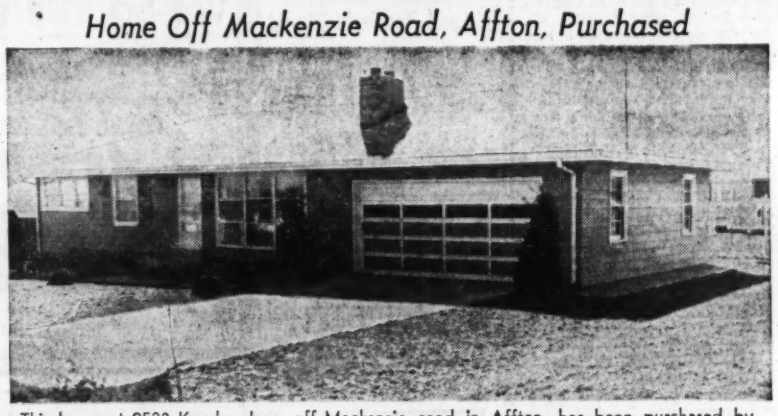
This seven-room brick ranch home at 11223 Bellefontaine road has been purchased by Mr. and Mrs. John A. Volz Jr. (he's in the meat packing business, the agent said) from Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Sternberg (he's a contractor) in a transaction negotiated by the Edw. L. Kuhs Realty Co. The home has four bedrooms, two baths, a music room, two-car garage, is on large landscaped lot.

Home Off Mackenzie Road, Affton, Purchased



This home at 9528 Koerber lane, off Mackenzie road in Affton, has been purchased by Clarence H. and Marguerite M. Witte from Stanley and Naomi Subert in a transaction negotiated by the Clara Hempelmann Realty Co. The home has three bedrooms, bath and lavette, is on an 85 by 150-foot lot.

St. Luke's to Modernize Two Floors in Old Wing

Plans for the modernization of the second and third floors of the old east wing of St. Luke's Hospital, 5535 Delmar boulevard, are reported by Eugene F. Williams Jr., president of the board. The cost of this next stage of the expansion program of the hospital will approximate $300,000. Part of this cost is expected to be covered by a Ford Foundation grant of $111,800 announced last December. The balance will be sought, Williams said, in a continuation of the fund-raising effort which has brought in $1,636,280 since 1951. Plans call for completion of the work in 90 days.

The two floors involved in the new project will be used as bedrooms, as in the past. They are immediately above the first-floor clinics and outpatient department which were completed in 1954 during the

Jefferson Bank Into New Block

The 64-year-old Jefferson Bank and Trust Company last week occupied its new building at an historic location, 2600 Washington boulevard, a block long area bounded by Washington, Jefferson avenue and Locust street, famous as the site of the old Coliseum and Uhrig's Cave.

The new structure is the first all-new bank building constructed in the City of St. Louis since 1928. It is built of concrete, brick and aluminum. The exterior is marked by functional rectangular columns of lustrous porcelain enamel with narrow, vertical windows stretching almost the entire height of the building along the Jefferson avenue side. A flat, sloping concrete roof extends as an overhang for the glass areas and forms a canopy over the main entrance on Washington. It is 63 feet by 111 feet, 8 inches.

A circular drive-in unit with butterfly roof above four drive-up windows can be reached from any one of three entrances off Washington, Jefferson or Locust. Vacuum tubes carry money cartridges from the drive-in tellers' windows to the bank in two and one-half seconds.

The bank's interior has pastel decor.

The principal banking area on the main floor has 15 custom-built teller counters along the west side. The officers' area along the east side is carpeted and is unobstructed by columns. Lighting is provided by recessed fluorescent ceiling panels, supplemented by incandescent, soft-glow spotlights.

The bank's accounts and consumer credit departments are also on the main level. The auditing and bookkeeping department is in a large room separate from the principal banking area.

Once the site of Uhrig's Caves, St. Louis' most famous entertainment spot three-quarters of a century ago, the basement contains the bank's new vault with 20,000-pound door Contemporary styling, lifting midtown area suddenly from the encrustations of 1890s gingerbread architecture to a new day, marks new Jefferson Bank & Trust Co. building, 2600 Washington boulevard, into which the bank moved its operations last week.

Under contemporary-styled ceiling, lights gleam on principal banking room floor of new Jefferson bank. Accounts department and officers' stations are in carpeted area in foreground and 10 of 15 teller windows are pictured. There also is a large drive-up station connected to main bank by tunnel.

Schulenburg Opening New Subdivision

Formal opening has been set for today of a new subdivision called Lanyard Lane, a development of H. W. (Jim) Schulenburg on the north side of Dougherty Ferry road two blocks west of Geyer road in Kirkwood. It is across the road from the H. A. Schulenburg company's long well-known Bedford Oaks subdivision, near the new Kirkwood High School and the Keysor grade school.

The subdivision has a concrete cul-de-sac street with public sidewalk all around the street to permit the use of wheel toys all the way around without children getting into the street itself, or out onto Dougherty Ferry road. The walk has been put in by the developer and is being turned over to Kirkwood for maintenance

The area has city sewers, city water and other utilities. Although the same floor plan is to be used in the construction throughout, no two fronts will be alike in the subdivision, a spokesman said.

A display home has been furnished for the opening by Huddleston Furniture-Interior, of Kirkwood. Promotion is in charge of the H. A. Schulenburg Co.

Name Omitted

In a report last week on the building of a new automatic auto wash property on Hampton avenue lines under an architect's sketch said construction would be by "the Supply Co.," leaving out the identifying part of the company's name. The company is "The Ladue Supply Co."

Architects' Sketch of Swimming Pool, Bath House and Shelter Area for Godfrey, Ill., Play Project Recently Approved

Scheduled for contract letting as soon as estimates can be completed is construction of a swimming pool, bath house and other shelter areas in 10-acre park on Greenwood lane north of Route 100 at Godfrey, Ill., for the 500-member Summer's Port, Inc., a co-operative recreational venture. Plans by Architect Erwin Carl Schmidt have been approved by the organization's president, Carl Crumrine, and the engineering committee, of which Jim Voege is chairman and Sam Mortel assistant chairman. Design calls for L-shaped pool 35 by 82.6 feet and 35x75 feet, meeting Olympic standards, shelters of cantilevered, welded steel supports covered with buff colored asbestos board decking; walls and partitions of varied height in stacked-bond concrete block. At the pool there will be dressing rooms and basket checking areas, concession areas and lounging and play areas under roof, a total in excess of 2000 square feet. Construction in time for opening by July 4 is anticipated.

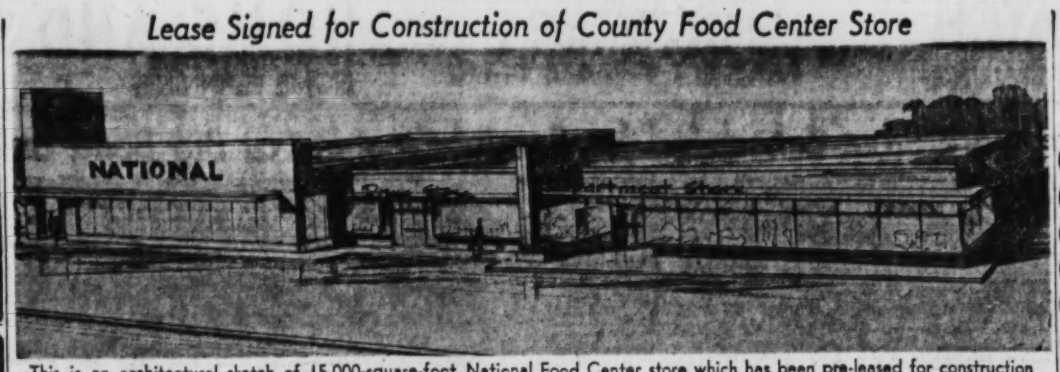
Lease Signed for Construction of County Food Center Store



This is an architectural sketch of 15,000-square-foot National Food Center store which has been pre-leased for construction at the southeast corner of Chambers and Halls Ferry roads in North St. Louis county. The building is one of three retail units to be erected on a three and one-half acre tract at the corner by Duke-Young, Inc. Ownership of the property will be in the name of Chambers Investment Co., of which S. G. Duke is president, Glenn P. Boehm vice-president and treasurer and Joseph F. Murphy is secretary. This new development is across Halls Ferry from another Duke-Young development of 10 small stores for neighborhood merchants. Immediate satellites of this store in a $500,000 development are expected to be a drug store and a small department or furniture store. The corner is near the heart of a development of some 6000 or more homes between Ferguson and Bellefontaine Neighbors and just north of part of Jennings.

Kroger Co. Goodfellow Store Next

Plans to build a Kroger supermarket at Goodfellow boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue, were reported yesterday by Robert A. Hughes, manager of the retail food firm's St. Louis branch.

Property at that location, adjacent to Niedringhaus Metal Products Company, has been leased from various Niedringhaus trusts, the Guaranty Trust Co. of Missouri, trustee, Hughes said. R. J. Fahey was the real estate broker and Swann Construction Co. will handle building of the store. The contemporary building was designed by Kramer & Harms, architects. Several small buildings on the site will be razed to provide the necessary store and parking lot area.

The new store, with a 110 by 150 foot shopping area, will be nearly three-fourths the size of a football field. Chrome-trimmed shelves, a 200-car parking lot, psychologically planned colors for a more pleasant atmosphere, air-conditioning and automatic door openers form a background for 4000 or more food and non-food items to be stocked.

Buys Ground At Cahokia To Subdivide

The Parkfield Development Co., of which Theodore M. Lazarcheff is president, has acquired a tract of ground of more than 56 acres in Centerville Station, near Cahokia, Ill., for the development of a new residential subdivision to be called Parklane Manor.

The Parkfield Development Co. currently is completing the last homes in a 300-home subdivision called Parkfield Terrace, adjacent to the new tract. The company also has acquired a tract in Caseyville, Ill., to be developed as Countryside Gardens, it was reported.

In the deal for the Centerville Station tract, Parkfield was represented by the law office of Rosenblum & Goldenhersh of St. Louis and sellers of the ground, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Rolle, were represented by Real Estate Agent Philip H. Cohn and Lawyer Horace Eggman Jr. of East St. Louis.

Lazarcheff also heads a development and building company called S. and L. Development Co., operating on the East Side.

Sketch of Swimming Pool Under Construction on Holiday Hill

This is an artist's sketch of swimming pool under construction for Holiday Hill recreation development at northwest corner of Brown road and Natural Bridge road, in Berkeley. Opening on May 24 is anticipated.

Swim Pool Being Built For Holiday

Under construction in the Holiday Hill recreation park at the northwest corner of Brown road and Natural Bridge road in Berkeley is a new swimming pool, expected to be completed in time for opening May 24.

Construction of the pool is being done by the Midwest Pool & Court Co.

The pool is to be a "T" shaped structure with a main swimming area 82 feet and one half feet (25 meters) long by 40 feet wide with a diving alcove 40 feet by 35 feet. Around the pool is to be an 11,000 square foot sun deck of reinforced concrete with a non-skid surface. The pool itself is being constructed of pneumatically applied concerte heavily reinforced with steel bars.

The top of the structure is to be capped with a bull nose cast stone coping, to prevent deck water and debris from rolling into the pool and serve as a hand hold. Overflow gutter of the pool will be a new "float out" type, 12 inches wide and tiled in blue ceramic mosaic pattern.

Interior of the pool will be surfaced with a dense glazed marble plaster, with non-skid finish in the shallow water. Use of the marble interior is the most modern method of combatting algae and bacteria growths in a swimming pool since the dense surface leaves no void in which growth may occur. To facilitate keeping the pool clean, there will be a vacuum system built into the walls to pick up any dirt or debris.

The filter system will be the Diatamaceous Earth type and recirculate the entire 215,000 gallons of pool water every seven hours. A gaseous type chlorinator will continuously eject chlorine into the pool.

For night swimming the pool will be equipped with 4500 watts of underwater lights, and flood lights around the deck area. Each underwater light is to be grounded and each to have separate fuse for safe operation. The entire pool area will be enclosed with a six foot chain link fence. Within the fence, there will be concessions and swimming supplies in a patio area separate from the sun deck. A spectators' walk will be built adjacent to the sun deck outside the fence.

Bathhouse facilities will be provided in remodeling of an old colonial two-story house on the hill. The interior of the house has been rebuilt with modern, sanitary, dressing and checking facilities to serve the pool.

The pool was designed and is being built by Midwest Pool & Court Co. under contract with Pro Fairways, Inc., of St. Louis.

New Bank

and nearly 2000 safe deposit boxes. There are six private coupon booths, each with individual lock, for use by safe depositors. The personnel recreation quarters in the basement is equipped with sink, refrigerator and stove.

A tunnel extends from the basement to the drive-in station.

The board of director's conference room and office of board chairman, Peter Herzog, are on the mezzanine floor. The bank's real estate department, telephone switchboard and guest reception area also are on the upper level.

Cost of the new bank and the site exceeded $750,000, according to Herzog. "Construction of our new bank in the heart of the mid-town area is a demonstration of our faith in the future of St. Louis," he said. "We hope that our investment will stimulate further improvements in this area, which is one of the most important commercial and industrial neighborhoods of the city."

Dillon J. Ross, president, says the new bank is designed from the customer standpoint to meet today's auto-age needs. "Adequate parking and easy drive-in service are no longer banking 'extras'," he pointed out. "Today, we know it is necessary to provide these conveniences to assure our customers that they can bank when it's most convenient for them to bank."

The bank or the drive-in will be open a total of 56 hours every full working week. Hours are: Mondays and Thursdays, 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. The long hours are designed to accommodate workers in the downtown area who want to bank on their way to and from work. In addition, there is a walk-up night depository on the Washington boulevard side, and a night drive-up depository on the north side of the drive-in station.

The drive-in and parking area will be floodlighted, and landscaping is under way.

This is the Jefferson Bank and Trust Company's third move in its 64-year history. Founded in 1892 with opening day deposits of $43,833.94, the bank originally was on the northwest corner of Jefferson and Franklin avenues. In 1922, the bank moved across the street to its more recent location at 2337 Franklin.

Total resources today exceed $19,600,000, with approximately 14,000 depositors.

The new bank today will be the scene of a Jefferson family housewarming party and buffet dinner. All bank personnel, directors and officers will attend the late afternoon affair.

The new bank location at 2600 Washington is part of a 25-acre park owned more than a century ago by Dr. William Beaumont, renowned surgeon and biologist who first observed the action of gastric juices in the human stomach.

In 1849, the property was sold to Ignatz and Joseph Uhrig, brewery operators, who expanded the existing 40 foot long cave to 210 feet by 20 feet wide and 20 feet high. Here the Uhrigs lagered beer.

Thirty years later Uhrig's Cave had become a theater featuring al fresco operas, the forerunner of the St. Louis Muny Opera. In 1884, under Thomas McNeary, Uhrig's Cave entered its period of greatest glory. It was the first entertainment spot in St. Louis to use electric lights. John Drew, Julia Marlow, Augustin Daly and Della Fox appeared there. More than 3500 persons could be accommodated in the pavilion and garden of Uhrig's Cave.

The westward shift of population, and the introduction of streetcars, made it impossible for the McNearys to operate profitably. They transferred the property on a 99-year lease to the St. Louis Coliseum Company to construct a central arena for sports, theatrical performances and exhibitors. The cornerstone was laid Aug. 22, 1908, and the arena was completed in 1909.

Gypsy Smith, a famed revivalist, was the first to appear at the Coliseum. Enrico Caruso, Bill Tilden, Billy Sunday, Johnny Weissmuller, Strangler Lewis and Max Reinhardt were some the entertainment and sports greats who appeared at the Coliseum. The Veiled Prophet Ball was held there and Woodrow Wilson was nominated for President at the 1916 Democratic National Convention there.

In 1925, the Coliseum owners installed the world's largest indoor swimming pool, but a changing St. Louis and changing times sounded the death knell of the famous arena. During World War II, $250,000 worth of new automobiles, frozen by government regulation, were stored there.

In 1950, the Coliseum was empty, neglected. Condemned on June 30, 1953, razing was begun the following month.

PRIME AND FILL

When new wood is to be painted, a primer is applied first. Next, all cracks or nail-head indentions are filled with spackling material (indoors) or putty (outdoors). The filler is carefully smoothed and allowed to dry before brushing on the finishing coats.

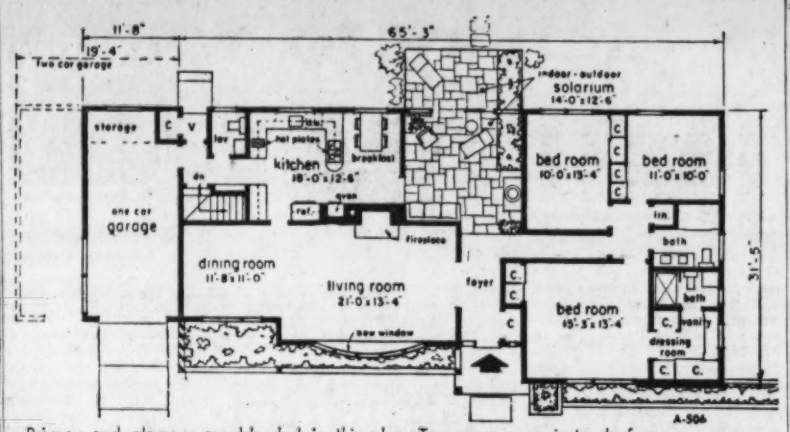
Solarium With Sliding Glass Doors Feature This Home Plan

Low, sleek lines and long stone planting boxes under large windows grace this contemporary American Home, plan A-506.



Privacy and glamour are blended in this plan. Two-car garage, instead of one-car garage, may be built as ground area provides for extra length.

15-Acre Tract Bought on Olive Road to Divide

The Town Development Co. has purchased a 15-acre tract of ground on the north side of Olive Street road just west of Greaser road in Creve Coeur for subdivision, P. C. Moellentine of the Westover Realty Co. reports.

Moellentine, whose company was agent in the transaction, said the company plans to develop a subdivision to be called "Country Squire Estates." The ground rolls somewhat and will permit construction of homes of split-level design, he said.

Indoor-outdoor solarium with sliding glass doors is heart of this house.

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER

A house built around a solarium to make the most of indoor-outdoor living is featured in Design A-506.

Unusual planning divides this house into distinct zones with the entrance foyer and solarium completely separating the sleeping area from the rest of the home. Still, all the rooms are linked by excellently designed circulation making passage from any point to another both easy and natural.

The centralized location of the solarium highlights the conveniences that have been packed into this plan. If this distinctive room is used for intimate dining or informal entertaining, service from the kitchen is ideal. If it is used for late reading, the bedrooms are just a few steps away. If it is used for a rainy day play area, mother can keep an eye on the youngsters without moving from the kitchen.

This solarium brings the garden and landscaping into the heart of this house. Paved in vari-colored flagstones, red quarry tile or tinted and scored concrete, the floor continues outdoors to form a patio or terrace. Sliding glass doors separate the indoor and outdoor parts of the solarium. Planting boxes are matched on each side of the glass wall.

Whatever view is available behind this house, whether a distant vista or closed-in garden landscaping, it is visible as soon as you step in the front doorway.

Good Sized House.

A good-sized house, this design gives you a total floor area of 1823 square feet, without counting the garage. There are three bedrooms, two bathrooms, an extra lavatory and a full basement. Architect Rudolph A. Matern has incorporated a maximum of attractive features in this house.

For example, the living room is especially well planned for pleasant placement of furniture. It has a large log burning fireplace centered directly opposite a front bowed window that is 12 feet wide. An open-plan dining room gives this living area a combined length of almost 33 feet from the foyer. The dining room also has a large front window.

The kitchen is especially roomy and light. It has one wide window over the sink and another at the breakfast table. The back of the fireplace chimney wall provides a natural place for a built-in oven. An ample corner is provided for a large refrigerator. Separate sets of top burners are suggested in two locations in the kitchen. One small set of burners is handy for coffee-making.

Twelve Closets.

Off the kitchen hall is a lavatory. This is handy from the back door, garage and basement stairs. The rear service vestibule provides direct passage to the basement without entering the kitchen. Coat closets are located at both the front and back doors. There are 12 closets in the house.

A dressing room including a built-in vanity, a window and three closets adjoins the master bedroom and its private bathroom. The latter has an oversize stall shower.

The main bathroom off the hall, to serve the two rear bedrooms, has a double vanity style lavatory. A big linen closets adjoins. The complete seclusion of this part of the house insures quiet.

The architect says he designed this house for construction over a full basement because of the abundance of recreation space available economically in a basement of this size. It is virtually long enough for a bowling alley—the standard alley being 60 feet long. This basement is 65.

Space for a complete laundry is afforded under the kitchen, where plumbing taps would be economical and the stairway adjacent. There is ample space for a large game room — big enough for a billiard table. Under the dressing room corner of the house would be an appropriate spot for a photo dark room, since plumbing taps from the bathroom lines would be handy.

Exterior styling of this house is especially smart, with low, sleek lines accented by colorful vertical siding and cut stone. Long stone planting boxes extend under all of the front windows. The front entrance door, flanked by glass sidelights, is protected from the weather by an extension of the roof overhang.

This is a house that would add distinction to any community.

A study plan for this home (A-506) may be had for 35c by addressing the building editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Room 602, 1111 Olive street, St. Louis 1, Mo. You can take this study plan to your mortgage lender or builder to get rough estimates of construction costs, after which working blueprints and specification sheets may be had direct from the architect if you decide to use the plan for your home.

2 Crestwood Plaza Units Taking Form

With tenants committed to leases for a considerable part of the rentable area, construction of the first two sections of the Crestwood Plaza Shopping Center now under way on Highway 66 at Watson and Sappington roads is progressing rapidly amid mounting statistics of such building essentials as earth moving, concrete yardage, steel tonnage and sewer pipe.

Louis I. Zorensky and Milton L. Zorensky owners of the mercantile development, said two additional leases have been made, one for a Thom McAn shoe store, arranged with Thom McAn district director for this area, John H. Harris; the other, National Shirt Shops, nationally known chain of men's wear furnishers.

"The new store will be one of the largest and finest in the entire chain," said Philip Ade, district manager for National.

Other retailers who have already signed leases for space in Crestwood Plaza Shopping Center are: Sears Roebuck & Co., Kroger, F. W. Woolworth, Walgreen and Pam's Poll Parrot Shoes. It is understood that a number of other leases have been signed and will be reported soon.

8000 Apprentice Bricklayers in Contest Series

The eighth Annual Bricklayer Apprentice Competition, sponsored by the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union (AFL-CIO), will be held in Seattle, Wash., from April 20 to 25, Union President Harry C. Bates announced. The competition will be part of the AFL-CIO Union Industries Exposition at the Civic Auditorium.

About 8000 young bricklayer apprentices are now engaged in local competitions to choose state champions who will participate in the Seattle contest next month. Each of the 48 states will send one or two state champions to compete in the national finals. The state champions are eligible if they have not completed more than two years of their training by April 1.

Winner of the Annual Bricklayer Apprentice Competition will be crowned Bricklayer Apprentice Champion of 1956 at colorful ceremonies climaxing the six-day contest at the Seattle exposition. He and the three runners-up will receive cash prizes presented by the BM&PIU and an all-expense paid trip to the Structural Clay Products Institute Annual Convention at Boca Ration, Fla. next fall. At this convention, the winner will be presented with the Belden Trophy by America's brick and tile manufacturers.

Optical Company Leases Washington Avenue Loft Space

The American Optical Co., claimed to be the largest manufacturer and distributor of optical products in the nation, has leased the second floor of the building at 1709 Washington avenue from the Dr. Thomas O'Reilly Estate Co. for office and operational area here.

Jack Dubinsky & Sons, leasing agent, said conditioning of the area will be completed in about 60 to 90 days and the company will move its operations to the new location from the fifth floor of the Victoria Building, where it has been located in smaller space for more than 16 years.

Most of the new quarters is to be air-conditioned and ceiling is being acoustically treated, Dubinsky said.

The company's St. Louis office and laboratory is one of the largest units of the company's distributing organization and serves as a zone headquarters for operations in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana, the agency said.

Incorporated in the new office will be a scientific instrument division to supply research laboratories, hospitals, educational institutions and industry, and there also will be a safety engineering division for industrial problems.

Negotiations are in progress for leasing first floor and basement of the building at 1709 Washington, the agency said, complete renovation being under way on those floors as well as in the area for the optical company.

Names Assistant

Morris Corson, managing director of the Congress Hotel, reports appointment of Bill Howard as executive assistant manager of the hotel. Howard goes to the Congress from the Coronado (Sheraton), where he was sales manager. He has 11 years experience in the hotel field, five of them with the Sheraton organization.

The Congress Hotel was purchased last December to become a part of a chain of four hotels operated by Jos. E. Kaufman and Corson.

Campau Jr. Buys Tract To Develop

Lee Campau Jr., president of Terra Development Corporation took title last week to about 25 acres of ground in a partially developed subdivision called Country Lane, just west of the new Principia School Campus at the southeast corner of Clayton and Weidman roads in the Mason Ridge School District. Campau plans to complete development of the tract and to build there.

Campau currently is completing Norwood Manor subdivision in Normandy, a total of 250 homes, and plans to move to the new area within the next few weeks. He hopes to have a display home ready for opening there by the time of National Home Week in September.

For the first time, in this new development, Campau plans to go into homes of contemporary styling. He always has done conventional ranchers until now. Bedrooms all big enough for twin beds are being planned he said, the idea being a country-sized home for country-style living. There is a two-acre private park within the subdivision.

The Roth Realty Co. was sales agent for the St. Louis County Development Co., which had begun the Country Lane development and erected a few homes there. The Branch Realty Co. was agent for Campau in the purchase and will handle promotion.

BLOWN WITH THE WIND

Never paint outdoors when there is a high wind—unless you want dust and bugs blown onto your fresh paint. Best time to paint is during clear, dry weather.

33 Acres Bought South of Fenton For Subdivision

A tract of ground containing 33 acres, on Highway 141, one mile south of Fenton, has been purchased by Ervin G. Rott of the Rumer Realty Co., who will subdivide it.

There will be homesites for individuals who want to build to their own specifications, Rott said. Two three-bedroom ranch type homes, for display, are under construction.

Numerous lots will be wooded and have a panoramic view of the surrounding area.

The subdivision will be known as Fenton Forest.

TIP FOR HIDING PIPES

To hide pipes in the corner of a basement converted into a recreation room, bridge them with tempered hardboard fastened to lumber framing members, creating an attractive geometric design. If there are shutoff valves, be sure to leave access by sliding the panel in grooves cut into the lumber.

Bloom All Year 'Round Mark of Good Gardener

By EDNA KING MANDEVILLE

A sure sign of a good gardener is the ability to have "plenty of flowers" in bloom from early spring to late fall. Actually, this ability isn't hard to acquire. Only a little extra care in choosing varieties is necessary.

The earliest flowers to bloom are the perennials, whose roots lie dormant over the winter and revive early in the spring. This revival occurs even before the ground is warm enough for seeds to germinate. Of course, early blooming of perennials must be planned a year ahead. Planted in the spring, some blossoms may appear late the first season, but the real blooming takes place a year later.

There are many wonderful perennials, and sometimes I think the amazing way certain varieties bloom almost before the weather warms up is one of the greatest thrills in gardening.

Prefers Long-Spurred.

Very early varieties include Arabis (Rock Cress), Aubrietia (Rainbow Rock Cress), Gold Dust Alyssum (the common name for Saxatile), and Siberian Wallflower. Other sturdy perennials that bloom quite early and continue to do so well into summer include Blue Flax, Carnation, Columbine, English Daisy, Forget-Me-Not, Clove Pinks, Maiden Pink, Delphinium, Foxglove, Russell Lupine, Painted Daisy, Iceland Poppies and Sweet William. Mid season perennials would include Balloon Flower, Gypsophila, Hollyhock and Hibiscus.

Of the several fine Columbines, I personally prefer the "Mrs. Scott Elliott's," a long-spurred variety with an unusually wide range of brilliant colors.

Chinese Lantern is another extremely popular perennial, but not for early blossoming. Late in the fall its pods turn an enchanting orange, looking for all the world like tiny lighted Chinese lanterns. Hanging from the stalks, one below another, there are sometimes a dozen on a single stalk.

Hardy Annuals.

Next to bloom after the perennials are the hardy annuals. The roots of all annuals die at the end of the season. The strength of the plant goes into the production of blossoms and seeds. As a result, annual flowers tend to be larger, more colorful and more abundant than perennials.

Hardy annuals are just what the name implies. Cold weather doesn't faze these stout-hearted flower fighters a bit. Their seeds germinate earlier than those of other annuals, and when sown in early spring many of them are the first to bloom after the perennials. There are numberless hardy annuals, among the most popular and earliest to bloom being Bachelor's Button, Calendula, Poppy, Larkspur and Candytuft.

With plans made for the perennials and early blooming annuals, you can next turn your attention to the selection of regular annuals. These begin to bloom in midsummer and continue in some cases well into the fall. Among them are such popular flowers as Celosia, Cockscomb, Four O'Clock, Marigolds, Petunia, Sunflower, Verbena and Zinnia.

Then there are some annuals that come into bloom comparatively late in the season. A partial list of these would include Asters, Cosmos, African Daisy, Salvia, Ten Weeks Stock and Sunflower. When some of the earlier blooming annuals are beginning to look a bit the worse for wear these late bloomers will be holding forth in all their glory. Thus in an average to mild climate, you can have lovely, soul-satisfying blossoms in your garden from early spring until late fall—almost 9 full months of blossoms!

I should like to call your attention to two new flowers that I feel certain will interest you. They are Carnival Petunia and Mardi Gras Snapdragon, F2 hybrids. The fact that they are both second generation hybrids means that they have plenty of real hybrid vigor.

Carnival Petunia is a brilliant array of many colors of large flowering, delicately waved or fringed Petunia. The wide color range includes the striking red that was first seen in Fire Chief, many shades of pink and salmon, a pure white, and an attractive pink and white, a rich purple and several unusual lavender-pink and raspberry colors.

Dahlia Society Plans a Bazaar At Shaw Garden

The first annual bazaar of the Greater St. Louis Dahlia Society is scheduled to be held in the Museum Building at the Missouri Botanical Garden from 1 to 6 p.m. next Sunday to raise funds to finance the 1957 Mid-west Dahlia Show. The show next year is to be in St. Louis. It was last here in 1948. Next fall it is to be in Moline, Ill.

Growers from 20 midwestern states are expected to bring exhibits to St. Louis for the show next year, the last weekend in September.

Jerry Ludwig, public relations chairman for the Greater St. Louis Dahlia Society, says dahlias should be planted five inches deep with just enough earth over them to cover the eyes and that the depression should be filled to ground level as the growth reaches upward. The plants have to be protected from frost, though, and shouldn't go into the ground too early. About May 1 is a good time, though protection is necessary up through May 10 in this area.

Items to be presented in the bazaar will all be donated by members of the Dahlia Society, and the event will be open to the public. The society will have its regular meeting at the Cabanne Branch library on Union boulevard next Friday at 8 p.m., with talks on raising dahlias and about the bazaar and coming shows.

Women's Clubs Propose Planting Pink Dogwoods

The Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs has launched a campaign for the planting of pink dogwoods (C. Florida Rubra) all over the state.

Mrs. Fred Garret of Springfield, Mo., reports that Sorosis in Springfield has sponsored the planting of more than 6000 dogwoods in that area and that the tree will do well all over the state, the climate being suitable.

Cornus Florida, the white dogwood, is a native tree in Missouri, but the pink kind is a graft, Mrs. Garret points out in a letter to women's clubs as garden chairman for the federation. The pink flowering tree is called "the most beautiful flowering tree" in many nursery catalogues, she adds.

One of the few pests that bother dogwoods are borers, which attack primarily while a tree is young. This can be overcome, says Mrs. Garret, by placing a piece of naptha soap in the crotch of limbs at the heart of the tree and letting rains wash naptha suds down to the base of the tree. A saucer shaped depression about the base of the tree, to keep water from running away from it, will help.

MEYER Z-52 ZOYSIA
LAWN GRASS

Chokes Out Crabgrass and Weeds . . . Stays a Rich Green All Summer . . . Makes a Permanent Lawn

Featured by ARTHUR GODFREY on TV . . . in LOOK and Other Magazines

Grows best and stays a rich green in hottest, driest weather when other grasses wither and burn out. Planted as plugs, spreads to cover completely, driving out crabgrass, weeds and old lawn grass. Spreads rapidly in bare ground, more slowly in an old lawn. Loses color after heavy frost, regains it in the spring. A genuine Meyer Z-52 Zoysia lawn is permanent, it will never require renewal, will need much less mowing and upkeep. Requires sunlight, will not grow in dense shade.

YOU DO IT BOOK

The family wanting to do its own kitchen modernizing will find a useful guide in R. P. Stevenson's book, "How to Build Cabinets for the Modern Kitchen," published by Simmons-Boardman. Well illustrated with drawings, the 240-page volume is authoritative and complete with directions. An important material in kitchen modernizing, hardboard, is among the products recommended. An example is its specification for a curved-door end cabinet, in which the hardboard is readily bent for this interesting installation.

New F-2 Hybrid Snapdragon

This new hybrid snapdragon is called Mardi Gras, has vigor, earliness and an extreme color range.

Snapdragons and Petunias Hybridize on First Cross

Only two major classes of flowers have so far yielded to the technique of hybridization—the kind of hybridization that provides first generation crosses between unrelated inbred lines. These flowers are petunias and snapdragons. Let's consider the snapdragons.

The first people to use F-1 hybrid snapdragons were the greenhouse operators who could afford to spend extra money for seed in order to get extra fancy flower spikes. Such fine flowers resulted from this hybrid research that seed breeders have turned to the application of hybridization to garden strains of snaps.

First generation hybrids must be produced by hand pollination and are extremely expensive, so the F-1 snapdragons remain in the province of the professional grower. However, both in petunias and now in snapdragons a new technique has been developed to make highly effective mixtures in the second generation. This F-2 is half again as vigorous as the standard strains, but vigor is only part of the story.

By creating F-1 (this F-1 and F-2 designation simply means first generation or second generation after hybridizing) hybrids from inbreds of similar plant types but of strongly different flower colors it is possible to manipulate the segregation of colors in the F-2, at the same time retaining good plant uniformity.

What this means in the garden is that an F-2 hybrid snapdragon like the new Mardi Gras mixture for instance affords the gardener strong growing, very early blooming plants and an assortment of colors greater than any ever seen before in this flower class.

Mardi Gras is a medium tall growing snapdragon with numbers of closely placed florets open at one time on long spikes. The colors are so varied they can hardly be named. In the yellow, canary-yellow, golden yellow, gold, golden orange, copper and scarlet orange. Similarly there are varying shades of pink, rose, cream, scarlet, and dark red. And in addition, there are a great number of bi-tones and bi-colors like pink and cream, yellow and white, and so on.

This same sort of rainbow color range exists in the F-2 hybrid petunia called Carnival, and alert gardeners will find that with Mardi Gras and Carnival leading the way they will have new and exciting experiences in floriculture if they watch for that magic symbol "F-2" as the flower novelties are introduced.

Modern Plumbing System.

A modern plumbing system makes a bathroom remodeling or expansion program simple and economical, says the Plumbing Fixture Manufacturers Association. To remodel an old bathroom, install new fixtures and redecorate. To add a second bathroom or powder room, select a room directly above, below, or next to the bathroom or kitchen. This keeps piping costs at a minimum because the new fixtures usually need only be connected to the existing plumbing system.

Insecticides Call For Careful Usage To Prevent Damage

When standard recommendations for use of insecticides and fungicides are followed there is little likelihood of serious damage to trees, but frequently the margin of safety between plant tolerance and satisfactory insect control is so narrow, says the National Arborist Association, that trouble may arise if some unforeseen factor should enter the picture.

Even plain water under certain weather conditions, may cause foliage damage. Temperature, humidity, rainfall and dew are other factors which, under certain circumstances, may cause a spray to affect a plant adversely.

Be Sure for Safety.

The formulation of spray materials and the compatibility of the mixtures used are important, while the health of the tree at the time of spraying may also have some bearing. Just be sure you have the right mixtures, or consult with your local tree expert or arborist.

One of the most serious faults of the amateur is overdosage. Sometimes insecticides are used at strengths as much as ten times those recommended on the containers. The newer insecticides represent a big forward step in reducing insect and disease damage to trees, but they should be used according to recommendations.

Recognition of the cause of tree injuries requires a qualified tree expert in most cases, and he will recommend, or use, if he does the work, formulations that are specific for certain types of insects or diseases.

Watch Pressures.

Human injury may result from careless use of insecticides, or the equipment in which they are used, the Arborist Association warns. An instance is cited where the user of pressure tank equipment unscrewed the cap on the tank before the inside pressure was exhausted, thus spraying the user with dangerous spray.

Certain plants may be sensitive to one spray and not another. Either follow the directions on the container carefully and specifically for the effect desired, the arborists advise, or obtain the services of a local tree expert. Finally, the arborists warn, keep children and pets away when using poisonous insecticides of any kind. Carelessness may mean serious injury, which sometimes may not show up immediately, but at a later date when the careless use of the insecticides is forgotten and the injury for that reason may be difficult to diagnose. Many poisonous insecticides may be absorbed through the skin, as well as orally and nasally. If any of the material gets on the skin, it should be washed off immediately and thoroughly with ordinary soap and water.

THIS WAY, PLEASE

Now that so many houses are being built around flagstone patios and terraces, it's sometimes hard to figure the whereabouts of the front door. By painting it a bright, eye-pleasing color, you can supply the needed emphasis to identify it. The same color, repeated in a floral border, adds further charm to your house.

Bugs and Others Spread Oak Wilt

Tree pathologists have reported that the disease commonly known as Oak Wilt is transmitted from one tree to another by insects and animals feeding on fungi of oaks killed by the disease, according to the National Arborists Association. Where trees are close together, Oak Wilt also is transmitted through root grafts.

From the new developments, the removal and destruction by tree experts of trees killed by the disease becomes an important factor in preventing spread of the malady. This is especially important in residential areas where the disease may be spread from one single tree to another at a distance.

Oak Wilt is limited to the Central and South Central states and has not appeared on the Eastern seaboard or in the Pacific coastal areas.

HOW TO AVOID MESS

A clean method of doing a messy task, painting a wire fence, is advocated by L. C. Lueddeski, St. Louis. He uses a piece of one-quarter inch hardboard on one side and brush paints from the other. The hardboard is fastened in place with wires. He uses a wide brush—just as one does in painting a board fence. Lueddeski claims the method saves time, paint and the surrounding landscape from an unwelcome coat of paint.

Corner Stone to Be Laid Today at Affton Church

Sketch from Charles E. Stade & Associates, architects, of Reformation Lutheran Church for which cornerstone is to be laid at 3 p.m. today at 7910 Mackenzie road (at Heege), Affton.

Lutherans In Affton Ceremony

The Church of the Reformation-Lutheran, 7910 McKenzie road at Heege avenue, Affton, the youngest Missouri Synod Lutheran Church in the greater St. Louis area, will hold corner stone laying ceremonies for its new sanctuary at 3 p.m. today.

Participating in the ceremonies will be the Rev. H. Paul Boehne, pastor of the church, the guest speaker, Rev. Gerhardt E. Nitz, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, the Gloria Dei Chorus of Concordia Seminary, under the direction of George Lobien, and officers of the Church, together with members of the congregation.

The new building, the first unit of a master plan, will be of contemporary design, featuring a free standing tower cross. The nave with overflow will have a seating capacity of 250. In addition, the main unit will have seven Sunday school rooms, a church nursery, church office, modern kitchen facilities and provision for air-conditioning.

There will also be ample parking space. Additional ground has been purchased so that the church site now comprises a frontage of 375 feet on McKenzie road.

849 BARBECUE WITH WORK TOP AND STORAGE SHELVES

★ This complete barbecue was designed at our studio and built by one men in two week ends. You can duplicate it on your own patio, though you may never have laid brick, by following Craft Pattern 849. The pattern shows how to build the foundation, gives the correct proportions of stone, sand and cement for the concrete. Then it shows the position of each brick in each course, from base to chimney top, and explains how to mix the mortar and how to lay the brick. A list of the materials with quantities is given so you can go to a material dealer for an exact figure on cost. The barbecue is 68"long, 43"deep. The working tops are 32" above hearth.

613 SIX-FOOT BARBECUE TABLE AND BENCHES

★ Send 25 cents each for the Craft Patterns 613 and 849; $1.25 each for the Boat Packet (20 patterns), Windmill Packet (12 patterns), Playground Apparatus Packet (17 patterns),and Garden Furniture Packet (22 patterns). Fertilizing Advised for Better Lawn

Twenty agronomists and turf grass experts interviewed this spring had at least one idea in common, a piece of advice to pass along to America's lawn owners on top soil.

"For the most part, top soil should be used only to fill depressions and dips in the lawn. Almost any lawn can be fertilized into acceptability for Kentucky bluegrass and high quality bluegrass mixtures, and new top soil for the whole area probably isn't necessary," it was pointed out.

Bluegrass is probably as hardy as any fine lawn grass and among the most popular, but like all fine permanent turf, requires certain natural advantages in the soil before it will thrive. If you have checked with your state agricultural college and tested your soil for its chemical content, you know what you need.

Chances are you do not need top soil except where depressions and dips are unsightly and create poor drainage or uneven mowing. Combine the cost of buying and spreading enough top soil for the entire lawn and it's easy to see that fertilization is the better answer. Bluegrass roots go down six to eight inches and that would take a lot of new top soil for an entire lawn area.

Even when you buy top soil there is a good chance it may be no better than what you already have, or is likely to introduce a new crop of weeds which have been lying dormant in it. In any event, just scattered on the surface and not mixed, it may not blend with the residual soil and thus form a barrier to moisture movement.

COLOR ADDS BEAUTY.

Colored bathroom fixtures and accessories are popular features of modern homes, says the Plumbing Fixture Manufacturers Association. Most fixture colors are soft, pastel shades which fit in with a wide variety of decorating schemes. Fixtures are available in pink, green, gray, suntan, red, yellow, blue and white.

TORTOISE PACE

Wood siding, when properly protected and used as exterior covering for a home, will wear down only about 1/32nd inch in 100 years, according to wood research specialists.

Development Of Cape Site Is Recounted

MRS. ARLA HARRIS
Past President, Federated Garden Clubs of Missouri.

Rose lovers, even though they are beginners, are able to develop beautiful rose gardens in their own back yards. But it is far more difficult to promote and develop a public rose garden. However, with a good plan, the best location we could find and the co-operation of our commissioner of parks, we got the work at the garden at Cape Girardeau started in the fall of 1954. Because of the prolonged dry spell, preparation of the beds did not get under way until the following spring.

Through the winter months, considerable correspondence was carried on with rose nurserymen and those "in the know" who were working with public rose gardens in other states. Always the question, "What about maintenance?" came back to us. Having had several years of experience with our own gardens, we were most concerned about the chore of having sufficient moisture during the hot dry summers. It takes more water than the usual rainfall to keep roses in healthy growth and good bloom.

While visiting a friend, Mrs. Roy Blair, of Troy, Mo., we found the answer to part of the maintenance problem—that of sub-irrigation for rose beds, which she had found to be very satisfactory. "So easy, so economical, and no wet foliage to breed disease!"

Tile Laid Deep.

Starting in the first week in March 1955, an area for 16 beds eight feet wide and 24 feet long was dug to a depth of 20 to 30 inches. It is very important that tile be placed below the frost line. In the middle of each bed, running lengthwise, we placed one line of ordinary four-inch field tile in 12-inch sections, butting each tile up close to the next one. This lets water seep out all along the line while it is filling.

One end of the line is closed. At the other end is a vitrified elbow with one section of tile cut so that the bell end protrudes about two inches above soil level. A wooden cap is placed in the bell; otherwise, the soil will dry out and debris will fill up the tile. About two inches of agricultural stone was placed under and on top of the line of tile, to aid in drainage and to keep soil from sifting through between the tiles.

If the tile is not level after it is placed on the stone, one end will get all of the water. Also, a slow stream of water should be turned in, so that it doesn't rush through to the other end too fast. It required about two hours to water one bed.

We put two heaping wheelbarrow loads of well rotted cow manure into the beds about the middle of depth of bed, and broken bits of top sod were put back into the beds at this level.

Used Only Once.

Our sub-irrigation system was used only once during the summer, and that was to insure good fall bloom and healthy plants to go into the winter. With several good rains and a mulch of alfalfa put on in early summer, the entire garden couldn't have looked or performed better. We feel sure this method of watering is going to save us much time and labor, and that the roots of our plants are growing downward instead of to the top, as with surface watering.

By the time the beds were finished, shipments of plants began to arrive, and planting got under way on March 22. We followed very closely the instructions contained in "Plant Them Right" in the January 1955 issue of the American Rose Magazine.

From copies of our orders, we made a chart, arranging plants so that the colors would be harmonious. As plants were unpacked, we used five-gallon water-tight garbage cans full of water, with one cup of a commercial fertilizer in each can. Bundles of plants were lowered into this solution to await planting. We found that a delay of one or two hours, or even overnight, was not harmful. Most of the plants had been pruned sufficiently, except for roots and tops broken in bundling and packing.

Holes were dug about 18 inches wide and deep. Into the bottom of each hole went one shovelful of well rotted cow manure, and soil covered this so that roots would not come into contact with the manure. A mound was formed for each plant to rest upon. A soup-canful of 0-20-20 was scattered around each plant.

Soil was firmed around with the hands, leaving a saucer for water, bud of plant at soil level. A 10-quart pail of liquid fertilizer from the garbage can was poured into the saucer. After the water had sunk out of sight the hole was filled. Only about two inches of soil was hilled around each plant.

Half of our planting had been completed when the March 26 freeze stopped us. Needless to say, there was much anxiety, and there were many telephone calls. But not a plant was lost in the freeze—due, we think, to their being dormant. Out of nearly 500 plants—only four were lost during the year.

In planning and planting this rose garden, we have always kept in mind the thought that this is not a personal or a private garden. A public need must be fulfilled. This garden is being maintained, not for one owner but for all rose lovers in our community. We shall be eternally grateful to those who gave us encouragement in this undertaking, and especially to Mr. Suzuki, who knew the answers to all our problems.

Visiting Community Rose Test Garden in Cape Girardeau

Dr. Edgar Anderson, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, is an interested visitor as Mrs. C. E. Stiver (left) and Mrs. T. G. Harris, co-chairmen of Cape Girardeau's new Rose Test Garden, show him the results of their first year's efforts. Despite the heat and drouth of 1955, most of the plants turned in a fine performance. In its very first season the garden attracted an almost constant stream of spectators, many of whom were promptly converted to rose culture.

Show Garden At Cape at Anniversary

By GLADYS STIVER

The Rose Display Garden in Cape Girardeau celebrated its first anniversary last Thursday as that was the date when the first plant went into the ground last year. The job was not completed until April 15, for last spring's weather was unruly, and planting had to be delayed many times. However, late spring planting did not seem to affect the growth of the roses, because when the month of May rolled around the Garden was a riot of color.

In its initial year this Garden had about 500 plants set out, and there were but four casualties. It boasts of 30 climbers, including 12 varieties, which adorn the fence inclosing the Garden. They made superb growth, so this summer the reward should be many blossoms on the long, vigorous branches. These canes were kept tied to the fence in a horizontal position, and that, too, will mean more roses.

Another interesting feature of the Garden is a collection of the very old roses, which are staging a comeback in popularity and are being more widely grown and sought after throughout the country. Growing in the Display Garden are Eglantine (Sweetbriar), Black Prince, Paul Neyron, Crested Moss, Maiden's Blush, and others — 40 in all — with more to be added each year.

They have had a lusty growth, even though it takes a year before they are thoroughly established. This summer many will see the real beauty of these beloved old roses for the first time. The rest of the plantings were hybrid teas with a few floribundas and grandifloras.

Systematic Care.

The performance of the roses was a delight to the sponsors, the Garden Clubs of Cape Girardeau. There was an abundance of bloom and the plants have had a profusion of leaves from the bottoms of the canes to the outermost tips. This fine performance can be attributed to several factors.

First, field-grown plants were bought, and they were planted properly. The care of the Garden was on a regular, systematic basis. Each Wednesday a group from a garden club would arrive ready for work. All faded blooms were clipped, care being taken not to remove too many leaves. Beds were kept free of weeds, and the ground was lightly cultivated until June, where a four-inch mulch of alfalfa was put down. This eliminated weeding and helped retain precious moisture and a more even ground temperature.

Spraying was done about every 10 days, and blackspot—the bane of all rose growers—was non-existent. There was some mildew, however, which made some headway, because the dews were heavy and the days quite warm. Captan completely controlled blackspot, but it was erroneously believed to be a specific for mildew, too.

This year, upon completion of the spring pruning, which will not be drastic, a dormant spray will be used. When growth starts captan will be used, but karathane will be added to combat mildew.

More to Plant.

It would be difficult to imagine any rose plantings more vigorous and flowering more profusely than those in this garden. Although Peace made the slowest growth of any variety planted, by fall its plants had become established and were developing into strong lusty bushes. Tiffany proved to be one of the outstanding roses. It bloomed constantly and was extremely vigorous. San Anita deserves praise, for it bloomed without ceasing, as did the lovely old Christopher Stone.

This year six new beds, which were spaded last fall, will be planted. About 200 plants will be added, along with several tree roses. Plans call for beds of floribundas, grandifloras, and more hybrid teas. One bed will be devoted to older hybrid teas, such as La France, Etoile de Hollande, J. L. Mock, and Columbia. These are all fine roses and should not be allowed to disappear.

This new garden is on the approved list of All-American Rose Selections as a test garden. It is officially a display garden, but for us in Cape Girardeau it is proving to be a real test garden, where rose varieties, spray materials and methods of rose culture can be tried out and compared.

The Garden's caretakers view the year past with pride, while dreaming and planning for the new season, and have decided that everything's rosy with their Rose Display Garden. Furthermore, with its soil and growing conditions both favorable, Cape Girardeau every year is becoming more and more a veritable City of Roses.

AMAZING MEYER ZOYSIA GRASS CHOKES OUT CRAB GRASS, OTHER WEEDS STAYS GREEN THRU HOTTEST SUMMER!

HOW THIS SENSATIONAL GRASS SOLVES YOUR LAWN PROBLEMS

1. No More Weeds

As Meyer Zoysia spreads, it crowds out crab grass, chickweed, and all the other weeds that have been ruining your lawn. What's more, they don't get a foothold again because Meyer Zoysia grows so dense it doesn't leave the weeds any place to start.

2. Thrives When Other Grasses are Brown and Burned Out

Meyer Zoysia loves hot blistering heat like children love the circus. In fact, it grows best in the middle of summer when the other lawns on your block may be parched, brown, and dead-looking. If a summer drouth hits, Meyer Zoysia just rolls its leaves and waits for rain. What's more, Meyer Zoysia is hardy too. Stands temperatures of 20 below zero without difficulty. After severe frosts in late fall, the growth of Meyer Zoysia is interrupted and it turns to a golden brown. When warm weather starts in spring, it becomes a rich green again.

3. Needs Less Water

Here is a grass that can get by without watering during periods when you are away on vacation or when there is a water shortage, and the amount of water you can use is restricted. Many lawn grasses perish when you can't water them, but not Meyer Zoysia. It rolls its leaves to reduce its need for water and waits for rain.

PLUS THESE OTHER ADVANTAGES

A MEYER ZOYSIA WILL GROW ANYWHERE. Sand, gravel, subsoil, or clay, Meyer Zoysia will grow on any one of them. Whatever kind of soil you have, Meyer Zoysia will grow there. Fertilize for fastest spread and best color.

B CUTS DOWN ON MOWING. The stems of Meyer Zoysia grow horizontally, only the dense leaves grow up. As a result while you have very dense firm turf, you don't get so much height, and you don't spend so much time pushing the lawn mower around under a hot sun. And in early spring and late fall, mowing is never needed.

C TURF INSECTS AND FUNGUS DISEASES DO NOT SEEM TO AFFECT IT. Experience and research has shown that the insects and fungus that destroy so many lawns do not seem to affect a Meyer Zoysia lawn.

D SO TOUGH AND SPRINGY, IT DOESN'T WEAR OUT. Children can play on a Meyer Zoysia lawn all year around without damage to the lawn. They can even bicycle over it without leaving ruts. In spring, after heavy rains, you can walk on a Meyer Zoysia lawn, and because of its strong stems and dense growth you don't break through. As a result, children aren't always tracking mud in the house. And walking on Meyer Zoysia is like walking on a deep-pile carpet. The turf is so firm, resilient, cushiony.

EVERY SQUARE FOOT YOU PLANT GIVES YOU 50 TO 100 MORE SQUARE FEET

True Meyer (Z-52) Zoysia cannot be sold as seed. You plant the actual nodes or stems instead. We send you planting material in sod form which separates into individual sprigs or stems. Plant the sprigs in rows 6 inches apart. After considerable research, we recommend sprig planting against any other method for four important reasons: 1. You get twice as much coverage for every $1 you spend. 2. You get coverage twice as fast. 3. We don't have to ship you a lot of dirt along with the planting material, and charge you enough to cover our shipping costs when you already have plenty of dirt in your own yard. 4. You don't need any special tools. As soon as the sprigs have spread and produced a dense turf, you can take out sprigs yourself and plant the rest of your yard. We show you how. By following this "do it yourself" method, Meyer Zoysia becomes not only the best trouble free grass you can get, but in the long run far less expensive than other grasses.

LOOK MAGAZINE Says, "MEYER ZOYSIA IS THE CAREFREE GRASS"

LOOK'S August 9th, 1955 issue hailed Meyer Zoysia as "so tough, it kills weeds, laughs at crab grass, and turns greenest in blistering heat".

NEWSWEEK said, "After almost five decades of tedious breeding and experimentation, United States Department of Agriculture agronomists at Beltsville, Maryland, have finally produced a strain of Zoysia . . . known as Meyer Z-52, which may enable any homeowner to maintain a luxuriant lawn against the inroads of crab grass, other weeds, and insect pest with a minimum of watering and mowing."

HAILED BY ARTHUR GODFREY

You may have seen Arthur Godfrey's television program when he told about amazing Meyer Zoysia grass. Or perhaps, you have seen a lawn of Meyer Zoysia. If you have, you know that it sets off a home to perfection. Makes every other lawn on the block look sad by comparison. Plant this "carefree grass" in your yard this spring and have a beautiful trouble-free lawn for a lifetime.

Would You Ever Have Believed It Possible to Have a Lawn You Didn't Have to Constantly Worry About?

Imagine having a lawn that you don't mow nearly as often as most of your neighbors mow theirs. Imagine being able to go away in the summer for two weeks and come back and find your lawn hasn't burned up from lack of water. Imagine a grass that actually thrives on hot blistering weather. And imagine a grass so vigorous, it crowds out crab grass, dandelions, chickweed, and other weeds that have been making your life miserable every year. Is it any wonder homeowners call Meyer Zoysia the "wonder grass"?

Kuhs Opens Subdivision

At 13000 Spanish Pond road, 30 minutes from downtown St. Louis in the historic Spanish northern section of St. Louis county, the Edw. L. Kuhs Realty and Building Co. will open formally today a new subdivision of luxury styled homes.

Priced at the lower end of the luxury styling bracket, the homes are all to be large, on large lots, with as many as four bedrooms and three baths. They have all been architecturally designed and color styled in redwood and brick.

The area provides city water, fire protection, school busses, and are near a location where a proposed inner-belt highway is expected to be built, starting soon, the agency said.

Considerable landscaping also is being done by the developer in the subdivision, with evergreens, oaks and other planting.

DO-IT-YOURSELF GUIDE

A "must" for the home craftsman is the "Do-It-Yourself Materials Guide" from the Popular Mechanics press. Available on news stands, the guide explains how to buy and use the numerous materials needed by the amateur handyman. It contains a section on hardboard, an important do-it-yourself material.

Subdivision In O'Fallon Opens Today

Formal opening has been set for today of a new subdivision in O'Fallon, St. Charles county, Missouri, an event significant of what's happening in the growth of the metropolitan area of Greater St. Louis.

With land prices in the immediate St. Louis county area open to subdivision steadily climbing, builders are going farther and farther afield to find ground upon which lower-priced homes can be built advantageously.

O'Fallon is only 35 miles from Clayton and, with completion of the new Missouri river bridge, now under construction just above St. Charles (eventually to be a link in the Mark Twain Highway) the time into downtown St. Louis will be shaved several minutes.

The new tract of 51 acres, which will be developed in three sections, and eventually a shopping center, is about seven miles from the Weldon Spring AEC plant, and by Highway 40 By-Pass within a half hour or so of some St. Louis plants.

The subdivision, called "Country Life Acres" is being developed by R.D.B., Inc., with construction by John Porta and promotion by the Edgar T. Burch Real Estate Co. of Olive Street road. The area has sanitary and storm sewers, water, concrete streets with curbs, street lights, fire hydrants, gas, electricity.

Porta is erecting three-bedroom houses with kitchen built-ins, other amenities.

Mortgage Bankers Nominate Texan Next President

John F. Austin Jr., president of T. J. Bettes Co., Houston, will be the next president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America as the result of his nomination for the 1956-57 term by the organization's nominating committee. He will succeed Lindell Peterson of Chicago.

John C. Hall, president of Cobbs, Allen & Hall Mortgage Co., Inc., Birmingham, was nominated for vice president for 1956-57.

Nomination, through official channels, is tantamount to election which will occur at the Association's forty-third annual convention in Chicago Oct. 8-11. The nominating committee report was submitted at the organization's regular board of governors spring meeting at the Dinkler Plaza Hotel in Atlanta, Ga., which is to be followed on tomorrow and Tuesday by the Association's Southern Mortgage Conference there.

Austin began his banking career with the First State Bank of Frankston, Tex., following graduation from the University of Texas and the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University. He later became a state bank examiner in Texas and then served as senior bank examiner for the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas. In 1942, he was elected cashier of the South Texas National Bank in Houston and a year later was elected vice president of the Houston Bank. During the war he was in the Navy, principally as a lieutenant in the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy in Washington.

In 1948, he joined T. J. Bettes Co., Houston, as executive vice president and following the death of Bettes was named president. He is president of the Texas Mortgage Bankers Association, a former president of the Houston Mortgage Bankers Association and director of the City National Bank of Houston, Harrisburg National Bank of Houston, First Bank of Houston, First State Bank of Frankston and several local civic and charitable organizations.

transoms will be removed to conform with the adjacent new Fowler Memorial Wing across the front of the hospital. The rehabilitated floors will be completely air-conditioned.

The project is the fourth step in St. Luke's building program. First came the new service wing, with cafeteria, electric kitchen, maintenance shops, housekeeping department, and storage facilities; new parking lots; new elevators and stairways; new clinics and outpatient department; and new occupational and physical therapy departments.

The second step was erection of the $2,000,000 Fowler Wing, with new operating rooms; recovery room; new X-ray facilities; new administrative suite; new doctors' lounge and library; new pharmacy; new medical records room; and additional patients' bedrooms.

Now being rushed to completion is the new maternity division, with three labor rooms, three delivery rooms, examination room, and nursery with 36 bassinets for newborn infants and 12 incubators for premature infants. Work is also going forward on new laboratories on the fourth floor in the area formerly occupied by X-ray rooms and operating rooms. Bed capacity throughout the hospital will be increased to 300.

Woermann Construction Co. is the general contractor.

Ford Road Study Film Presented

About 50 local civic leaders, safety experts, traffic and highway planners attended a luncheon and special showing at the Jefferson Hotel last week of Ford Motor Company's newest film, "Freedom of the American Road."

The program was sponsored by Ford's St. Louis Community Relations Committee headed by J. A. Hall, Mercury district sales manager.

The 27-minute motion picture carries tthe same title and general content as Ford's recently introduced book, published as a community guide to improved traffic and highway conditions. The 120-page volume is a result of a nation-wide research by Ford, assisted by members of leading highway and traffic safety groups.

Film sequences include the improvement of the Bay Shore Highway at Palo Alto, Calif.; the suburban-connecting highway around Boston, Mass.; how Pittsburgh, Pa., solved its traffic jam; how St. Joseph, Mo., won the nation's top safety award with its traffic safety campaign, and how North Carolina's secondary road system became one of the best in the United States. The film, non-commercial, is available for showing to civic groups.

Teacher at Parks To Tell Oil Men Future in the Air

Paul J. Rodgers, executive assistant to the president of the Ozark Air Lines and an instructor at Parks Air College technical division of St. Louis University will tell members of the Oil Men's Club of St. Louis at a luncheon Monday noon in the Chase hotel that "Your Future Is in the Air."

Rodgers has an extensive background for his subject, says M. Bogstahl, program chairman for the Oil Men's Club. He was graduated from the School of Commerce and Finance of St. Louis University, spent four years with the United States Army air-transport division establishing transport routes in 25 countries, has served as general agent of domestic and foreign cargo for the American Express Co., assisted in formation of Parks Airline and now teaches airline operations, air transport history and air transport development at Parks College. He also has been a commanding officer of a National Air Transport Reserve squadron.

TREAT KNOTS

Before painting over a knot, be sure to fill any cavities with plastic wood or wood putty and then appiy a sealer to the area to prevent the sap in the knot from staining the new coating. This sealer may be a product made especially for the purpose —or shellac. When you use shellac, remember that you usually need alcohol to "cut" or thin it. The label on the can will let you know the proportions to use.

Continental Oil Sets Up District Office in Clayton

Establishment by the Continental Oil Co. of a new St. Louis marketing district, with headquarters in Clayton and with W. L. (Walt) Dowell, Kansas City, Mo., as district manager, is reported by K. W. Brill, Oklahoma City, central region general manager. Headquarters offices for the new Conoco sales district will be at 7811 Carondelet, Clayton.

W. L. Dowell.

"Continental Oil Co.'s increasing marketing activities in this area," said Brill, "necessitated the opening of the new district office in St. Louis. The office will supervise the company's marketing activities in northeastern, eastern and southern Missouri, and parts of central Missouri including the Jefferson City Columbia areas."

Dowell, who will transfer to St. Louis as district manager, was formerly assistant division manager for Conoco at Kansas City. Associated with the company's sales organization since 1931, he held a succession of sales positions in Missouri and Kansas before becoming assistant manager at Kansas City in 1952. He is a native of Gilman City, Mo., and attended Northwest Missouri State Teachers College at Maryville.

Conoco has been marketing its products in this area for many years. Founded in Ogden, Utah, in 1875, the company is one of the oldest oil firms in the United States. Today it is a fully integated petroleum organization, with extensive exploration, production, manufacturing, transportation and marketing activities in this country and foreign operations in Canada, Egypt, Libya, British Somaliland and Somalia.

Everett Brenner continues as city manager.

Heads Region Here

Appointment of Claude S. Ozburn as regional sales manager for the St. Louis region is reported by E. M. Braden, general sales manager, Chrysler Division, Chrysler Corporation.

Ozburn has been associated with Chrysler Division since 1948, when he was named a district manager in the St. Louis region. Prior to his present appointment he was regional manager of the Denver region. He was born in Murphysboro, Ill., and attended Carthage University. In 1940, he enlisted in the United States Navy and became a naval aviator. He served two years as an instructor at Pensacola and another two years with Bombing Squadron 152.

After his honorable discharge from the service, he joined an automobile dealership and in 1948 he went with Chrysler Division as district sales manager in St. Louis.

Ozburn replaces Wilfred J. Mahan, formerly St. Louis regional manager.

SOVIET TIME-SAVER: CAFES TURNED INTO CAFETERIAS

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

MOSCOW, April 7—The central committee of the Communist party has studied Russian feeding habits and found that workers and students "spend much time" waiting in restaurants when they could be busy in socialist labor.

To remedy this waste of manpower, the central committee has decreed that the great majority of dining rooms and cafes are to be converted to self-service cafeterias.

As a result, old-style cafes and restaurants have been closing for repairs and reopening as chromium-plated cafeterias.

50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Altmayer, 6037 Dewey avenue, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary at a family dinner today at the home of their daughter, Mrs. A. M. Goetz, 9024 Stonebridge drive, Richmond Heights.

Altmayer, 70 years old, and Mrs. Altmayer, 69, were married here March 31, 1906. He was a tailor with Kohler & Romer Inc., 1103A Locust street, until his retirement in 1951. They have a son, a granddaughter and three great-grandchildren.

Man-Made 'Moon' May Soar 1400 Miles at Outermost Point

Nearly Twice as Far Into Space as Originally Planned for Satellite to Be Launched Next Year.

WASHINGTON, April 7 (UP) —The tiny artificial moon to be launched next year may leap nearly twice as far into space as originally planned. Dr. Milton W. Rosen, technical director of earth satellite project vanguard, said today.

Until recently, official statements on the project have said the man-made moon's path around the earth would range from 200 to 800 miles in altitude.

But in a talk to the astronomers in Washington, Rosen said the satellite may soar as high as 1400 miles at the outermost point of its orbit.

The moon will be launched at Patrick Air Force base, Fla., by the first three-stage rocket ever built. The rocket will look like a giant rifle cartridge. It will be 72 feet long, 45 inches across at its greatest diameter, and finless. Fully loaded it will weigh 11 tons.

The satellite itself will be an instrument-packed sphere about 20 inches across and weighing 21.5 pounds. It will be carried aloft in the nose of the three-stage rocket.

Rosen said main design points all have been settled. He said it should be possible to put the whole contraption together by summer 1957. The last major component contracts were announced Thursday.

The present rocket altitude record was set in 1949 when a WAC Corporal, fired from the nose of a captured German V-2, soared nearly 250 miles. It reached a speed of 9000 feet a second—about 6134 miles an hour.

The Vanguard rocket, with about the same payload, is expected to rise 300 miles initially and hit almost three times that speed—more than 25,000 feet a second. Because its orbit will be elliptical rather than circular, the satellite may approach as close as 200 miles to the earth and range out as far as 1400 miles.

The "brain" of the launching rocket will be in the second stage. It will make the vehicle perform as ordered until the last stage fires. The whole assembly will be "a great advance in rocket engineering."

Scientists and engineers already are looking forward to better ones made possible by experience gained in project Vanguard. Successor rockets, they say, eventually will be refined down to two stages more powerful and efficient than Vanguard's three.

Vertical Take-Off.

Vanguard will take off vertically, pushed spaceward by the first stage's liquid fuel rocket motor. It will tilt gradually in the direction of the satellite's ultimate path.

At burnout of the first stage, the rocket will be 36 miles above the earth and traveling about 2700 miles an hour. Stage one will drop off into the sea.

At this point, the second stage, also liquid fueled, will fire, carrying the vehicle on a steadily more inclined-trajectory to an altitude of about 200 miles before burnout.

Stages two and three together will then coast forward about 700 miles and another 100 miles up to a height of 300 miles. During this brief time the satellite's nose cone, required to protect it from air friction in the denser layers of the atmosphere, will be cast aside.

At burnout of the second-stage rocket the assembly will be rushing along at about 9000 miles an hour. During the coasting period, the rocket's brain will be busy. It will turn the vehicle in the right direction, approximately horizontal, and will set the third stage to spinning like a rifle bullet to keep it from wobbling.

Third Stage Rocket.

At 300 miles, the third-stage rocket will separate from the second and fire. It is up to this stage, powered by solid fuel, to double the speed to the 18,000 miles an hour necessary to keep the satellite from falling back to earth. The little moon will separate and be on its own after the last stage burns out.

All control and guidance instructions will be issued to the brain before the rocket leaves the ground. By means of gyroscopes, electronic "nerves," a magnetic auto-pilot, and much else, the brain will keep the rocket on course and control such things as ignition, cutoff, and separations.

The men left behind on the ground will have just one control "string" on the rocket. If it goes haywire and head menacingly toward earth, they can push a button and destroy it.

MISSOURI DOCTORS MEET HERE TODAY

1000 Expected—First Event Is Session of House of Delegates.

More than 1000 Missouri physicians are expected to attend the ninety-eighth annual meeting of the Missouri State Medical Association which opens today at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson with an afternoon session of the association's house of delegates.

Scientific sessions will start tomorrow and continue through Wednesday when the house of delegates will name new officers, including a president-elect who will take office at the 1957 meeting.

Dr. Carl F. Vohs, St. Louis orthopedic surgeon and now president-elect, will be installed as president at the association's annual banquet Tuesday evening, succeeding Dr. Victor B. Buhler, Kansas City pathologist.

Speaker at the dinner will be Elmer Ellis, president of the University of Missouri. His subject will be "What the University of Missouri Medical School Should Mean to the State."

Past presidents of the association will be honored at the banquet, along with about 30 Missouri physicians who have completed 50 years' practice. Among these will be 15 St. Louis area doctors, as follows:

Adolph H. Conrad Sr., E. Lee Dorsett, John F. Gallagher, William P. Glennon, Arthur Gundlach, Tyron H. Hale, Charles E. Hyndman, Garnett Jones, John J. Kehoe, J. A. Konzelmann, Martin F. Kouri, Grace S. Mountjoy, Charles H. Neilson, Augustus W. Peters and Marsh Pitzman.

Scientific part of the sessions will include presentation of papers by nine medical specialists from outside the state. They are Henry L. Barnett, New York; Leonard H. Biskind, Cleveland; Melvin A. Casberg, Solvang, Calif., former dean of the St. Louis University School of Medicine; William D. Holden, Cleveland; T. Leon Howard, Denver; Herbert C. Lee, Richmond, Va.; E. Sterling Nichol, Miami, Fla.; Tom D. Spies, Birmingham, Ala., and Claude Starr Wright, Augusta, Ga.

There will be presentations by 36 Missouri doctors, including 19 St. Louisans. Special symposia will be conducted on surgery, pediatrics medicine and obstetrics. Wednesday morning will be devoted to a panel on "What's New in Medicine."

Meeting concurrently with the association will be its women's auxiliary, the Missouri Society of Medical Technologists and Missouri Physical Therapy Association.

JUSTICE DOUGLAS TO TALK AT JEWISH FUND RALLY

Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the United States Supreme Court will speak on "Israel—Cornerstone of Democracy" at a rally opening the 1956 Jewish Federation Welfare fund campaign at 8 p.m. next Tuesday at Shaare Emeth Temple, 6830 Delmar boulevard, University City.

Melvin Dubinsky, general campaign chairman, will preside at the meeting. Goal for the regular federation drive including the regular 1956 National United Jewish Appeal quota is $1,524,450, and an additional $442,500 will be sought as St. Louis's share in the special national emergency fund of the appeal.

The combined total of $1,966,950 represents the normal funds needed to finance the federation's 35 local, national and overseas health and welfare agencies, and the National United Jewish Appeal's special emergency fund to rescue 45,000 Jews in the Middle East, Dubinsky said.

Metzger, assistant legal adviser for economic affairs in the State Department, whose subject will be "Treaty Aids to Doing Business Abroad," and Wolfgang G. Friedmann, professor of law at Columbia University, on "Anti-trust Hurdles to Doing Business Abroad."

At a dinner session Friedmann will speak at 7:30 p.m. on "Rights of Americans Doing Business Abroad" and Metzger at 8:15 on "The Contract Approach to Protecting National Interests."

Lake Lorraine

Only 30 minutes away from St. Louis a beautiful new Lake Vacationland is rapidly coming into existence. Drive out today.

The LAKE VACATIONLAND St. Louisans have always wanted

Among the beautiful hills of Jefferson County there will soon be a lake of clear, sparkling water, with picturesque lodges, where busy men and their families will enjoy life as they have always hoped to do. . . . Even as the near-by city swelters under Summer's simmering heat.

Here lake-cooled breezes will gently fan you to sleep at night—and by day, give zest to the finest fishing, swimming, sailing, canoeing and motor-boating this section has ever known.

The same men who developed Lake Montowese and Fond de Lac are building Lake Lorraine, near Goldman, Missouri, less than 30 miles south of Affton on Highway 21 (Tesson Ferry Road). One small lake is now stocked and ready for fishing.

Lodge sites vary in size from 50x150 feet to half-acre tracts. Modern conveniences are available. Lodge site prices start at $650, and may be bought on convenient terms.

Lake Lorraine will NOT be open to the general public. It is being developed—and will be maintained —for Lodge Site owners and their guests.

The central water system is now under construction so that those desiring to build immediately will be assured of an early and adequate supply of water from wells of 850 feet in depth.

You'll chuckle as Columnist Lu Murphy describes her house-painting experience in the Everyday Magazine of Wednesday's Post-Dispatch. Lu Murphy writes as she talks — engagingly. Missouri' Fighting first U. S. Senator

THOMAS HART BENTON

From 1821 to 1844, Senator Thomas Hart Benton ruled over Missouri politics with a strong hand and a loud voice. But when pro-slavery groups insisted that he support their stand, Missouri's fighting senator sacrificed his career, ambitions and popularity to promote unity in the United States. In Tuesday's installment of "Profiles in Courage" by U. S. Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, you'll learn that Benton's reward for his heroic stand was political defeat. "Profiles in Courage," a current non-fiction best seller, starts today in the Everyday Magazine. Follow it.

ILLINOIS VOTES TUESDAY; ONLY 4 REAL CONTESTS

Warren Wright Pressing Stratton the Hardest in G.O.P. Race for Governor.

CHICAGO, April 7 (AP) — With only four real contests for nominations to state offices in the Illinois primary Tuesday, the election has failed to stir any appreciable excitement among voters.

A field of five is running for the G.O.P. nomination for Governor, with State Treasurer Warren E. Wright pressing Gov. William G. Stratton the hardest.

In the Democratic gubernatorial contest, Cook County Treasurer Herbert C. Paschen is challenged by Morris B. Sachs, Chicago City Treasurer and merchant. Paschen is the organization candidate.

The second Republican contest pits Nicholas J. Bohling, veteran Chicago alderman, against incumbent Charles F. Carpentier for the Secretary of State nomination.

James L. Griffin, Chicago lawyer, goes against Roscoe Bonjean of Springfield for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor.

Wright, 63 years old, has waged an energetic campaign, traveling around the state telling of "flaws" he has found in Stratton's administration. However, he is bucking a solid organization held in close rein by Stratton. Also in the race are Lar Daly of Chicago, perennial office seeker, Anthony A. Polley, a Chicago stationary engineer, and Sidney McKee Ward of Benton.

Sachs Strong in Debut.

On the Democratic side, Paschen may have his hands full with the 60-year-old Sachs. Last year in his political debut, Sachs won the city treasurer post, leading all the other candidates in the general election.

Paschen largely has ignored Sachs. He has been stumping mostly against the Stratton administration on such issues as the $415,000,000 state toll road program. Paschen says the program is unnecessary.

Bohling has been driving hard to dent Carpentier's political front in the Secretary of State race, but he is up against a proven campaigner. Carpentier has achieved three terms on the East Moline City Council, five terms as Mayor and four terms as State Senator.

In the Democratic race for Lieutenant Governor, Bonjean, who has long been active in central Illinois politics, is the organization candidate. He is given the edge over Griffin, who ran third for the Attorney General nomination in 1952.

Races for Congress.

Sixteen incumbents running for Congress are assured of nomination. Six incumbents are being opposed. Three seats have been vacated. Republican Chauncey W. Reed of West Chicago has died, and Representatives Harold Velde of Pekin and Richard W. Hoffman of Riverside, both Republicans, are vacating their seats.

Most other candidates have little or no primary opposition.

Neither Senator Everett M. Dirksen, Republican candidate for re-election, nor Democratic State Representative Richard Stengel of Rock Island, is opposed for the Senate nominations.

The presidential preference primary is a popularity poll with supporters of Senator Estes Kefauver attempting to make a showing with write-in votes against Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic nominee in 1952 and only contender whose name is on the party's Illinois ballot this year.

President Eisenhower has only nominal opposition on the Republican ballot—Senator William F. Knowland of California and Lar Daly, the candidate for many offices, who also is opposing Stratton.

Knowland is for Mr. Eisenhower and has not sought votes. His name was entered before the President announced his availability for a second term. When that announcement came, it was too late for Knowland to withdraw.

Unopposed Candidates.

Unopposed primary candidates:

Lt. Gov. John W. Chapman of Springfield, Republican seeking his second term.

David F. Mallett of East St. Louis, with Democratic organization backing for Secretary of State.

Orville E. Hodge of Granite City, Republican State Auditor up for re-election.

Michael J. Howlett, Chicagoan, party-backed Democratic candidate for State Auditor. He is former regional director of the federal Office of Price Stabilization.

Elmer J. Hoffman of Wheaton, State Treasurer from 1952 to 1954, seeking another term as the G.O.P. nominee.

Arthur L. Hellyer of Elmhurst, former Du Page county treasurer who is Democratic aspirant for State Treasurer.

Attorney General Latham Castle of Sandwich, Republican seeking second term.

James L. O'Keefe, Chicago attorney, Democratic candidate for Attorney General.

Mrs. Fae Searcy of Springfield, appointed clerk of the Supreme Court in 1955 on the death of her husband, Earle Benjamin Searcy. She is the Republican candidate to retain the office.

James P. Alexander of Lawcandidate for Supreme Court Clerk. He is a former State Representative.

Home to Possum Trot

Last Lap of Trip On Audubon Tour

By Leonard Hall

THE cities of Knoxville, Oak Ridge and Kingsport were our last stops on our Audubon speaking tour before turning west in the general direction of home. But there was still one more talk to give; this in Little Rock where the local Audubon Society had just undertaken the presentation of Audubon Screen Tours. Here also we would visit for a couple of days with our good friends, the Northrops, with whom during the past 15 years we have spent so many enjoyable days roaming the Ozark woods and hills in search of songbirds and wildflowers. Myron and Muriel live in a timbered area at the edge of North Little Rock where wildflowers form the native flora of the woodland and countless wintering songbirds come in to enjoy the bounty of the feeders.

Our three days in Arkansas were packed to overflowing; a rest from our traveling of the past several weeks which threatened to wear us out. One of the things we were mostly interested in, however, was Myron's bird-banding activity. In order to carry out this enterprise, one must obtain a license from the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, which has to be satisfied with the applicant's seriousness of purpose and willingness to keep and send in at regular intervals the rather complicated records of birds taken and released. Traps of various types and sizes, all of them constructed to catch and hold the birds without injury, can either be made at home or purchased. They are made of the wire called hardware cloth and most have doors which trip easily when the bird enters.

When the traps are set, they cannot be left alone for very long but should be under close observation so birds can be removed and banded as soon as they are caught. Each licensed bird-bander is supplied with light aluminum bands of various sizes, all carrying the number which has been assigned to the bander. Thus there are bands for the tiny wrens, kinglets and small sparrows; and larger sizes which run all the way up to those for the waterfowl, wading species and birds of prey. At a backyard banding station, most of the species taken will be songbirds.

● WHILE WE were in North Little Rock, the traps were set just long enough so that I could take color movies of the banding of a female cardinal and a field sparrow. These are, as far as we know, the only pictures of this interesting hobby. Bird-banding should be undertaken only by those who have lots of time, live in good bird territory and are willing to go to considerable effort to attract the birds, handle the traps and keep the necessary records.

On one of our days we drove out northwest some 50 miles to Petit Jean mountain and state park on the Arkansas river. Here a great headland rises abruptly 1000 feet out of the river plain and after following the winding road we lunched at the park lodge, then went to visit nearby Winrock Farm, the estate of Winthrop Rockefeller. It seems odd that atop this mountain there should be land level enough for farming; yet this is the case and here on an area of some 1000 acres, Rockefeller has developed a remarkable farming operation.

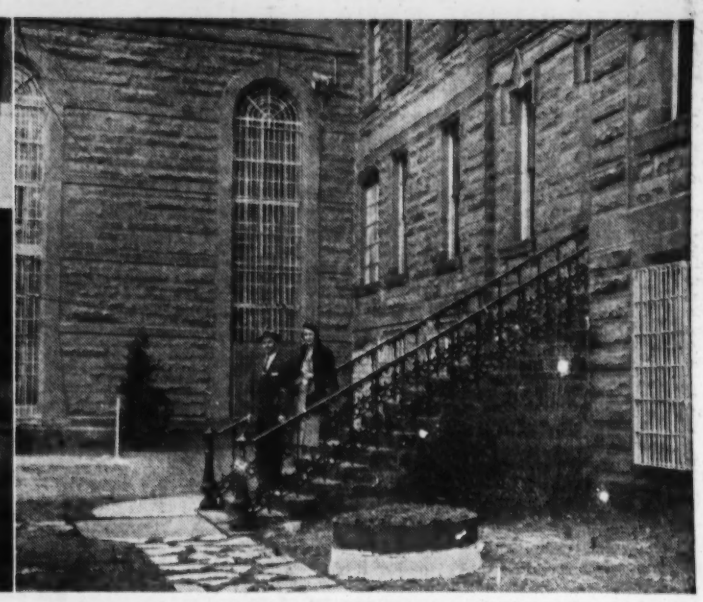
● OUR VISIT had been arranged by friends of the Northrops and we were shown over the estate by Clomer Young, a practical cattleman who has charge of the beautiful herd of 300 big, cherry red Santa Gertrudis cattle which were originally developed by King Ranch in Texas. An excellent job of conservation is being done on the whole farm and, as might be expected, the barns, machine sheds, fences, ponds and other improvements are the last word in modernity and convenience. Although the Rockefeller homestead is not overly elaborate, there are comfortable and attractive quarters for all of the families who work here and I think it mildly doubtful that the farm, even under the expert management of Jimmy Hudson, will show a profit under the agricultural conditions existing today.

Another entertaining afternoon was spent at Hot Springs where we attended the races—incidentally, our first such visit in 20 years—and Ginnie and Muriel proved conclusively that you can't pick winners by choosing the horses with the most alluring names. "Also ran" would be the expression to designate most of their selections. But fortunately, we were at the races for fun rather than profit and so were able to enjoy the color and excitement of the scene to the fullest. Early next morning we loaded up the car for the last time and headed north for Missouri and Possum Trot Farm. There was one stop to be made along the way at the little Arkansas village of Middlebrook, just below Doniphan, where Tiger had spent eight weeks with dog trainer Lee Odom. Lee had gone to town to deliver his cream when we arrived, but when we stopped the car and approached the kennel, Tiger took one long look, his ears went up, his tail started to wag and next thing we knew, he had bounced into the back seat of the car and we were started on the final leg of our long journey.

It was 5 o'clock as we rolled into the drive at home and Matt had just finished feeding the cattle. The house was warm and clean—for he had turned up the furnace and Thelma had come to polish things up for our arrival. There was a quick inspection of newly arrived calves while Tiger raced ahead; a look at the fresh-plowed garden waiting to be planted and at the yard where jonquils were in bloom. The car was unloaded, a fire laid on the hearth, three hampers of mail glanced at with dismay—and we were soon down to planning the oats sowing and all the other tasks of spring which lie ahead.

Family Home Within Prison

WARDEN ROSS V. RANDOLPH AND HIS WIFE AND SON, RONNIE, IN THE LIVING ROOM OF THEIR HOME WITHIN THE WALLS OF MENARD (ILL.) STATE PRISON.



WARDEN AND MRS. RANDOLPH AT THE SIDE ENTRANCE OF THEIR HOME. THE PLAYGROUND AREA IN BACKGROUND BUTTS UP AGAINST PSYCHIATRIC DIVISION WALL.

Warden of Menard Penitentiary And His Wife and 10-Year-Old Son Manage to Lead Normal Life in Decidedly Abnormal Setting

By John Keasler
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

CHESTER, Ill., April 7.

MR. AND MRS. ROSS V. RANDOLPH and their 10-year-old son, Ronnie, manage to live a normal home life in decidedly abnormal surroundings. In their home, proper, only little things point to the surroundings.

Ronnie, for instance, loaded with other toys, can't have toy pistols. Razor blades are carefully doled out to the servants. Their two big dogs, Judge and Tam, friendly enough downstairs, take on a decidedly jaundiced attitude toward unannounced strangers in the living quarters upstairs. Little things like that.

The Randolphs live at Menard State Prison, about 60 miles south of St. Louis, along with 2144 prisoners, 585 of them in the psychiatric division.

At night (anytime after 4 p.m.) Mrs. Randolph is the only woman within the prison gates and Ronnie is the only child.

Randolph is the warden of Menard, a warden who has built an excellent reputation since he took over more than three years ago.

His home, luxurious to the point of baronial splendor, is on the second floor of the main building, over the administrative offices, the arsenal, the prisoner's commissary, the guarded inner gates, the visitor's rooms.

Anybody coming in for a visit is searched by guards at the outer gates. This is not solely because somebody might be smuggling something purposefully but because he might be carrying something, unawares, which could be taken away and used as a weapon.

An electric eye loudly tattletales with a buzz the presence of any metal in his possession.

This quite obviously is a must, this check. Nevertheless, this brush with cold old reality serves somewhat disquietingly to remind some visitors that, after all, they are going into a prison, and leaves them shaken.

For instance, a couple of the more impressionable members of Mrs. Randolph's bridge club have a tendency to keep looking over their shoulder while in the Randolph's living room, during the game.

Mrs. Randolph does play hostess, at the prison, however, each time it comes her turn. The Randolphs take their part in the civic and social life of Chester. Mrs. Randolph is president of the P.-T.A. Randolph belongs to the Rotary; is popular as a speaker at many functions, co-ordinates several prison enterprises — such as Christmas toy drives—with civic activities.

WE spent a day recently with Randolph to get his views on successful operation of a large prison and, in the process, find out how in the world the Randolphs live a normal family life in their environment—an environment which, no matter how placid the surface, is keynoted and pitched to the powderkeg potential of locked-up men wanting out of their cage.

The keg exploded, in the fearsome Menard riots of 1952—shortly before Randolph took over as warden.

When he came in, ringleaders were still isolated in one cell block and ferment still seethed. He pitched in firmly with a clear-cut policy and the ability and backing to implement it. Things have been operating smoothly since. The prison as an operation has been vastly improved and continues to improve.

As for family life within a prison, one scene sums it up as well as any. In a side yard, Ronnie has a high-jump pit; swings; there's a goldfish pond, a birdhouse, plenty of room to play ball in. There's no danger of losing the ball. The backstop is a tall stone wall—right behind which exists the 585-population of the psychiatric division.

(One of the men in there, for 30-odd years, spent all his outdoor time squatting on his heels looking at the gate. He liked baseball, but the diamond was behind him and so other prisoners would have to tell him what was happening during the games. He wouldn't turn around. He looked at the gate.)

That picture—the playground hard by the psychiatric division wall—stuck in our mind; two world's almost touching physically—but actually incalculable distances apart. The same contrast is apparent in the professional and home life of Warden Randolph, who crosses the boundaries of the two worlds (In and Out) many times a day.

WE met him in his office that morning after being frisked at the electric eye building, the main entrance, and exit, to the hulking, stony prison which squats on the banks of the Mississippi at the foot of the bluffs down from Chester.

The prison sits staring sullenly at the rolling footloose river. A man was freed while we were there, having built his time. No ruffles, no flourishes, he just walked out wearing his new state suit and got in the car where somebody was waiting for him.

"Good luck," said Randolph.

"I'll need it," the young man said.

He did not smile.

His new clothing looked somehow strange on him, the same indefinable strangeness peculiar to all immigrants on any foreign dock of debarkation. He drove away alongside the river.

Randolph, sitting at his large desk, looks like a top executive of a big corporation. Few if any executives have his responsibility. He runs a world. A world made up of people, not just profit and loss.

In this world are the 2144 inmates, hundreds of prison employes, visitors who come and go, his wife and his son and himself. The responsibility for all of these people is on the shoulders of the warden.

Randolph is an erect, broad-shouldered, 48-year-old, 200-pound ex-FBI man who gave up school teaching back in the depression to take a job in a sheriff's office because teaching, which he liked, was down to starvation wages even more than usual. He's been a parole agent, also.

"When I first came to Menard I noticed the prisoner cooking for me was a fellow I once had to send back to prison for parole violation. This I found interesting," said Randolph, who is given to understatement.

THIS prisoner, perhaps fortunately, bore only one feeling toward Randolph. He remembered the time Randolph had staked him to a few bucks, out of Randolph's own pocket. He had already spread the word, via prison grapevine, the closest thing yet to telepathy, that the incoming warden was a square joe. He greeted Randolph fondly.

Randolph was an FBI man from 1941 to 1952, and has the stamp that training usually leaves, a stamp as recognizable as a non-gaudy old school tie; the air of quiet efficiency, studied unobtrusiveness, physical and mental control.

He left the FBI to become administrative assistant and adviser on investigative matters to then-Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, served a period as warden of Pontiac Prison, was appointed by Illinois Governor Stratton as Menard's warden. Stratton is a Republican. Randolph isn't.

WHEN Randolph took over at Menard it was with a well-planned policy, which he says boils down to a combination of firmness and fairness. He prohibited clubs for guards. He takes a positive approach.

"The vast majority of inmates simply want to serve their time and get out of here," he said, as we toured the prison. It is spotless but, for some reason, has none of the disinfectant smell most institutions have. "We put clear-cut rules on the line for them. We try to keep morale high. We keep idleness to a minimum."

For rule-breakers, there's solitary.

The progress of Menard has attracted widespread attention, among penologists, among wardens, among administrators.

"The governor has given me the backing I need," said Randolph. "Without that backing, progress would have been impossible."

He strides briskly around the grounds, no guard with him. His air is that of a quiet-spoken military commandant. He nods briefly to passing prisoners. Guards touch their caps in a salute. Through the efficient shops — clothing manufacture, tobacco processing, broom making—we went.

Always there were the eyes, the gaze of prisoners who had just looked away anytime you looked at them. The Crank Gang came by toward chow, all in a row. These are the men who can't or won't work. Many are white-haired old men, empty men; forgotten. Others are simply "cranks," fighting various hopeless battles.

On the balcony of a high cell tier, so high it made one dizzy to look down at the concrete, Randolph said, "This is the one they were going to throw the guards from during the riot."

Briskly, Randolph walked, proudly pointing to new trade schools, various innovations, many of them profitable to the state, all of them contributing to some extent to morale. Radio earphones were in the cells. So were books and magazines. So were men. The cells with men in them looked far smaller than the empty cells.

All was calm, efficient, placid. But with a never-ending tenseness dormant, which is why armed guards are on the tall walls. We asked Randolph how it felt to know that, for whatever reason, any second might bring some emergency, perhaps personal attack. He said he didn't think about it consciously more than a motorist driving down a highway thought consciously about the next approaching automobile crashing into him. But then, again, like the careful motorist, he never—for a split second—discarded the possibility.

He used to conduct FBI schools, showing other men how to defend themselves.

Of the inmate population almost 400 are doing time for murder.

UPSTAIRS in the other continent, the warden's quarters, Mrs. Randolph, a slim and attractive woman, greeted us—we had lunch. The warden's quarters are a backdrop for gracious living; crystal chandeliers, cut glass bowls, beautiful silver service, thick carpeting, luxurious draperies.

It's an old prison and the warden's quarters have old-fashioned spaciousness; the place was designed for, and is used for, guest quarters for parole boards and other state visitors. One bedroom is referred to as the Governor's Room.

There are five big bedrooms, each with its own bath; huge living room, music room, snack room, family dining room and state dining room. The "rent" for these literally palatial quarters is $75 monthly.

We were glad about lunch because of a certain nervousness entailed in being eyed by a 90-pound dog, Judge, a Weimaraner which we were not sure but what was hungry.

"He won't bother you," Randolph laughed. "I told him you were all right. He has free run of the place and the men pet him, like him very much. That's downstairs, of course. He wouldn't want any stranger up here, though."

Shaking Judge's paw enthusiastically, to seal our friendship thoroughly, we went on to lunch. Steak and french fries from the warden's kitchen on the upstairs level.

In front of the prison visitors were being searched. Far out back prisoners worked in the stone quarry. Upstairs, Mrs. Randolph discussed P.-T.A. dental clinic problems on the telephone.

The waiter who served lunch was a clean-cut appearing young man in starched white uniform, who did his best to imitate a deaf-mute and appear in general as if he were invisible. His waiter's craft had been learned thoroughly. Servants are chosen after careful screening, and Mrs. Randolph trains them.

They are checked into the quarters in the mornings and checked out at night. Among most prisoners their job is an envied one. Mrs. Randolph said she has had no major difficulty with any insubordination, theft or the like.

One lad, who served a time as a houseboy, had grown up in a broken home. "I never knew what family life was until I worked here for you," he told Mrs. Randolph, half tearfully, when his time was up. "It's given me a whole new slant on life."

TEN-YEAR-OLD Ronnie is given no chance to be imperious with the servants, whom he likes and is liked by them in return.

"A child's natural tendency is to order people around if he finds he can," said Mrs. Randolph. "I put my foot down on that. If he wants something done he asks his mother first. He's not going to get the idea he can order any grown-up around."

The wraithlike waiter came and went repeatedly and then lunch was over; Randolph went downstairs to give an impromptu talk to a group of soil conservation folks touring the prison.

"I just insist on living a normal life here," Mrs. Randolph said. "It's not at all difficult. Some of my friends never get over being disturbed at the idea, and I'll admit when all this was new to me I used to hear an awful lot of noises in the night.

"But now my problems aren't much different from any other mother's—one of the biggest is making sure Ronnie has playmates. I wear out the asphalt driving him back and forth to Chester to see his friends. Of course, they come here too—I'm a den mother and the cubs meet here—but he really wouldn't have the normal number of playmates unless I saw to it, and drove him back and forth."

Such are her problems—her husband, downstairs, has the problem of running a penned-up world, a grim world, a world with a very short fuse. A violent world, where discipline and compassion have to balance on a near impossibly-thin line if it's to be run the best way, under the present system of penology.

Randolph says the trend toward professional prison administrators is the best answer yet proferred to improving the sometimes sorry and shocking picture of prison operation.

A professional in the job, he said, is a man there by both inclination and training; a man who not only can maintain morale but also can operate either in the black or at a minimum loss. He would seem to bear out his own theory; he's been operating just like that.

His pet project these days is reclamation of an additional 300 acres of bottom land in the honor farm area. This formerly near-valueless land, when cultivated, will bring an additional $300 per acre — or a whopping $60,000 to help meet annual expenses.

His record has brought much praise from many including his boss, Governor Stratton.

His two worlds, home and professional, the one within the other, are a startling study in contrast; the one of P.-T.A. and Rotary and Vogue on the coffee tables, the other one of humankind's violations; crime and punishment, and the only way yet figured out to deal with it all—the lock-up.

AS for the walled-in world, the prisoners themselves half-facetiously, half-bitterly speak of it as "The Town." As we would in any town, we dropped by to check with the local editors: Dave Saunders and Fred Fromm, proprietors of the Menard Time, the inmate-produced paper of which Warden Randolph is exceedingly proud. He said flatly he thought it was the best prison paper in the country, and showed us the latest, enlarged issue.

We sadly noted our favorite columnist, Jimmy Ray, had come on hard times but had reported them about himself in the best journalistic tradition.

"'Me? Who, me?'" Ray had written dolefully. "'Yeah, you,'" Ole Judge Farrell (Capt. Farrell, the disciplinarian) tole me. "'Where'd you get those hot dogs?'"

"And I says, 'Why, Mr. Farrell, I just don't know. Guess they kinda grew in this sack I got in my hand'."

"Farrell just leaned back and grinned, kinda chortling-like, it seemed to me. 'Why, boy, that's five days. You better get 'em'." Boy, I was hot when I went in (to isolation) but plenty cool when I came out'."

We left the newspaper office and walked around with the warden, a man obviously wrapped up in enjoying the problems of a tough and rugged and skill-requiring job.

"Would you like to go inside the yard of the psychiatric division?" he asked suddenly. "We don't usually allow visitors there."

Inside, pointless men ambled. A man knelt picking up the earth a pinchful of dust at a time. Randolph strolled through the wanderers; some stared blankly, some nodded politely, some glared white-eyedly, some giggled. We felt unsteady inside.

"Among these boys, plenty are right on edge," Randolph said, conversationally. "If somebody shouted 'Riot!' there probably would be a riot."

Right over the wall was the playground. Ronnie came home from school. Upstairs, he made his Dad promise to take him horseback riding at five. At five, the warden was busy. Mrs. Randolph was noticed going down the hallway, carrying a bat and ball. She and the boy went out through the electric eye exit. Judge trotted along wagging his tail.

Overworked Queen

Weight of Duties Heavy on Elizabeth

By Fred Doerflinger

LONDON, April 7 (INS).

BRITAIN'S Queen Elizabeth II will be 30 on April 21 and a worried nation fears she is aging before her time.

Just as President Eisenhower's heart attack brought home to the American people the burdens of the presidency, the recent signs of stress and strain in Elizabeth fostered British concern that the monarch's duty is sapping the health and well-being of their sovereign.

QUEEN ELIZABETH . . . DRAWN AND TIRED.

There is little doubt that Elizabeth is the hardest-worked and hardest-working monarch in modern British history. And there is never a genuine get-away-from-it-all vacation for this slight woman who has an Empire as well as a husband and children to look after.

There are enormous and never-ending demands—state, social and domestic—on the Queen's time and the blunt fact is, that Elizabeth is beginning to show symptoms normally associated with people who burn the candle at both ends.

Britons who have recently seen the Queen at work have detected beneath her outward calm distinct signs of strain and tiredness.

Miss Margaret Dale, a nurse for 35 years, attended a recent Buckingham Palace ceremony, and noticed that the Queen held herself tensely at times, that her hand trembled slightly now and again, that she took quick deep breaths as though trying to stifle a sigh.

"I know these to be signs of intense overtiredness," said Miss Dale.

Britons are convinced that it was on doctors orders that Elizabeth flew to Corsica in March for a week's Mediterranean cruise on the royal yacht Britannia. This was the first vacation of its kind the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh ever had together and represented a complete break with tradition. Even so the inevitable dispatch boxes with their Government papers followed her.

● THE VACATION came shortly after the couple's return from a royal tour of Nigeria. In 20 days Elizabeth flew 8900 miles and fulfilled 150 engagements in a country where even the natives fainted from the heat. She returned to Britain much slimmer than when she set out and experts estimated that she had lost at least 10 pounds.

It is not only the increasingly heavy burdens of her job in this modern age but Elizabeth's determination to emulate her father, King George VI, that has made her the hardest working woman in the world since her accession in 1952.

No one has ever attempted to guess, let alone calculate, the total number of miles she travels on her duties each year or the number of hands she shakes, but Elizabeth keeps up a pace that would put the activities of a barnstorming politician to shame. She is already scheduled to visit Sweden in June and pay a state visit to Denmark next spring.

Day after day the Queen follows a rigid timetable, pursues a gruelling program unequaled by any of her predecessors. For although the Duke of Edinburgh, the Queen Mother, Princess Margaret and other members of the royal family have all stepped up their activities, demands on the Queen's time have steadily increased. So many requests are made for her presence at functions that she cannot possibly accept more than one in 50.

● THE QUEEN throws back her monogrammed sheets promptly at 7 a.m. each morning. She sips a cup of tea and by 8 is listening to the news on the radio, reading her morning papers and tackling her mail.

Breakfast is over by 9 and whenever possible the Queen and her husband join the children for a romp. By 9:30 she is behind her desk going over her engagements with her private secretary. Then one of her three duty assistant secretaries enters with her correspondence and documents.

Elizabeth signs her name some 50 times a day and she never signs a paper without carefully reading it. The secretary is followed by the master of the household and a discussion on palace routine.

Elizabeth then deals with personal matters such as setting appointments with her hairdresser and dressmaker.

After a cup of black coffee (without sugar) the Whitehall dispatch boxes arrive. The sovereign must know everything about every aspect of state business. She reads scores of daily reports from the Cabinet, various ministries and Parliament as well as each day's batch of inward and outward telegrams between the Foreign Secretary and British representatives abroad.

Then come audiences, sometimes four or five in a morning. She may have to dub knights, receive an ambassador's credentials or hold a meeting of the Privy Council.

● LUNCH IS AT 12:45 at Buckingham Palace and if the Queen is not attending an official luncheon or entertaining guests she rests briefly after the noon-day meal. If she is lucky she sees her children again before going out to open a bazaar or address a meeting of women.

On her return to the palace she deals with the remainder of her correspondence, chooses the palace menu for the next day and reads the summary of parliamentary proceedings forwarded to her each day the House of Commons is sitting.

Whenever she is home she invariably devotes at least half an hour between 5 and 6 to Prince Charles and Princess Anne.

The Queen dines out officially or privately or entertains guests at dinner at least three nights a week. If she is not attending a public function, theater or a ball her private family dinner is invariably followed by more work.

Want to Know What's Cooking

Housewives Bombard County Library for Cookbooks, Cookbooks and More Cookbooks

By Clarissa Start

IF your next door neighbor makes frequent trips to the library and returns home with an armful of brightly colored volumes, don't jump to the conclusion that she's neglecting her home and family for an escapist whirl at fiction. It may be that she's taking her job as homemaker so seriously that she's studying it.

According to Mrs. Yvonne Humber, chief of Readers' Service at the St. Louis County Library, 6814 Natural Bridge road, the best sellers for women readers today are headed by:

"Cookbooks, cookbooks on every phase of cooking, pickling, preserving. Books on the use of the deep freeze and all the kitchen appliances. And they are closely followed by books on decorating, sewing, home arts and crafts, home remodeling, and how-to-do-it books related to better homemaking, budgeting and child care."

Because there is such a brisk demand for cookbooks, St. Louis County Library buys practically everything that it published on the subject. It has not approached the New York City Library with its 2500 cookbooks, but its 400 volumes are fast movers. In addition, women get cookery tips from the homemaking and women's magazines available at the library and also on the bookmobiles which serve the outlying suburban communities and rural areas.

COOKING today is not just a twist of the can opener or the thawing of a frozen dinner, as the cartoonists suggest, Mrs. Humber says. She doubts if women have ever been so interested in approaching cooking as a real culinary art.

"Our requests are for books on planning meals with color and nutritional balance, with much interest in table setting and flower arrangements," she says. "Interestingly enough, many of our borrowers are working wives who ask for help in planning meals which don't betray the shortcuts taken.

"We have excellent volumes with the titles suggesting the help they offer: 'The Working Girl Must Eat,' 'Making the Most of Your Cooking Time,' 'One Pot One Dish Meals,' and 'Short Cuts to Good Eating'."

The increasing amount of world travel and the return home of servicemen from other countries has accentuated the interest of Americans in foreign cooking, Mrs. Humber adds. There are books on the cuisine in India, Russia, Africa, China, France, and Turkey, books like, "Scandinavian Cookery for Americans," "Luchow's German Cook Book," and "Out of Alaska's Kitchens." The latter proved to be a lifesaver not long ago when Mrs. Humber was asked to find a recipe on bear meat. She looked first in a Russian cookbook only to read that, according to the Russians, "Bear meat is tough and cannot be compared with a good ham." Alaskans, however, not only eat bear meat, but enjoy it.

MRS. YVONNE HUMBER, CHIEF OF THE READERS' SERVICE AT THE ST. LOUIS COUNTY LIBRARY, WITH SOME OF THE LIBRARY'S POPULAR COOKBOOKS.

Along with foreign cookbooks are many regional cookbooks, on foods famous in California, New England, New Orleans. A Texas cookbook contains a long dissertation on the relative merits of fried, barbecued, or stewed rattlesnake meat, and even tells you where to look for the choicest rattlesnakes, "some claiming the West Texas rattlers up around five or six feet long are best (like range-fed beef) while others say the big fat rattlers are tenderer, juicier."

There is, of course, the cookbook with the intriguing title, "How to Cook a Wolf." The hunting and fishing season brings many calls from men who find that having landed the catch, they don't know what to do with it. One urgent appeal came in at headquarters last year just before closing time one day from a deer hunter who'd arrived home and had no idea how to cut and store his venison in the deep freeze. Happily Mrs. Humber found just the book on the library shelf.

"Most of our customers are women," says Mrs. Humber, "but once in a while we'll have a man who'll take out any new book on food and drink. And, of course, in the summer a lot of men ask for barbecue books. They want to dress up their recipes and astonish their friends."

SUMMER also brings a rush for volumes on food preservation, pickling and deep freeze storage. Christmas sees a rush on books concerning cookies, candies, fruit cakes. And year round there is a demand for books on quantity cookery. How many sandwiches and gallons of punch for the Ladies Aid Social? How much meat can one buy and still stay within the church supper budget?

Year round, too, Mrs. Humber has queries of what she terms "the kitchen dilemma" type. . . . "How do I make Caesar salad dressing?" "I had a recipe out of a book. . . . I can't remember the name of the book but it had a green cover."

Many cookbooks are specialty books. How to cook with curry, herbs, the complete book on cheese, books on religious Fast days. Every time a new appliance is brought out, a mixer, blender, or rotisserie, there are cookbooks on how to use it to best advantage. Some cookbooks deal with the commercial aspects of cooking—how to go into the catering business, how to make money in your kitchen.

The announcement of President Eisenhower's heart attack caused a run on cookbooks relating to health. Women, and men, too, began asking for books on low sodium and low chloresterol diets, and such titles as "Gourmet Cooking for the Cardiac." There is always an interest in cookbooks relating to diets for the allergic, the diabetic, the overweight person, but the President's illness seemed to underscore too many people the importance of slowing down and taking a new look at their diets, Mrs. Humber said.

"Some patrons tell us they enjoy reading cookbooks even if they're not trying the recipes because of the interesting narration, background, and historical data on foods and eating customs of various sections of the country and of the world," Mrs. Humber says.

SHE herself is fond of Samuel Chamberlain's "Bouquet de France," which she describes as a "beautifully illustrated volume, a travel book as well as a cookbook. It's expensive and not a practical cookbook but it's a pleasure to own."

Usually the newest book on cooking is the most popular one but there are such all time favorites as Irma Rombauer's "Joy of Cooking," and the Boston Cookbook.

Mrs. Humber, a housewife herself, likes to cook and consults many of the books she recommends.

"My father was a chef," she explains, "and I've always been very much interested in cooking."

Of French descent, she has visited in France, and expects to spend her vacation there this summer. She hopes to come back with some new recipes.

Marriage

Love Not Always on One Level

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

LOVE cannot exist continually at a certain level unless it is a very low level. Many people are concerned because they do not recognize this fact. Mrs. Z. wonders what is the matter with her husband.

"For days he will be devoted and affectionate, and then for a week he'll seem to be indifferent," she tells me. "If I ask him whether he still loves me, he says of course he does and then walks away as if he were irritated. I can't help wondering which of these kinds of behavior represents his real nature. Does he just pretend to love me once in a while although he doesn't feel it, or does he get tired of me quickly or what does this really mean? Men aren't all like that, are they Dr. Popenoe?"

Yes, Mrs. Z., all men are pretty much like that and so are all women. You can't continue at a high level indefinitely without a let-down in love any more than you can in any other action of life. If you are merely working, you have to rest once in a while. Wise husbands and wives make allowance for this.

PSYCHIATRIST SMILEY BLANTON emphasizes this point in his new and worthwhile book "Love or Perish" (Simon and Schuster, 630 5th avenue, New York 20, N. Y., $1): "The wise husband and wife know that even the deepest love must have its intervals of nonactive expression. They do not fall into a panic because they are not the object of each other's ceaseless preoccupation. On the contrary, they realize that a person who makes constant demands for 'proofs' of love is like an insecure child who clamors endlessly for his mother's attention.

Those who are confident of their basic love will see to it, instead, that provision is made for release of the tensions and hostilities inevitable in every intimate association. Each will make sure that the other is allowed his own measure of independent thought and activity, with periods when the accumulated aggressions may be worked off in sports, hobbies, or other channels of deflection."

JUDGE ALL your husband's love by the whole content of your marriage, Mrs. Z. My little self-rating scale "Are You Sure It's Love?" would be a safe guide. A copy will be sent with the compliments of the Post-Dispatch to any reader who incloses a stamped, self-addressed envelope with the request.

Answers to Questions.

Q. Can't we have some classes for expectant fathers, to prepare them for what is coming?

A. Yes, very important, especially if they have had no such training in high school. At the American Institute of Family Relations our classes preparing expectant mothers for "childbirth without fear" take the fathers into all the lectures—though of course not into the exercises for relaxation!

Q. Isn't the delinquency of children of divorce greatly exaggerated?

A. I don't know what figures you have heard. A study in Columbus, O., found they were four times as likely to become delinquent, as were children from normal homes.

Q. I GO AWAY from my wife every winter because being with her 365 days in the year is too much for me to stand. When I return, we both love each other more. Am I doing the right thing?

A. Yes, if that suits both of you; and provided you also go away with her for enjoyable trips together.

Q. Is it true that if a boy and girl are born twins, the girl will be sterile?

A. No, absolutely not.

Q. At what age should teenage girls be allowed to date?

A. Depends partly on their maturity and how much they have been associated with boys.

Q. How can I get my husband to make a will?

A. Get men friends to talk casually to him—lawyer, employer, lodge member, union official, etc.

Iranian Princess a Housewife at Missouri Air Force Base

By Margaret Olwine

GRANDVIEW AIR FORCE BASE, Mo., April 7 (AP).

MRS. GUITY AFROUZ KADJAR WAMBOLD is an Iranian princess. She was born in Golestand palace in Tehran.

Until five years ago, she was surrounded by luxury. Today she is an American housewife doing most of her own work. Of the two ways of life, she prefers the American.

"Perhaps my other life would seem more exciting to one who has not lived it," she said in an interview. "But your time is not yours, your home is not yours, your life is not yours. I love America and its freedom—and American husbands are wonderful."

Princess Guity (her name rhymes with Kitty) is the wife of Lt. Col William H. Wambold of Grandview Air Force Base, and the mother of twin daughters, Robin and Kristin, 3½, and a son, Ali, 22 months.

She is small and olive skinned, with classical features, expressive brown eyes and the longest natural eyelashes you probably ever saw. She wears a touch of green eyeshadow, even in the daytime, and prefers a French cookbok to an American one because she can understand the directions better.

BUT she wears pedalpushers and goes to supermarkets in the modern American way. And her principal concern right now is whether "the girls" at Grandview are going to like her for herself.

Mrs. Wambold and the three children arrived here two months ago, following a visit of six months to her home country. Since 1935, geography books and outsiders have called her homeland Iran, but she still calls it Persia. Col. Wambold was transferred here last August from Maxwell Field, Ala.

The Wambolds live in a partly completed development of ranch style homes. Their yard has just been sodded. Outside, the house looks like everyone else's. Inside, velvet textured Persian rugs stretch almost wall to wall, and you see an intriguing mixture of pictures and art objects of American, European and Persian origin. Also you see a judicious blend of French provincial and Swedish modern furniture, the latest books and magazines and a few little odds and ends such as toddlers are likely to leave behind when they are hustled off to take their naps.

Guity, the daughter of Mohamad Hassan-Mirza Kadjar, crown prince of the Kadjar dynasty, was educated in French and English finishing schools. She played polo and went to diplomatic parties. She knew the great and near-great of many lands.

In July, 1950, she met Wambold, of Lakeport, Calif., who had been air attache at the American embassy in Tehran for almost two years. The occasion was a party at the British embassy. Wambold was introduced to the princess as "the young man who rented your uncle's cottage."

The princess was impressed with "the very nice looking American major," but she saw little of him until two months later, when they were together on a four-day visit among the tribes of West Persia.

"When we got back," says Guity, "well we knew. We were married two months later, on Armistice day, 1950."

Not a single member of the proud Kadjar dynasty, which dates back 300 years and which had ruled Persia for 150 years prior to the ascension of Gen. Riza Pahlavi in 1925, ever had married a foreigner.

"But Bill was a quiet, steady person and had a wonderful reputation in Tehran," says the princess, "and all of my mother's seven brothers knew him.

"The Majlis (parliament) discussed the matter, and the Shah had to give his consent for our marriage. Bill had to get permission from the Air Force. Religion was not a barrier, for he understood the restrictions upon me and agreed to accept the Moslem faith. Somehow it all worked out and we managed to make the private announcement of our engagement before the public announcement appeared.

"We were married twice—a Moslem ceremony at my home and then a civil ceremony. A month after our marriage we left Tehran and came to the United States. . . ."

THE Wambolds began housekeeping at Vacaville, a residential district between San Francisco and Sacramento. Bill was assigned to Travis Air Force Base.

"I had everything to learn," says Mrs. Wambold. "I enjoy the domestic things—and I like having your own family to yourself. The way I had been brought up, we had a houseful of servants who were just there and four to 20 guests dropped in at every meal.

"My first American friend, a neighbor, taught me how to make the bed, use the vacuum cleaner and cook the simplest foods. Bill could cook, too, even some Persian foods, so we managed."

Twice, Guity's mother came to America to help her; when the twins were born and again when little Ali arrived.

Guity is not homesick nor has she any regrets for having married the serious, polite Californian.

"Here married couples are more close to each other," she says. "In my country the husband makes the decisions and is not expected to consult with his wife about anything.

"The women in my country have more freedom now and do not wear veils. Very few go out to work, and they cannot be in Parliament or vote. But the big thing is, they are still not treated as partners by their husbands."

She has some specific advice for other foreign wives who are perhaps new to this country and finding their adjustments difficult.

"Try not to judge the American girls until you really get to know them. Try not to analyze them, but let the American girls show you the way things are here. Try not to criticize, keep an open mind, and then you can have magnificent friendships."

THE happiness of the Wambold household, being hard-earned, is not taken for granted. Guity worries a little, lest her background set her apart from the other girls or in some way hurt her husband's military career. She concedes that she is perhaps too concerned with what others may think and that this comes from having lived in the public eye most of her life and having discovered the hard way that the slightest deviation from customary conduct or dress would arouse a tempest of protest from the 5000 members of the Kadjar family as well as the Iranian press.

But at home in America, she is beginning to realize that those days are past. Now the vivacious, preferably anonymous little princess-turned-housewife arises at six, feeds the baby, cooks her husband's breakfast, feeds the twins, washes the dishes, sets out a pan of food for the new puppy, bathes the baby and cleans the house. Then she telephones all over Grandview for a baby sitter so that she can go to the club on Thursday—her day off—to play bridge with the girls.

Profiles in Courage--John Quincy Adams

PRINCIPLES OVER POPULARITY

He Regarded Every Measure That Came Before Him, A Fellow Senator Said, as if It Were Abstract Proposition From Euclid—No Thought as to How His Actions Would Affect His Personal Fortunes

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS . . . "LEFT A MEMORABLE IMPRINT UPON OUR GOVERNMENT AND OUR WAY OF LIFE."

This is the first of a series of "Profiles in Courage"—the records of men in political life who, for the sake of what they believed to be right, sacrificed a great deal: party, popularity, even their careers. The author, Senator John F. Kennedy (Dem.), Massachusetts, 38-year-old writer and newspaper man, has been a member of Congress since 1946. The articles are condensed from Kennedy's best-selling book, "Profiles in Courage," published by Harper & Brothers.

By John F. Kennedy

THE young Senator from Massachusetts stirred restlessly in his chair as the debate droned on. The Senate chamber fairly echoed with the shouting of his Massachusetts colleague, Senator Pickering, who was denouncing President Jefferson's trade embargo of 1807 for what seemed like the hundredth time.

Outside, a dreary January rain had bogged the village of Washington into a sea of mud. Sorting the mail which lay in disarray on his desk, John Quincy Adams found his eye caught by an anonymous letter:

"Lucifer, son of the morning, how thou hast fallen! We hope not irrecoverably. O Adams, remember who thou art. Return to Massachusetts! Return to thy country. Assist not in its destruction! Consider the consequences. Awake —arouse in time.

—A FEDERALIST."

A Federalist! Adams mused bitterly over the word. Was he not the son of John Adams, the last Federalist president? Had he not served a Federalist administration in the diplomatic service abroad? Had he not been elected as a Federalist to the Massachusetts legislature and then to the United States Senate? Now, simply because he had placed national interest before party and section, the Federalists had deserted him.

John Quincy Adams was one of the great representatives of that extraordinary breed who have left a memorable imprint upon our government and our way of life. Harsh and intractable, like the rocky New England countryside, he believed that man was made in the image of God, and thus was equal to the extraordinary demands of self-government. The Puritan loved liberty and the law.

Long before these discouraging months in the senate, when his mail was filled with abuse, he had noted in his diary the dangers that confronted a Puritan entering politics: "I feel strong temptation to plunge into political controversy, but . . . a politician in this country must be the man of a party. I would fain be the man of my whole country."

FEW Americans have been born with the advantages of John Quincy Adams: a famous name; a brilliant father who labored unceasingly to develop his son's talents; an extraordinary mother. Yet he was gnawed constantly by a sense of inadequacy, of failure. He wrote his father at age nine:

"Mamma has a troublesome task to keep me a studying. I own I am ashamed of myself."

Again, 36 years later, having served as U. S. senator, Harvard professor, and American minister to major European powers, he could write sadly in his diary:

"Two-thirds of a long life have passed, and I have done nothing to distinguish it by usefulness to my country and to mankind."

And finally, at age 70, having distinguished himself as secretary of state, an independent President and an eloquent member of Congress, he was to record somberly that his "whole life has been a succession of disappointments. I can scarcely recollect a single instance of success in anything that I ever undertook."

His frustrations and defeats in political office—as senator and President—were the inevitable result of his intransigence in ignoring the political facts of life.

It was not unnatural that John Quincy, returning to Boston after diplomatic service upon his father's defeat for president by Thomas Jefferson, should become active in his father's Federalist party. But no sooner had the young ex-diplomat been elected to the Massachusetts legislature than he demonstrated his audacious disdain for narrow partisanship. Without consulting his senior colleagues he proposed that the Jeffersonian party be given proportional representation on the governor's council.

In subsequently selecting young Adams for the Senate, his colleagues in the state legislature may have assumed that the honor would help impress upon him his obligations to his party.

Arriving in Washington, Adams promptly aroused a storm of controversy by becoming the only Federalist to support Jefferson's Louisiana purchase. He regarded this remarkable feat, since it excluded Napoleon from our boundaries while enriching our nation, as far more important than the outraged astonishment of his party colleagues. This was regarded by his Federalist friends as the final proof of perfidy.

With stubborn intellectual independence, Adams regarded every public measure that came before him, a fellow senator observed, as though it were an abstract proposition from Euclid, unfettered by consideration of political appeal.

He denied the duty of elected representatives "to be palsied by the will of their constituents"; he refused to become what he termed a "patriot by profession . . ." His guiding star was the principle of puritan statesmanship his father had laid down many years before: "The magistrate is the servant not of his own desires, not even of the people, but of his God."

IN 1807, the split between party and Senator became irreparable. Adams was denounced by the great majority of his constituents as well as the party chiefs. The final break, naturally enough, concerned the nation's foreign policy.

Our relations with Great Britain were worsening. Our ships were being seized, the cargoes confiscated, seamen "impressed" into the King's navy. Adams's patriotic instincts were aroused when the very Federalist merchants whose ships were being attacked decided that appeasement was the best answer to their problems.

With undisguised contempt, Adams in 1806 successfully introduced, over Federalist opposition, a series of resolutions condemning British aggression upon American ships.

In the summer of 1807, the American frigate Chesapeake was fired upon off the Virginia capes by the British man-of-war, Leopard. Adams was convinced the time for forceful action had come. He pleaded with Federalist officials to call a protest meeting in Boston. Turned down he attended a Republican party meeting and helped draft a fighting resolution pledging support to the President.

Now the Federalists, outraged, stated publicly that Adams should "have his head taken off for apostasy . . . and should no longer be considered as having any communion with the party."

WHEN, on Sept. 18, 1807, Jefferson called for an embargo in retaliation against the British—a measure apparently ruinous to Massachusetts—Adams was chairman of the comittee which reported out the bill. "This measure will cost you and me our seats," young Adams remarked to a colleague, "but private interest must not be put in opposition to the public good."

His words were unerringly prophetic. In Massachusetts, a substantial proportion of America's merchant fleet and practically all the shipbuilding and fishing industries were idled. Bankruptcy and migration from the territory became common. The Federalists insisted the embargo was an attempt by Jefferson to ruin New England. Talk of New England seceding became commonplace.

The Federalist legislature convened in May, 1808, with—as the Massachusetts Republican governor wrote—but one "principal object—the political and even the personal destruction of John Quincy Adams." Both houses immediately elected Adams's successor to the Senate—nine months prior to the expiration of his term. Adams resigned his seat.

It was "out of the question," he wrote, to hold his seat "without exercising the most perfect freedom of agency, under the sole and exclusive control of my own sense of right.

"I will only add that, far from regretting any one of those acts for which I have suffered I would do them over again . . . at the hazard of 10 times as much slander, unpopularity and displacement."

ADAMS'S star was to rise again—but with this incident he etched his profile in courage. And he never abandoned his courage of conscience. Soon after his retirement from the White House in 1829, he was asked by the voters of Plymouth district to represent them in Congress. He agreed only if he could pursue a course independent of the party and voters.

He was overwhelmingly elected, and devoted his prestive and energies to the struggle against slavery. To be returned on this independent basis to the Congress from which he had departed so ignominiously 22 years earlier was deeply moving for Adams.

"I am a member-elect of the 22nd Congress," he recorded in his diary. "No election or appointment conferred upon me ever gave me so much pleasure. My election as President of the United States was not half so gratifying to my inmost soul."

THE FEDERALIST LEGISLATURE CONVENED IN MAY, 1808, WITH ONE PRINCIPAL OBJECT—THE POLITICAL AND EVEN THE PERSONAL DESTRUCTION OF JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Party Names In Adams's Day

THE major parties in America are now known as the Republican and the Democratic.

But it wasn't that way in John Quincy Adams's day.

When Adams refers to the "Republican party" he actually was referring to the party of Thomas Jefferson, lineal ancestor of what is known nowadays as the "Democratic party."

The "Federalists," the party to which the Adamses, father and son, originally belonged, was the party of Alexander Hamilton. It later became the "Whig party" and, just before the Civil war, it blended into the "Republican party" we now know.

Never A Dull Moment

By Stan Delaplane

SAN FRANCISCO.

WE seem to be in a season of emergencies. My 12-year-old heiress has put her knee through the glass door. A matter of nine silver bullets to the glazier for repairs.

Last week she put her hand through a window. Another $9, plus 16 stitches and hysterics that set all the neighborhood dogs to howling. In sympathy, I suppose.

"Couldn't you just stay away from everything made of glass?" I asked, gloomily. "Your antique parent does not own a single share of Owens-Illinois. More's the pity."

"It was an accident," she said. "Don't you understand? I just pushed the window and it broke. You aren't sympathetic."

Well, I am sympathetic. Just slightly worn out around the wallet, that's all.

Just about the time I get the household budgeted, the wind blows the shingles off the roof.

The dog develops an asthma that can only be cured by injections of liquid gold and a diet of fresh caviar.

This dog has the appetite of a starving tiger. Yet I have never seen a more delicate animal. The only dog in the world who gets poison oak. The only dog I have ever seen who scratches with both hind feet at once.

THE DOG is on a budget of horse meat. Which at present prices is about the same as filet mignon. Just to stagger around the house, he requires gallons of this expensive fodder.

He tears into everything that is left over as though he expected food to go out of style.

Thereafter he lies whimpering on the best rug. Regarding me with brimming eyes and the wistful look of a child with a nose pressed against the candy window.

"I'm hungry," he says. "Starving."

Once I figured out the amount of horse meat this dog has eaten. I figured he has eaten 10 full-grown horses during his lifetime!

With what this dog has eaten I could have bought Nashua.

Rushing a gory child to the doctor in the middle of the night is bad enough. It is the aftermath of patient suffering and smug bravery that is so annoying.

For days now I have had to listen to every detail. How she bled fiercely, meanwhile making sad and courageous last statements. Advising her father not to sorrow too greatly, but to regard the whole episode as an angel snatched from his bosom.

I HAVE had a background of constant telephone conversations to other young ladies.

"Cut so bad they had to stick my hand back on!

"Blood over everything! It was terrible!

"My father said he had never seen anyone so brave! I hardly cried a bit."

So short is memory. I wouldn't call it crying. More like bellowing. Like a cow with colic. More like a roar, I would say.

As to father and what he has seen, I grow quite faint at the sight of blood. I don't know how we got the emergency bandage on. Neither of us could bear to look, and that's a fact.

I keep a first-aid package and a first-aid book around the house. But when the emergency arises I can never find the right page. I am just as likely to give artificial respiration as anything else.

Only one thing I have learned to do until the doctor comes. Give them first aid and give them lemonade. There is nothing like lemonade for shock, no matter what the books say, I know. I drank a quart of it myself.

Music And Music Makers

The Civic Music League

By Thomas B. Sherman

ST. LOUIS does not support as much good music as many communities of approximately the same size; but the quantitative test is certainly not the best one. The ideal program for a Metropolitan city with claims to cultural importance is a balanced program in which the quality is high. From that point of view St. Louis has certain obvious deficiencies. We have no professional opera, the chamber music concerts do not explore the important quartet literature extensively, a great many important works written for orchestra and chorus are never heard, and of recent years we have little in the way of solo piano music.

Indicated improvements therefore, should aim first at improved quality and a wider range of choice.

The Civic Music League in making plans for its 1956-57 season has apparently taken that idea into consideration. It has added one more attraction to its list and it is undertaking to relate its program more closely to those of other organizations in the city. It has also decided that it can and should provide top quality.

AT SEVERAL TIMES in the past the Civic appeared to have mistaken its function for the moment. This happens occasionally to all promoters of the Fine Arts in America when they become preoccupied with trying to anticipate the taste of the public in the hope of building up attendance. Here again the test should not be a quantitative one. It is highly desirable to reach as many people as possible; but if this is done by adopting the standards of the entertainment theater then the whole reason-for-being of institutions promoting the fine arts has been subverted.

Stuart Chambers, who is now serving as executive director of the St. Louis Civic Music League, says that the emphasis will always be placed on artistic excellence in all future operations. The best artists available within budgetary limits will be engaged and they, or their managers, will be informed that the programs performed should be suitable for a city with a long musical history.

The artists selected for next season are: Jerome Hines, baritone, Leonard Pennario, pianist, Roberta Peters, soprano, Joseph Szigeti, violinist, the Vienna Choir Boys and the Ballet Theatre. All of these artists or ensembles belong in the top bracket of excellence of each category, with the possible exception of Leonard Pennario.

I DO NOT MEAN to suggest that Pennario is an inferior artist. He has the virtues of highly talented youth— an immaculate technique, brilliance and vitality in projection, and an unshakable confidence. He is a "comer" perhaps, but he hasn't arrived at the point where his interpretative qualities are equal to the best music. But if he is not in the first category he is a serious artist who deserves a chance to develop.

Roberta Peters on the other hand offers the magic of youth as a strictly incidental benefit, for she is one of the most extraordinarily gifted singers of her generation. No soprano of recent times has had such an affecting vocal timbre; and from all indications her temperament and insight will bring her quite rapidly to a state of artistic maturity.

JOSEPH SZIGETI has long enjoyed a reputation as a musician's musician. If in tone quality or purely mechanical dexterity he is not the peer of Heifetz or several others, he is an interpreter of the first rank with an understanding that makes him authoritative in the whole violin repertory. Jerome Hines is still a young man but his rich and powerful baritone voice together with a commanding stature and style has already elevated him to star roles at the Metropolitan Opera. He recently sang the name part of "Boris Goudonoff." Both the Ballet Theatre and the Vienna Choir Boys have appeared often in St. Louis.

The Civic Music League justifiably considers itself one of the focal points of city's musical life. It was formed in 1924 and though associated with the national Civic Music League it does not operate on the same basis as the leagues in other cities. It chooses its artists from the lists of any and all managements and it sells reserve seats.

In the past the Civic has been responsible for the first appearance in St. Louis of many world famous artists. Fame and artistic quality are usually synonymous, but not always, so it is gratifying to know that Civic has given renewed thought to what its policy should be and that the first consideration will be given to quality rather than drawing power. Fortunately, first quality never goes unrewarded for long.

A musical drama, "song of Freedom," honoring the martyrs of the Warsaw ghetto uprising against the Nazis in April, 1943 will be produced at the B'nai Amoona Synagogue, Trinity and Washington avenues, at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. Moses J. Silverman, Chicago cantor, will be featured.

Melodrama, 'Anastasia' Is Based on Real-Life Enigma

THE melodrama, "Anastasia," which comes to the American Theater Monday, April 16, for a week's run, with the original stars, Viveca Lindfors and Eugenie Leontovich, is based on the real life enigma of the Grand Duchess Anastasia, youngest daughter of the last Romanoff Czar, Nicholas II.

In 1917, the Russian royal family, including Anastasia, then emerging from girlhood, was sent by the revolutionary Kerensky government to Siberia. On July 17, 1918, at the town of Ekaterinburg, the family, their doctor and servants were taken to the cellar of their house by soldiers, shot down, bayoneted, and pounded with rifle butts. The bodies were burned in an empty mine.

BUT LATER a young woman claiming to be Anastasia appeared in Berlin. She said that after being wounded she was carried off by a young guard named Chaikovski who later married her. He took her to Bucharest, but was assassinated there by the Bolsheviks. In Berlin she tried to drown herself in a canal, but was rescued and placed in a mental institute for two years. It was on her release that the play takes up its fictional plot of intrigue. The melodrama adapted by Guy Bolton from the French of Marcelle Maurette, has Anastasia (Miss Lindfors) picked up by an ex-Russian general who, not knowing her real identity, coaches her as an imposter claiming to be Anastasia, in a plot to acquire Anastasia's huge inheritance deposited abroad. She is brought to the former Dowager Empress (Miss Leontovich) who at first coldly rejects her. But the girl recalls so many details of her past life in which she was not coached that her grandmother breaks down and kisses her hand.

ACTUALLY the real claimant was taken to the home of the Berlin police commissioner in 1922 and there he tried to establish her identity as Anastasia by introducing her to exiled Russian royalty. Some of them said they recognized her, but later withdrew the identifications in the struggle over the right to the Romanoff monies. Her enemies branded her a Polish woman with delusions of grandeur. In 1928, the claimant was invited to America as the guest of Princess Xenia, niece of the Czar, who had become Mrs. William Leeds of Oyster Bay, Long Island.

THREE YEARS later Anastasia was sent back to a German sanitarium. Upon release, she moved to an apartment in Hanover. When the play became a success, she was reported living in humble circumstances in a former army barracks near Stuttgart, on a $30 monthly allowance from the Red Cross. The producers of "Anastasia" obtained clearance from her by guaranteeing her play royalties said to be $12,000 and a small share of the movie sale. The film rights were sold to Twentieth-Century Fox for $450,000.

The play ran 270 performances (34 weeks) on Broadway before closing last September to tour.

There will be three matinees for the stay of the play at the American — Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, April 22.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

CAROUSEL—The Rodgers and Hammerstein musical stage success about a carnival bully who dies in a holdup but is sent down from heaven for one day to be redeemed by love has been given a faithful screen translation with a very good cast, headed by Gordon MacRae, newcomer Shirley Jones, Robert Rounseville, Barbara Ruick, and Cameron Mitchell. The CinemaScope 55 introduced here is brilliantly lucid most of the time, but there also are some badly lit outdoor scenes. This inconsistency follows in the staging—they can't make up their mind between theatricalism and realism. ST. LOUIS.

THE SEA SHALL NOT HAVE THEM—A fairly absorbing account of the rescue of four suffering flyers in a rubber raft on the English channel, going into the play of personalities aboard the searching launch, the life raft and at headquarters as fog, darkness, rain and foulups prolong the tension. With Michael Redgrave, Dirk Bogarde, Nigel Patrick, Anthony Steel. PAGEANT.

MIRACLE IN THE RAIN—Well, of all people, Ben Hecht, the professional cynic, writes a tear-jerker that outdoes any soap-opera in the lachrymose department. The characters are trite, the dialogue is a determined string of cliches, and it's pretty drab. With Jane Wyman as a plain Jane and Van Johnson as her soldier lover who is killed. FOX.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT—Producer-Director-Writer Robert Rossen has spread the story of the mighty Macedonian conqueror over a vast CinemaScope canvas, beautifully photographed by Robert Krasker. It has some noble dialogue and always keeps Alexander, fierily played by Richard Burton, in intimate focus. Fredric March is Philip and Claire Bloom a lovely Barsine. LOEW'S STATE.

SAMURAI—The recent Academy Award winner for best foreign film is another highly artistic Japanese work with lovely exotic Eastman color and some finely composed scenes. Violence in the time of the medieval feudal wars, with a strong moral motif. SHADY OAK.

THE ROSE TATTOO—Anna Magnani in her volcanic Oscar-winning performance as a Gulf Coast widow morbidly idolizing the memory of her husband. Daniel Mann has directed a realistically, sleazy, lusty comedy-drama from Tennessee Williams's play. MISSOURI.

MARTY—The touching little story of a lonely Bronx butcher who finds beauty in a plain school teacher has been brought back to celebrate its winning Oscars for best film, best male performance, direction and screenplay. With Ernest Borgnine. Also, SUMMERTIME, return playing of the Katharine Hepburn film in which a spinster finds romance in a gorgeously photographed Venice. ORPHEUM.

DOCTOR AT SEA—This sequel to "Doctor in the House," also starring Dirk Bogarde, is a jolly nautical romp. RICHMOND.

Moving Performance In 'Mister Johnson'

By Walter F. Kerr

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 7.

THE production that has been fashioned by Dramatist Norman Rosten and Director Robert Lewis from Joyce Cary's "Mister Johnson" has two very substantial virtues. One of them is the performance that Earle Hyman is giving as Mister Johnson himself.

Johnson, as admirers of the novel will remember, is a winning, wool-gathering, bumptiously cheerful native boy stranded in a cultural no-man's land. He has come far enough out of the Nigerian jungle to be proud of his "civilized" shoes, but not far enough to wear them on his feet: they are usually looped about his neck on a string. Though he spends his days getting the accounts wrong in a British government office, he slips off at night to sleep in a familiar grass hut. The girl he wants to marry has a fiercely protective brother who wears no more than a loin cloth and carries a spear; but he wants to marry her "Christian," fit her into a store-bought dress and send her calling of an afternoon on his superior's wife. In his sublime innocence, he is perfectly willing to straddle two worlds, confident that his open-heartedness will be understood and returned; but neither world is understanding enough, neither will give him a footing.

Earle Hyman puts the bubbling high spirits, and that bewildered premonition of disaster, into a single, mobile, swiftly touching image. With his arms stretched high and his eyes blinking with joy, he seems to be shouting an eternal welcome to the grasping, rule-ridden, sometimes merely aimless universe about him.

BUT WHEN HIS HOPES are confounded—when a man he admires fires him, when his wife steals back to her people, when he dazedly discovers that the knife in his hand has just come out of a man's back—the descent into the abyss is never gradual. It is as though the ground had opened beneath Mister Johnson's feet and his joy had been swallowed up while it was still trying to be heard.

Beneath the infectious enthusiasm that keeps him stamping his feet, bobbing his head, and delightedly charging at what to other men seem obstacles, Mr. Hyman has laid a groundwork of expected disenchantment. Johnson's heart can be broken in a hury because heartbreak is a response to something—and Johnson responds to everything, instantly, wholly, with every quivering nerve. Despair is expressed as quickly and openly as exhilaration, and Mr. Hyman is apt to move you very deeply as he wrings his hands during an abandoned confession or passionately insists that he be executed by his very best friend. Exultation and hopeless anguish can seem the lightning-like responses of the same simple soul because the soul is utterly alive, absolutely direct, entirely without emotional or social guile. It is a beautiful job of acting.

THE EVENING is additionally dignified by the clean, controlled, sculpture stroke style in which Mr. Rosten has excerpted dozens of passages from the narrative and in which Mr. Lewis has—with a simultaneous firmness and color—fitted them to the handsome and flexible William and Jean Eckart settings. The director does not neglect the story's brilliantly bizarre background: an enormous mask looms against the night sky as signal for a frenzied wedding festival, battalions of natives hurl themselves again and again into rousing tribal patterns.

Yet there is never any suggestion of exploitation, of musical-comedy extravaganza, about these vigorous eruptions. They have an economy of their own, they belong to the peculiar tug-of-war in which Mister Johnson is the loser, and they strike — in effect — great constant chords of doom.

THE PERFORMANCES—and the physical production are just about perfect. What is not perfect about "Mister Johnson" is its dramatic lifeline, that sometimes invisible thread that slips in and out among as many scenes as you care to name, catches all of them up in its purposeful weaving, and grows tighter and tighter as the play moves to its end. "Mister Johnson" is without tension, without a specifically dramatic impulse.

There is endless variety in "Mr. Johnson"; Nigeria and Britain are looked at in every conceivable perspective. But there is never a scene we are looking forward to. If both hope and apprehension exist in the electric temperament of the principal character, they are never really stirred in us. We watch with interest as the same troubling point is made in a great many different ways, but we cannot anticipate the precise danger we are to fear or the precise happiness we may dare to hope for.

Mr. Rosten—and in this he is a bit like Mr. Cary—has not quite caught the trick of making us anticipate the battlefield, or of creating great and terrifying expectations.

Capes for Spring

Capes continue to be emphasized as a feature of double-duty spring costumes. Dresses made of cotton tweed have low necklines and brief sleeves while the matching capes provide the "cover-up" theme. Many of the capes are lined with white or a bright shade. Navy blue wool sheath dresses also add detachable taffeta capes.

'Inherit the Wind' Film Sale—$200,000 Down

HOLLYWOOD—Motion picture rights to the stage success "Inherit the Wind" now belong to Stanley Kramer, independent producer-director associated with United Artists. The producer is understood to have made a down payment of $200,000 to the authors, Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee. They also will participate in prospective profits from the film.

The sale's terms stipulate the picture cannot go into distribution until March, 1958. Actually, Kramer won't get around to filming the drama until next year.

"Inherit the Wind," which brought Paul Muni back to Broadway after a prolonged absence, is based on the trial in Tennessee in 1925 of John T. Scopes for having discussed the Darwin theory of evolution in the classroom. Clarence Darrow was the teacher's attorney and William Jennings Bryan appeared for the prosecution in the classic contest.

Sports Jacket

A novel sports jacket made of a bold black and white plaid cotton has a standing collar and bell-shaped sleeves that are set into deep armholes at an elongated shoulder line. The coat is lined with white cotton satin. Another jacket that is knee-length and has an oriental emphasis is made of black sailcloth accented with white.

Television in Review

Katharine Cornell's Debut

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, April 7.

"THE Barretts of Wimpole Street, by Rudolf Besier, was Katharine Cornell's first venture into the rough seas of the role of actress-manager in 1931, and it was, of course, a triumphant success that ran on and on for years. Others have played the role of Elizabeth Barrett who became Mrs. Robert Browning, but the part has remained peculiarly hers and she has been identified with it more closely than all her other roles.

Well, 25 years have elapsed; much water and much Freud have passed under the bridge since then and still it was altogether fitting that Katharine Cornell should make her television debut in it the other night on "Producer's Showcase." This hour and a half version in color was thoroughly absorbing and highly unusual television.

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street" is steeped in the nineteenth century to a degree that is almost inconceivable to us Twentieth Century freethinkers. Even by nineteenth-century standards, the Barrett household must have been a strange one, dominated and tyrannized by the brutal, inflexible, pious hypocrite of a father, Edward Barrett, who tried at all costs to prevent love from entering into the lives of any of his 11 children.

IF MEMORY SERVES, psychosomatic medicine had scarcely been heard of when Besier wrote the play in the early 1930s, certainly it hadn't been heard of in 1845 when the action took place. Still, there was quite a lot of it in this play. It was never quite clear to me in the play what had struck Elizabeth Barrett down in the first place, but it was unquestionably the effect of love and a renewed will to live which made her well again.

Psychiatry comes out even more openly at the very end of the play when Barrett's attitude toward his daughter changes from merely peculiar to undisguisedly unnatural: Says Miss Barrett to her maid afterward: "Wilson, things have passed between my father and me which force me to leave this house at once. Until today I have never really known him. He's not like other men—he's dreadfully different. I—I can't say any more." Strong words for the mid-nineteenth century.

MISS CORNELL HAS, of course, played the role many times and it is not surprising that she brings to it a force and clarity and cleanness of line that you don't see too often, especially on television. There was very little waste motion in her portrayal which made her passion shine through all the more vividly. Miss Cornell is not really young enough for the part any more but somehow, after a minute or two, it didn't matter.

KATHARINE CORNELL . . . MUCH FREUD HAS PASSED UNDER THE BRIDGE.

The role of Edward Barrett has always been one of the juiciest plums around, and Henry Daniell had a field day as the arrogant unbending master of the house. As Robert Browning, Anthony Quayle had a role that is not nearly so rewarding but in some ways more difficult. Into his mouth the author thrust some of the longest and most measured Victorian sentences an actor ever had to mouthe:

"Forgive me, but I won't be silent any longer. Even before I met you I was aware that sickness wasn't the only shadow in your life. All these months, even though you never breathed a syllable of complaint, I felt that other shadow deepening, and I've stood by and looked on and said nothing." And so on. In fact, one of the great charms of the play to me is the formality and richness of its dialogue. After so much colloquialism, a decently constructed sentence is a joy to listen to.

IT WAS ALTOGETHER a rewarding hour and half. An estimated audience of 28,000,000 people saw the play, which is about 14 times as many as saw Miss Cornell play it on Broadway (both times), on the road and overseas. After the play was over, the technical crew burst into spontaneous applause for Miss Cornell, something that had never before happened on "Producer's Showcase."

Recipes for Frosting on 'Gooey' Side

By Edith M. Barber

A CALL for help from a brand-new cook. She would like recipes for "gooey" frosting. That is the way her young husband describes the cake topping he likes.

Achording to her, she can turn out very good cake from the mixes that are available. She has tried the packaged frostings and likes them, herself, but they do not quite meet her husband's standards. We shall just have to see what we can do about it.

An easy one to make is what is often known as a butter frosting, although margarine may be used. This calls for the use of sifted confectionery sugar with the addition of an egg yolk and a little milk. By increasing the amount of this the frosting will be as soft you like.

Variations in flavor may be easily made by substituting orange juice for the milk and grated orange rind for the vanilla extract. Melted chocolate may be added. The confectioners' sugar may be replaced by brown sugar.

Another very quick frosting that calls for a little cooking, is a mixture of sweetened condensed milk with melted chocolate. This may be flavored with instant coffee if you like. A chocolate frosting is best in my opinion with white or yellow cake. The butter frosting may be used with either of these cakes and also with a devil's food.

BUTTER FROSTING: Half a stick butter or margarine, one-fourth teaspoon salt, 2½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar, one teaspoon vanilla extract, one egg yolk, about three tablespoons milk.

Cream butter or margarine. Stir in salt and half the sugar gradually, blending well after each addition. Add vanilla extract. Beat in egg yolk. Stir in milk alternately with remaining sugar. Yield: Frosting for two nine-inch layers or two dozen cup cakes.

QUICK CHOCOLATE FROSTING: Three squares chocolate, 1½ (one can) sweetened condensed milk, one tablespoon coffee.

Melt chocolate in double boiler. Add condensed milk slowly, stirring constantly over boiling water about five minutes, until mixture thickens. Add coffee, beat well and spread. Yield: Frosting for two nine-inch layers or two dozen cup cakes.

Social Error? Doing Good Unto Others

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

WHAT do you think of a person who is always inviting almost total strangers to her house for dinner and at Christmas time will invite a couple of elderly people, go get them and take them home? Her husband says if this makes her happy it's OK with him. She particularly likes to find out if someone is alone in the world and then tries to help. One day we went to a store and she was buying a gift for a girl friend of her daughter-in-law who was moving into a new home. The salesgirl was nice to her and now she found out the salesgirl is getting married in May and is making a gift for her. We think this is rather odd and we are thinking of treating her a little cool. We all belong to a club that meets once a month. She works all the time and does her own housework. Her husband works nights and she rushes home from work, eats, goes to bed, sleeps four or five hours then is up fixing a hot dinner for her husband who is home after midnight. It's silly of her to be so concerned about unfortunates, old people and animals. She is always laughing and cutting up. Her husband trusts her, she says, and I know she's true blue, but she does perk up when there's a man around. Shall we look upon her as "slightly teched" or include her in our club plans or gently push her out? She is a poor bridge player and is always rattling on about something. H.J.

This world is in a pretty sad state of affairs if someone who is generous and kind and gay—and a little different—is looked upon as "slightly teched" and pushed out of her circle of friends because they are embarrassed by her. What's so "silly" about being concerned for others—even strangers—and inviting lonely and forgotten people to your home for dinner? I think it's wonderful that she would take the trouble. One of the tragedies of our times is that we're afraid to be different. We go along in our smooth, self-centered ways, not even thinking about others. I can understand why a poor bridge player would irritate more expert players, but it seems to me that even though the club suffers from her mistakes at the table, it could gain from her good heart and her spirit of kindness.

Dear Martha:

● MY HUSBAND CALLS ME at a certain time every day and if I'm not home he fumes. I have rushed home just to catch his telephone call. I know he isn't grown up but how do you straighten him out? Telling him in advance I won't be home doesn't work and having five children I don't always know in advance. I've seen him act almost insane after he has tried several times with no answer. Have you any suggestions? WORRIED.

If you keep on rushing home from an important errand, out of breath and scared to death, he'll keep right on making you feel like a slave and without the right to set foot outside the door. I'm afraid you'll just have to let him blow his top once in awhile and maybe he'll get over it. Tell him firmly that you cannot always promise to be at home because you have errands to do. You might try telephoning him before you leave the house. It's too bad to have to give in that much to his juvenile behavior but it would save you the frenzied trip back and the fear you'll be suffering the whole time you are gone.

Dear Martha:

● I HAVE BEEN GOING for some time with a man who just doesn't seem to like to tell the truth even about things that aren't too important. He is also evasive about his past family life. He says he is 43 and yet when I asked if he had ever been examined for service in World War II he became upset and refused to answer. What do you suppose is behind all this. Doesn't it sound like a bad marriage risk? Or is he ashamed of something. WAITING.

If he didn't serve in World War II he might be reluctant to tell you but it sounds like a far more serious problem than that. Mutual trust is as vital to a good marriage as mutual love and respect and without that, you are off to a poor start. No man who is evasive and constantly untruthful, even about trivial matters, is a good risk.

Dear Martha:

● FOR ABOUT TWO YEARS I went with a fellow and he wanted to get married but I refused because he never had a good paying job. So we broke up and five months later he got married. I never was so hurt in my life. Now I am just lost. I was always with him and now I don't know any other boys. Is there some kind of club I could join? Please tell me right away because I am about to lose my mind. READER.

First of all, even though you are hurt, just be grateful that you didn't go ahead and marry someone who you felt could not support you and with whom life might well have been a constant struggle. You were right to refuse, at least until he did have a job that would provide a fair living for you both and prospects of advancement in the future. Now, put that hurt behind you and get out to meet other boys and girls. There are many clubs in the St. Louis area for young adults. Just send along a self-addressed stamped envelope with your request and I'll be glad to mail one to you.

Dear Martha:

● SHOULDN'T MAIL always be delivered to the place where you're living, no matter how many times you move? My husband doesn't think so. We have been married more than a year and he still refuses to change his mail address from his parents' home. We never did live with them. His excuse is that we aren't settled yet. Do you think this is fair? What can I do? WONDERING.

He may think he has a good excuse but it's certainly inconvenient having to go to his parents' home every day to pick up the mail. Naturally, if you're traveling a great deal or moving every few weeks, it would be best to have a permanent mailing address, but if you have your own home, even if you hope to move within the next year or so, I see no reason not to have the mail delivered there.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your questions. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer problems of a medical or legal nature.

Favorite Fashion Themes for the New Season

Cape Costumes and Full-Length Coats With Co-ordinated Silk Dresses Are Among Summer Leaders

By Sylvia Stiles

NOW that the Easter fashion parade has passed from view, designers may point with pride to certain themes that definitely are established as leaders for the spring and summer seasons. Topping the list of favorites, as evidenced by their popularity in this annual parade are cape costumes, full-length coats with co-ordinated printed silk dresses, jacket dresses, and new versions of the sheath dress.

Foremost among the themes to win success thus far this season and scheduled for increased popularity the next few months is the shoulder cape. It takes the place of a jacket and serves to give a costume the completeness that is required of a wardrobe chosen by any well-dressed women. The cape is also a flattering idea, becoming to the youthful as well as the mature woman and looking as attractive when worn by the fuller figure as by the very slender one. Smarter than the stole and more comfortable for warm weather than the fitted jacket, the cape has won a place of distinction among the current style themes.

Although some women look upon the coat and dress ensemble as an extravagant idea to be indorsed only by those with a substantial clothes budget, others recognize it as a versatile and practical mode. No one can deny that this carefully co-ordinated costume is an impressive one for many occasions. Also, by careful planning and shopping each item may be co-ordinated with others and form the basis of a complete warm-weather wardrobe. The printed silks are especially attractive now with their all-over floral motifs or small, geometric designs while the fabrics of which the coats are made have a lightness that assures their comfort during the next few months.

Any woman who has invested in a silk suit will tell you that there is no purchase that equals it in satisfaction over a long period of time. Both the skirt and jacket type and the one consisting of dress and jacket may well be considered as a "must" in a wardrobe. Whether the choice is black or navy depends on the accessories with which it is to be worn as well as on its becomingness. This is definitely a navy-blue season, but the black silk suit never fails to receive the indorsement of the "best-dressed" group of any city. If a woman hasn't one of these costumes in her wardrobe, now is the time to shop carefully for a model when stocks are complete and prices tempting.

The sheath dress has received so much attention during the last few months that there is little more to be said in its favor. Practically every woman likes the sleek-fitting sheath that requires no belt and shows off a good figure. Even the figures that aren't so perfect look well when the sheath is carefully fitted and when there are floating panels or cleverly concealed pleats to provide a certain hemline fullness. Fabric of which the slim dress is made isn't so important because it looks well of many materials. What does distinguish it at this time is its decoration and its color. Prettiest sheaths for late spring wear add white collars and cuffs, introduce novel trimming in the form of buttons or bows, and give the silhouette a back emphasis.

Whatever the preferred costume for this time of year, the wise shopper is careful to consider co-ordination of capes, boleros and peplum jackets to give it the effect of a complete ensemble. If the coat and dress costume is the basis of her wardrobe, she takes a hint from leading American designers and chooses a shade that has possibilities for further co-ordination. One of those shirtwaist dresses, for example, or a full-skirted checked taffeta may become the most impressive item in a wardrobe when co-ordinated with a blending coat or jacket.

Adele Simpson, recognized as an outstanding interpreter of the type of fashions that fit into a busy woman's schedule, always gives her indorsement to complete ensembles. These may consist of full-length coats and dresses, or brief jacket modes. A new Lesur fabric called Jerdy that is a blend of silk and wool is used for a slim coat to be worn as a handsome but basic wrap. It is allied with a silk printed dress, the silk also being used for the coat lining. The neckline and skirt that is slender but has hidden pleats for ease in walking are among the distinguishing features of the dress. The coat's lower neckline, deeper armholes, and shorter sleeves are significant trends. Noteworthy, too, as a costume to wear indefinitely and for many occasions, is her slim-skirted silk suit. Tiny self fabric bows just below the nipped-in waistline are its only trimming. At the neckline, a white silk organza scarf repeats the bow trimming. Worn with one of the larger, brimmed hats that are garlanded with flowers, the suit goes from spring to summer—and is equally attractive for the first warm days of autumn.

Ben Reig is another of the American couturier group who knows how to create a two-piece suit or a dress and cape ensemble for a maximum of service. His two-piece suits of Italian silk are tailored but so handsome in silhouette and material that they go from business to evening engagements with assurance. The Branell cape and dress combinations offers another suggestion for late spring wear in St. Louis.

GINGHAM CHECKS RETURNED TO POPULARITY THIS SEASON, AS SEEN IN THIS FULL-SKIRTED TAFFETA DRESS BY MOLLIE PARNIS.

WOOL AND SILK ARE COMBINED IN THE DESIGN OF A HANDSOME ENSEMBLE THAT ADELE SIMPSON DESIGNED FOR LATE SPRING AND SUMMER.

Marilyn Monroe Film For Warner Bros.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — 20th Century-Fox is going to have to share Marilyn Monroe with Warner Bros. The latter company will distribute the star's first independent production, "The Sleeping Prince," Jack L. Warner, vice president, has announced. The picture is to be made this summer in England by Marilyn Monroe Productions, with Sir Laurence Olivier as co-star, director and co-producer. It is understood that the deal calls for Warners to provide the production financing.

At present Miss Monroe is preparing to start work in "Bus Stop," first of four pictures she is committed to appear in for Fox during the next seven years. Don Murray, 22-year-old newcomer from the stage has been signed for the lead opposite Miss Monroe in "Bus Stop."

Warner displayed less excitement over the sale of the studio's backlog of pre-1948 movies to television for $21,000,000 which also was completed recently. The company, could, of course, make as much from "The Sleeping Prince" should it turn out to be a blockbuster.

What is a dried-up wrinkled prune—but a smooth, firm-skinned plum with its moisture removed!

REPLACE MOISTURIZING OILS IN YOUR SKIN WITH AMAZING Lanolin Plus LIQUID!

Unlike Other Beauty Lotions, This Exclusive Formula is Closest to Natural Skin Oils

Chemists have discovered that lubricants which give softness and pliability to the skin diminish with age. Therefore, Lanolin Plus Liquid (recommended for all women over 25) contains whole lanolin and other beneficial ingredients to counteract skin dryness. This exclusive formula refurbishes natural oils—gives skin a far more youthful look.

Do you know that your skin is robbed of its natural oils every day? Soap does it ...water, sun and wind do it. And when that moisture isn't replaced, your skin is on its way to tiny dry lines, crow's feet and wrinkles.

Replaces Natural Oils

That's why it is so necessary to give your skin regular care with this exclusive formula that replaces natural oils. Lanolin Plus Liquid is made with the heart of lanolin—whole, pure, absorbable lanolin—the scientist's first choice for complexion care because it's so close to Nature's own oils, esters and sterols. Liquefied for easy use, its penetrating action gets natural moisturizing oils down under the skin where they do the most good—softens dry, moisture-starved skin, makes it lovelier no matter how parched and dry-looking.

Works While You Sleep

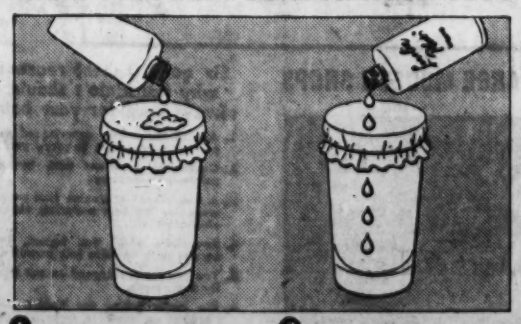
The results you get overnight when you use golden Lanolin Plus Liquid are astounding. Tonight, for example, smooth on a few drops of this lanolin-specialized liquid. Then, in the morning, run your hand over your face.

Skin Dryness Gone

Not only will your skin look lovelier than ever but every trace of skin dryness will be gone. You'll be overjoyed with the clean, fresh look and feel of your skin. You'll love its soft, silky texture, its glowing color. And you'll see, too, how Lanolin Plus Liquid rewards by helping to smooth wrinkles and crow's feet which have formed because of dryness.

Get exclusive-formula Lanolin Plus Liquid today, wherever cosmetics are sold. Only $1 plus tax.

MAKE THIS EASY PENETRATION TEST



1 Pour a small quantity of your present skin lotion said to contain lanolin on a handkerchief (or a piece of cotton) stretched over a jar. Nothing happens! The lotion turns into heavy lumpy wax ... stays on top ... never penetrates the fabric.

2 Now pour an equal quantity of Exclusive-formula Lanolin Plus Liquid on a similar handkerchief (or a piece of cotton) stretched over a second jar. See how quickly this liquid penetrates the fiber ... goes down into the jar instantly.

Proof that Exclusive-formula LANOLIN PLUS LIQUID will soak through outer layers of skin to replace natural oils down underneath where they do the most good.

OVERNIGHT— softer, younger-looking skin!

IT'S THE PLUS IN Lanolin Plus, THAT MAKES THE DIFFERENCE.

Housewife's Problem in Laundering

By Dorothy Brainerd

APPARENTLY Mrs. O. of Neosho, Mo., has been making one of the most common mistakes in the field of home laundering.

She writes: "I have a washing machine which has given satisfactory service for sometime. But lately the white shirts and sheets have been coming out with a yellow cast, or occasionally a yellow streak.

"I have used several different brands of detergents and soaps, and the last two times I did the wash I added borax to the water and detergent, but the clothes still are not bright and white. Have you any idea what might cause this?"

My guess is that your difficulty arises from using "several different detergents and soaps." Many homemakers do not understand that soap and detergent just won't mix happily.

I would suggest that you put the machine through a complete cycle, using only clear water to which you have added water softener, in order to remove any lingering bits of soap or detergent which was used in the last washing.

You might also condition the clothes and linens by putting them through a wash cycle with hot water and one cup of water softener, but no detergent. If the discoloration is caused by soap deposits the water softener will soften them and cut them out.

Then decide which type of washing agent you wish to use —soap or detergent—and stick to one kind.

PERHAPS some expert in Italian cooking can come to the aid of Mrs. C. A. G., either confirming the suggestion made below or offering a better one.

Mrs. G. asked if we could tell her the secret of "toasted Ravioli, explaining that she had enjoyed it in several Italian restaurants but had been unable to duplicate it at home. She had tried "at least six different ideas, starting with frozen Ravioli, boiling it, then sprinkling with Parmesan cheese and toasting under the broiler.

"But the cheese doesn't stick and it becomes too crisp. That in the restaurants is a rich brown; mine is more or less spotted and although we enjoy it I would like to know the really right way to do it," she explains.

A search of Italian cook books failed to provide the answer, so we wrote Marguerite Gustafson, home service director of the American Dairy Association. Because of the Association's extensive work with cheese, we thought they might have the answer.

Here is Miss Gustafson's reply: "We have been trying to get some information on 'toasted Ravioli' without too much success.

"The suggestion we found which seems to be the closest would be deep frying the Ravioli after it has been boiled. It could be dipped into beaten egg, then into a mixture of grated Parmesan cheese and bread or cracker crumbs. After this, it might be deep fried in hot fat. The Italian cooks we have talked to about this haven't tried it, but they seem to think that it is the way it would be done."

With the current interest in Italian cooking, perhaps someone may have the answer for Mrs. G. At least we hope so.

IF YOU have always longed for a mural wall covering but felt that it was far out of your price range, you may be interested to know that there is now one on the market which retails for around $30.

Each mural, with four panels to the set, covers a running wall space of eleven feet. Because each strip is 30 inches by 49 inches and therefore easy to hang, it can be cut out and applied to the wall by do-it-yourselfers without difficulty. If so desired, it may later be peeled off and taken to another house or apartment.

The wall coverings are hand-printed in oils on canvas, are washable, and come in French, American farm, tropical and floral motifs.

WE ARE GLAD to be able to reassure Mrs. D. G. S. on a point which confuses many homemakers.

"We recently purchased wall-to-wall carpeting," she explains. "I have heard that using remnants on top of carpeting cuts the fibers. The store where we purchased the carpeting said this was a fallacy.

"I would like to do this in order to protect heavy traffic lanes from soil and wear, but I certainly don't want to damage the carpet since it was quite expensive. Can you set me straight on this?"

Because this is such a controversial question we wanted to be in a position to give an authentic answer, rather than just our opinion, so we asked the Carpet Institute, Inc., to give us a definite statement.

Here it is: "It is our opinion that the runners will do no appreciable harm to the wall-to-wall carpeting underneath."

From personal experience we add that you will find they do affect a great saving from soil when placed at strategic spots.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Ginger Rogers May Be Tripled in Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In Ginger Rogers' next picture, she may either direct and play one sister of a singing trio or else forget about the directing and play all three sisters.

Ginger is still undecided what she will do but it looks like the direction debut will get the nod.

She admits that she has had the yen to direct for some time.

"I have directed a few unofficially in my time," she says with a wink that adds: what feminine star hasn't?

The story concerns three sisters who have a top singing act.

The singing numbers would be done easily by multiple recording a la Les Paul and Mary Ford. Split screen and optical printing of the film could take care of Ginger Rogers playing a trio. She would just have to do any scene involving all three sisters three times, doing each sister in rotation. Part of the camera lens would be blocked and then all three sets of film would be printed on a single film.

Yul Brynner to Direct

HOLLYWOOD — Paramount has agreed to give Yul Brynner his chance to direct as well as star in a picture. No story has been decided upon. The studio's editorial department will assist Brynner in finding a suitable property and it will carry on the search when he goes to Europe next month to co-star with Ingrid Bergman for 20th Century-Fox in "Anastasia." After completing his long stage run in "The King and I," the actor went into "The Ten Commandments" for Paramount and informed studio executives he would like some day to concentrate on directing.

'Story of Mankind'

HOLLYWOOD — "The Story of Mankind" is nearing the photography stage after more than a year of preparation. Irwin Allen, the director-producer, now expects to have the cameras rolling by mid-June. Only two actors, representing man and woman through the ages, will participate in the screen play taken from the Hendrik Van Loon book. Sequences of the picture, expected to require another two years to complete, are scheduled to be filmed in some 18 countries. Invitations have been mailed out by the Warner Brothers Studios, which is underwriting the project, to several prominent historians, theologians and philosophers. They have been asked to sit as an advisory board for the production. Allen began his explorations of the universe with "The Sea Around Us," which he made for R.K.O. in 1953.

Ava Gardner Set For 'The Little Hut'

HOLLYWOOD—Ava Gardner is set, as things stand at the moment, to star in "The Little Hut." F. Hugh Herbert, author of the screen adaptation, and Mark Robson, the director, will make the picture in partnership with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Negotiations have progressed to the point, it was learned, where all that remains now is the signing of contracts. Until that last detail is completed, however, a formal deal does not exist. Whether Miss Gardner, who has been living in Spain, would come here for the film remains to be decided. Herbert said today that it doesn't "matter much where we make the film because 75 per cent of the action is on a desert island." The play was done on Broadway in 1953.

'Saint of Bleeker Street' At Washington U.

The first local performance of Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Saint of Bleeker Street," will be presented by the Washington University Opera Workshop at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. next Sunday in Brown Hall auditorium on the campus.

The three-day musical drama was produced on Broadway in December, 1954, and, although a financial failure, was a critical success.

The production is in co-operation with the St. Louis Grand Opera Guild. Dorothy Ziegler will conduct the 40-piece orchestra.

Singing the leading role of Annina will be Carolee Coombs on Friday, Ann Blout on Saturday and Evelyn Coffey on Sunday. Jay Willoughby will sing Michele on all nights. The role of Desideria will be done by Ruth Pohlmann Friday and Saturday and by Rosalyn Wykes on Sunday.

'Fool Killer'

HOLLYWOOD — "The Fool Killer," a novel by Helen Eustis published two years ago, has been bought for filming by Metro Goldwyn-Mayer. The studio also purchased a television adaptation of the book written by Dale Wasserman. The story concerns a mentally ill former soldier who joins up with a runaway boy and attempts to kill a couple who later befriend the lad. . . .

Hope Lange, television and stage actress, will make her movie bow in "Bus Stop." She will play a teen-age waitress in a cafe in the film starring Marilyn Monroe. . . . Julie London, the singer, will have a featured role in "The Great man," which Jose Ferrer will star in and direct for Universal.

Fables of the Famous

By E. E. Edgar

NICKNAME: William Jennings Bryan, three-time loser as a presidential candidate, entered politics at an early age. His fiery eloquence marked him as a young man with a future. He was aware, however, of his tendency to be somewhat long-winded.

Once, at a political rally, he was introduced by the chairman as "The Boy Wonder of the Platte." Bryan winced.

"Please don't refer to me in those words again," he said.

"But I meant them as a compliment, I assure you," said the chairman.

"I know," replied Bryan, "but they can be misinterpreted. After all, the Platte is only six inches deep and six miles wide at the mouth."

MUSIC. As a boy, author John Hersey studied the violin. He played the instrument with no particular distinction. After a few years, he discontinued his lessons.

Not long ago, a boyhood chum paid him a visit.

"Do you still play the violin?" he asked.

"No, I gave it up years ago," said Hersey.

"How come? You used to love good music!"

"I still do," said Hersey. "That's why I gave it up."

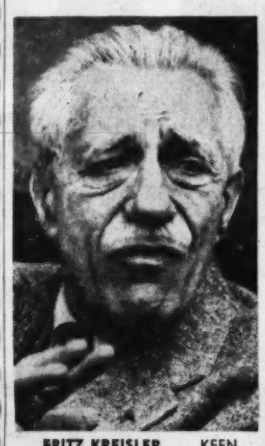
OBLIGING. Violinist Fritz Kreisler's sense of humor supersedes his vanity. One night, when he was dining in a restaurant, a woman walked up to him and said:

"The waiter said that you are Mr. Kreisler. Are you really Mr. Kreisler?"

He admitted that he was.

"Would you let me have your autograph?" she said, placing a pad in front of him.

"Of course," said the violinist,



FRITZ KREISLER . . . KEEN SENSE OF HUMOR.

taking the pen she offered.

He wrote the words, "Sincerely yours." As he was about to affix his signature, she gushed:

"This is a great moment for me. We bought one of your cars recently, and I can't tell you how proud we are to own it."

For a moment, Kreisler paused. But only for a moment. Then, in a firm hand, he wrote, "Walter P. Chrysler," and handed the pad to the grateful woman.

CONTRACT. Playwright Ferenc Molnar was a man who cherished his independence. At one time, before one of his marriages, he insisted upon a pre-nuptial contract which stipulated that he was under no obligation to change his mode of living.

The wedding dinner was held in the bride's home. To her embarrassment and the guests' bewilderment, Molnar arrived late and left soon after, informing her that he had an appointment to play cards.

When she protested, he reminded her of the contract. That was enough for Mrs. Molnar. The contract was not broken, but the marriage was.

CONCESSION. During his years as player and manager, Leo Durocher was consumed with a fierce passion for winning. Each opponent was a personal enemy to whom he gave no quarter and asked none in return.

"Being a relentless competitor has its merits," a reporter said to him once, when Leo was playing shortstop for the Cardinals, "but there should be room for sportsmanship in this game, too. If your own mother were playing for the Cubs and she came around second base heading for third, you would try to trip her up."

"I probably would," admitted Durocher, "but I resent the implication that I'm lacking in sportsmanship. I would pick her up."

MISSING. Author Charles Lamb and a group of fellow writers were discussing the works of Shakespeare. One of the writers, who esteemed himself highly, boasted:

"I could write like Shakespeare if I had a mind to try it."

"I don't doubt it," said Lamb. "Nothing is wanting but the mind."

Ed Wynn and Son Together in Film

HOLLYWOOD — Ed Wynn and his son, Keenan, will appear together on the screen f the first time in "The Gre... Man." Jose Ferrer will star in and direct the Universal picturization of the Al Morgan novel about a television idol whose sadistic nature comes to light after he dies. Ed Wynn last appeared on the screen in "The Chief" for Metro in 1933.

'Billy Budd' Bought

HOLLYWOOD — Movie producers are showing renewed interest in the writings of Herman Melville. 20th Century-Fox has obtained rights to "Billy Budd." The tingling story of conflict between the forces of good and evil as manifested on board H.M.S. Indomitable at sea in 1798, was a dramatic hit on the stage six years ago. The play version was written by Louis O. Coxe and Robert Chapman.

John Huston started the Melville revival on the screen by producing "Moby Dick," to be released this summer. Huston also announced last week that his next picture would be Melville's South Sea adventure, "Typee."

Secrets of Charm

Daily Walk for Beauty

PLAN to walk to your office, your club, the stores, or a card party today. If the distance is too great, walk part way and continue on the bus or take a taxi. The famous Richard Strauss, composer of the operas "Rosen Kavalier" and "Salome" and other great music, during a winter stay in Sicily, daily would tell his chauffeur to drive him to a mountain top. The chauffeur would drive half-way down and the composer would walk to his car.

How do you look when you walk up stairs? Can you keep your body erect? Naver bend the body forward. Stand tall, about two inches from the bottom step with your feet together, knees flexed. Balance your body firmly on the left foot, letting the weight center on the ball of the foot — chin level, chest up, stomach in, coda tucked under.

Lift your right leg from the thigh joint and keeping the knee hinge relaxed, place your entire foot on the middle of the step above, firmly but noiselessly. Next, transfer your weight to the ball of your right foot, and with a gentle assist from the left toe, lift the body upward without fully straightening the right knee. Now, the minute the right thigh is near-parallel to the tread, place the left foot on the next step. Repeat until you've reached the top.

Practice keeping your head erect, shifting your weight from foot to foot without once straightening a knee or wiggling a hip.

Sammy Davis's 'Mr. Wonderful' Not Up to Name

By Walter F. Kerr
New York Herald Tribune
Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch)

NEW YORK, April 7.

SAMMY DAVIS JR., star of the extended new night club act "Mr. Wonderful," which opened at the Broadway Theater recently, does of course, have a fabulous following in the nitery rock 'n roll set. But he is brand new to Broadway and he is—talent or no talent—hard put to live up to the particular hoorah the authors have created for him.

There's the title, to begin with. Mr. Davis has to batter his pork-pie hat pretty feverishly to be as wonderful as the marquee promises before the curtain has gone up. And when it has gone up librettists Joseph Stein and Will Glickman batter him with the celebrity treatment in two further ways. One of them is "he's great but-make-'em wait" dodge.

For a solid act and a half Mr. Davis is pictured as a world beater who just doesn't want to beat the world. No matter how helplessly his backers founder around him, he keeps right on ducking those pay-dirt auditions and what may have been meant as a display of modest diffidence becomes an intolerably delayed "come-on." All this time, mind you, composers Jerry Block, Larry Holofcenter and George Weiss are presumably whetting your appetite by announcing in song after song that the guy is just great.

IT WOULD TAKE EDDIE FOY, Eve Tanguay, Al Jolson and old Joe Jefferson to survive all this preparatory adulation, and Mr. Davis is only Mr. Davis. In itself, that's fine. Whatever this slight, lithe, sleek and everlastingly restless member of the Will Mastin trio does is dynamically done. He juts his lower lip clear across the orchestra pit, closes his eyes in a passionate wail, flashes a gigantic ring on his very flexible fingers, and struts leaps, taps, shuffles and howls with mercurial abandon.

When he stops singing, he blasts into a trumpet. When he throws the trumpet away, he joins his father and his uncle in doing a spectacular damage to the Broadway stage floor. When his feet give out, he does very good impersonations of Nat King Cole, Vaughn Monroe, Jimmy Cagney, Jerry Lewis and quite a few other cafe and movie familiars. But allowing for the skill that goes into a 10:30 jamboree on a night club floor, "Mr. Wonderful" is itself only an impersonation—an impersonation of a musical comedy.

Rie-Rac Braid

Rie rac braid forms a pattern on cotton dresses and matching separates. The braid is applied both horizontally and vertically to suggest an apron front on the skirt of a colorful calico printed cotton. Low-necked bodice also is trimmed with the braid.

Baker-Daly Wedding in New Jersey

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

RED BANK, N.J., April 7.

SEVERAL St. Louisans are in Red Bank for the marriage today of Miss Lucelle Josephine Daly to Lt. William Allen Baker Jr. at St. James Catholic Church. Here for the wedding and the subsequent reception given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Daly, Brookdale Farm, Lincroft, N.J., were the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Allen Baker; his uncle and aunts, Mrs. Wilson A. Benoist and Mr. and Mrs. George L. Heil Jr., and his cousin, Mrs. John Switzer. Also in Red Bank were Lt. Baker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Allen Baker of Fort Smith, Ark., former St. Louisans.

The Rev. William Le Verdiere, pastor of St. John the Baptist Catholic Church in New York, performed the ceremony. The bride wore a white gown with a long-sleeved lace bodice and a full peau de soie skirt. Heirloom lace over tulle formed her veil and orchids and lilies of the valley were combined for her bouquet.

Miss Mary Ann Hayes, New York, was maid of honor. THE craze for needle point, a time-consuming handwork painstakingly made with canvas and yarn, has reached national proportions, according to board members of the Woman's Exchange, 390 North Euclid avenue. Consequently they are setting up a two-day exhibit Thursday and Friday at the exchange, showing finished products by St. Louis experts in the art. Handbags seem to lead in popularity in the local field, but pillows, piano bench and card table covers are in the running and larger pieces, some of them room-size rugs, made on coarser canvas with heavier yarn, are being tackled by the more ambitious needle workers. Design is important and a sense of color invaluable.

MRS. LEO ALOYS STECK

Donna Paridy Is Married to Dr. J. T. Dolan Jr.

MISS DONNA JAYNE PARIDY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Udell F. Paridy, 1524 Kenilworth drive, Brentwood, became the bride of Dr. John Thomas Dolan Jr. Monday morning at the Church of the Immacolata. After the Rev. Leo F. Sullivan performed the ceremony a breakfast for the families was held at the Missouri Athletic Club.

The bride's gown was candlelight taffeta, the V-neckline outlined with alencon lace which extended over the shoulders of the three-quarter sleeves and down the front of the molded bodice to the full front of the voluminous skirt. The fingertip veil was secured to a coronet of orange blossoms and pearls. Flowers for the bride were white camellias and stephanotis.

Beige lace waltz-length gowns were worn by Miss Joan Challen White, maid of honor, and Miss Janet Dolan, the bridegroom's sister; Mrs. Allan Small and Miss Margaret Ann Lottes, bridesmaids. Their headdresses were small caps fashioned of flower stems and yellow ranunculus, while their bouquets were cascades of green ivy mixed with the ranunculus. Michele Therese Paridy, who was flower girl for her sister, wore a yellow organza frock and carried a basket of ivy and ranunculus.

Dr. Dolan, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Dolan, 34 Northcote drive, Brentwood, had Dr. J. Russell Weber as best man. His other attendants were Mr. Small, Dr. Allan Denk, William F. Flynn, Joseph Dolan, his cousin; Donald Davenport and John J. Goebel.

The bride's mother wore wedgwood blue lace and matching accessories with white camellias. Mrs. Dolan was in navy blue with yellow accessories and a yellow camellia corsage.

Dr. Dolan and his bride departed for San Antonio, Tex., where they will spend six weeks while he is in special training with the Army Medical Service School. Afterward they will return to St. Louis to await his orders.

turned from Europe and who served as best man.

The Rev. C. Clyde Hoggard of St. John's Episcopal Church performed the ceremony before members of the families and out-of-town guests. White tulips and garlands of smilax provided decoation. The reception for 600 guests was given at Southern Hills Country Club. The receiving line stood before an enormous white lace umbrella adorned with pink flowers. A large pink birdcage filled with pink and white flowers and pink and white artificial birds arranged on a white marble pedestal centered the room and smaller birdcages, similarly decorated, were placed on the pink cloths covering the tables around the dance floor.

For her wedding the former Miss Smith wore an ivory chiffon velvet gown. Cut on princess lines, the gown featured an off-shoulder neckline and long leg-of-mutton sleeves. Organza and velvet roses embroidered with seed pearls and iridescent pink sequins were profusely appliqued over the gown. Matching velvet formed an open crown hat encircled with teardrop pearls to hold her veil. She carried her mother's white prayerbook marked with pink camellias.

Mrs. Balie P. Waggener served as matron of honor and Mrs. David Prime Hall as bridesmaid. They wore sheer white organdy gowns over pink taffeta. Pink taffeta sashes encircled their waistlines; they carried pink ranunculus tied with velvet matching their tiny net-trimmed hats.

Mrs. George Allen Buffum, Glenside, Pa., lighted the candles and William Orlando Smith IV, Oklahoma City, was usher.

Dr. Millard and his bride will motor to Miami, Fla., and then will spend three weeks touring the British West Indies. They will live in Miami where he is on the staff of Children's Hospital.

Miss Evelyn Suchy, L. A. Steck Married At Church Service

THE marriage of Miss Evelyn Marie Suchy, daughter of Mrs. Anthony T. Suchy, 1155 Claytonia terrace, Richmond Heights, and the late Mr. Suchy, to Leo Aloys Steck took place yesterday morning. The Church of the Little Flower in Richmond Heights was the scene of the ceremony, performed in a setting of spring blossoms by the Rev. Thomas J. Woracek.

The bride walked unescorted to the altar to join the bridegroom and his best man, his brother, Robert Joseph Steck. Her gown was pale ivory delustered satin fashioned on princess lines with a short train, the bodice and short sleeves made of alencon lace embroidered in seed pearls. The bride wore long white kid gloves and a veil reaching her fingertips from a double crown of sequins and pearls. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

Matron of honor was the bridegroom's sister-in-law, Mrs. Robert Joseph Steck, who was in a ballerina gown of pink pique, the square neckline banded in lace and the full skirt featuring a deep lace-edged godet in back. A rosebud-trimmed hat with a short veil completed her costume. Her flowers were pale-pink carnations. Ushers were Hugh Ferris and James Ebeling.

After the ceremony Mrs. Suchy gave a breakfast at the Coronado Hotel.

Mr. Steck, who is a nephew of the late Bishop Leo Steck, will take his bride on a motor trip through Florida. They will live in Lucas-Hunt Village, Normandy.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH PICTURES

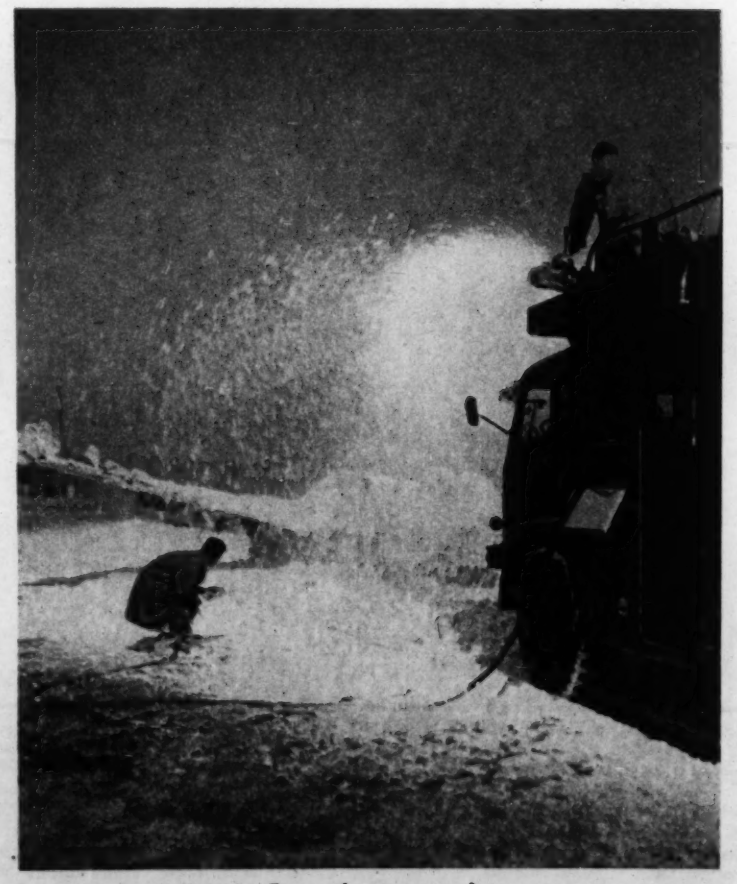
To become familiar with their newest crash truck, Naval Air Station firemen fight practice fire on Panther jet fighter hulk. Turret nozzle operators direct foam toward cockpit; hoseman starts to clear path for pilot rescue.

NAVY'S NEW CRASH TRUCK

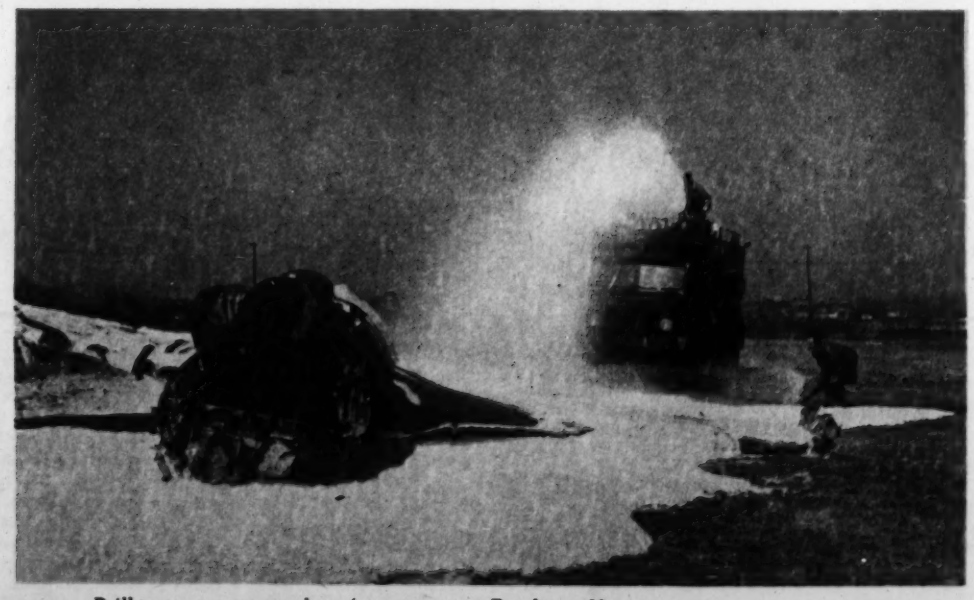
Stationed at Lambert Field, It Throws 6000 Gallons of Foam a Minute

A MASSIVE TRUCK which somewhat resembles an old-fashioned circus wagon has been added to the Naval Air Station's crash fire-fighting equipment at Lambert-St. Louis Field. It is the Navy's latest answer to aircraft fires. Despite its bulk the vehicle can cover a mile in 85 seconds from a dead stop. It can smother most crash fires with a thick coat of foam in less than a minute. The foam, which looks like whipped cream, is sprayed from two huge turret nozzles and two one-inch hoses at the rate of 6000 gallons a minute. Operated by a five-man crew, the truck has a 320-horsepower engine, which is geared to each of its six wheels, enabling it to take rough terrain in stride. Two other 112-horsepower engines mix the foam from the truck's supply of 1000 gallons of water and 65 gallons of foam base. These ingredients, combined with air in mixing process, will make 12,000 gallons of the finished product, believed sufficient for the most severe fires. As part of its compensation to the city for use of Lambert's runways the Navy provides the airport with fire protection. Thus the truck will add to civilian as well as military safety.

Photos by JACK GOULD of the PICTURES Staff



Fire is smothered. Foam showers on plane and ground around it. Truck keeps moving toward plane as flames diminish. Technique is to protect trapped pilot and make opening for rescuers so pilot can be freed within 60 seconds.



Drill over, crew washes foam away. Truck is 28 feet long, 11 feet high, 8 feet wide; weighs 17 tons. It is manned by sailors and Navy-employed civilians.

DISCIPLINED DOWNTOWNERS

St. Louisans, Once Rather Informal, Now Obey "Walk" and "Dont Walk" Intersection Lights With Precision

During "DONT WALK" period at northwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets, some pedestrians (above) converse casually, others observe the passing scene, some stare impatiently at lights on opposite corners—but all obey signals' edict, remaining steadfastly on sidewalk. Like motorists inching their automobiles forward in anticipation of a green light, some among the street-corner crowd are poised with their feet extending over the curb edge. Their wait is rewarded (below) by unobstructed use of street. During "WALK" periods, pedestrian lanes are free of all vehicles, even right-turning ones. (This is not true of intersections without "Walk," "Dont Walk" signs.) Eighteen downtown corners have the "Walk" lights.

Reluctant when signals were introduced, St. Louisans now take full advantage of opportunities to cross diagonally, allowed when the "WALK" lights shine at all four corners.

By GARY W. FERGUSON of the PICTURES Staff

WHEN THE "WALK" and "DONT WALK" lights were being installed at downtown intersections, skeptics looked askance at the new-fangled devices and predicted, "They'll never work in St. Louis."

This dour curbside observation seemed amply justified. Besides its renown for such commodities as beer and shoes, St. Louis also was well known for its independent pedestrians. They would grudgingly obey directions of a traffic policeman, but at intersections governed by "Stop" and "Go" lights they often crossed on their own impulses rather than on those of the red and green signals.

Even after the first of the new lights were put in use officers had to stand at the corners and give instruction in reading. "DONT WALK" in bright red means "Don't Walk," they would patiently explain to traditionalists in the downtown crowds.

Gradually the instructors' patience wore thin and their lessons were no longer on the house. Those who were persistently unable to comprehend the red words were given jaywalking tickets, which carried a $3 fee. In time, a transformation came at the "Walk" and "Dont Walk" intersections. People paid attention — perhaps grudgingly in some cases — to the lights. Even the few remaining diehard jaywalkers began to look rather sheepish as they took their illegal steps. Three little words, and a batch of traffic tickets, introduced a new discipline downtown.

ZOO'S 'TRIKE' RIDER

Pumie, Baby Elephant, Prepares for the Approaching Season in Forest Park

HAD SHE REMAINED in the jungles of Siam, Pumie would have missed learning to ride a tricycle. But since moving to the St. Louis Zoo about a year ago, life has really opened up for the baby elephant. Her talents as an actress were rewarded with a custom-built velocipede, complete with pneumatic tires and ball bearings.

Since November, Pumie has put weighty efforts into learning to push the pedals down and thus make the wheels go around. It is safe to say she now stands—on her hind feet—as the only "trike"-riding elephant in this country.

Pumie, whose name rhymes with tummy, is shown here at dress rehearsal under the watchful eye of the zoo's elephant trainer, Floyd Smith. She operates the plunger-type pedals with her front feet, grips the handlebars, which are locked in place, with her trunk. The 225-pound vehicle, assembled from automobile parts, is more than sturdy enough to support the elephant's weight of 1000-plus pounds.

Under her stage name of Wendy, Pumie will make her public debut on the tricycle when the zoo's animal shows begin a new season May 12. Pumie is 3½ years old.

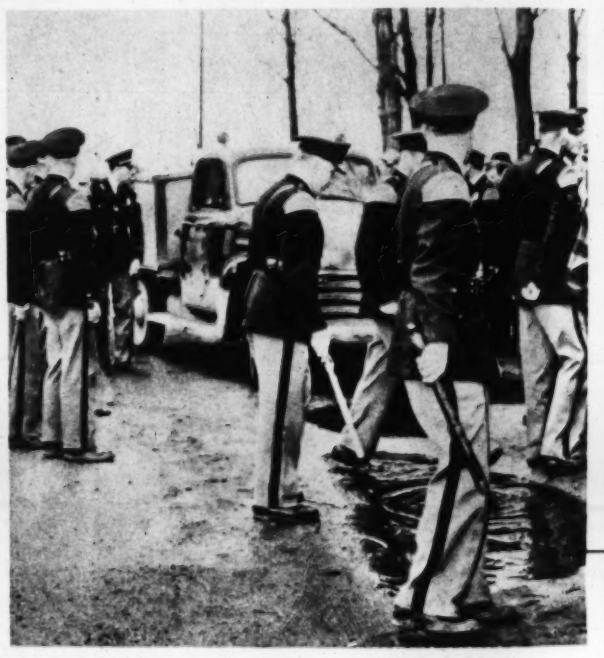
MICHIGAN MILK STRIKE

Dairy Farmers Wanted More Money, Got Some

When Detroit's milk supply was slowed to a trickle by striking dairy farmers, a picket leader, Sam Bailo, used the top of a milk-truck tank as a platform. He exhorted farmers to stand firm on picket lines outside the Michigan Milk Producers Association processing plant at Imlay City. The strike was effective enough to cause emergency rationing of milk for children, expectant mothers and sick persons of Detroit. Strike was called by the Fair Share Bargaining Association, an insurgent group of farmers which sought to replace the Producers Association as a bargaining agent with creameries. The rebel Fair Sharers said the Producers Association operates creameries and therefore could not effectively bargain for the farmers.

As the strike went into the end of its first week, there was trouble. Fist-sized rocks were used to pelt truck drivers and shatter windshields. Trucks were crippled. Two strikers were injured when struck by a milk truck that crossed a picket line at a milk depot in Romeo, Michigan. In photo above, a dairy farmer hangs on running board as he attempts to open cab of a full truck moving out of the M.M.P.A. plant at Elsie. Another farmer works to disconnect air hose leading from tractor to trailer tank of the truck.

Associated Press Photos except as noted



State and county police officers, armed with billies, protect milk trucks moving through the streets of Homer. One man on the picket line was forcibly removed from the public street when he refused to allow trucks to pass. Michigan Governor G. Mennen Williams sent State Police into the strike-bound area, said their sole duty was to maintain law and order. At the end of nine days, the farmers were faced with court injunctions limiting the number of pickets and with police-escorted trucks. These brought Detroit's milk supply to more than 75 per cent of normal. The strike was called off last Tuesday. Fair Share officials said pickets were withdrawn "to show we are bargaining in good faith for an equitable settlement."

International News Photo

At one section of the blockade which ringed Detroit, strikers persuaded drivers to park their rigs and not attempt to enter the city. Farmers, receiving $4.41 per hundredweight for milk (approximately 9½ cents per quart), demanded $6.00 per hundredweight. The Producers Association had threatened to join the strike but signed an agreement with creameries for a price increase of from $4.41 to $5.00 per hundredweight.

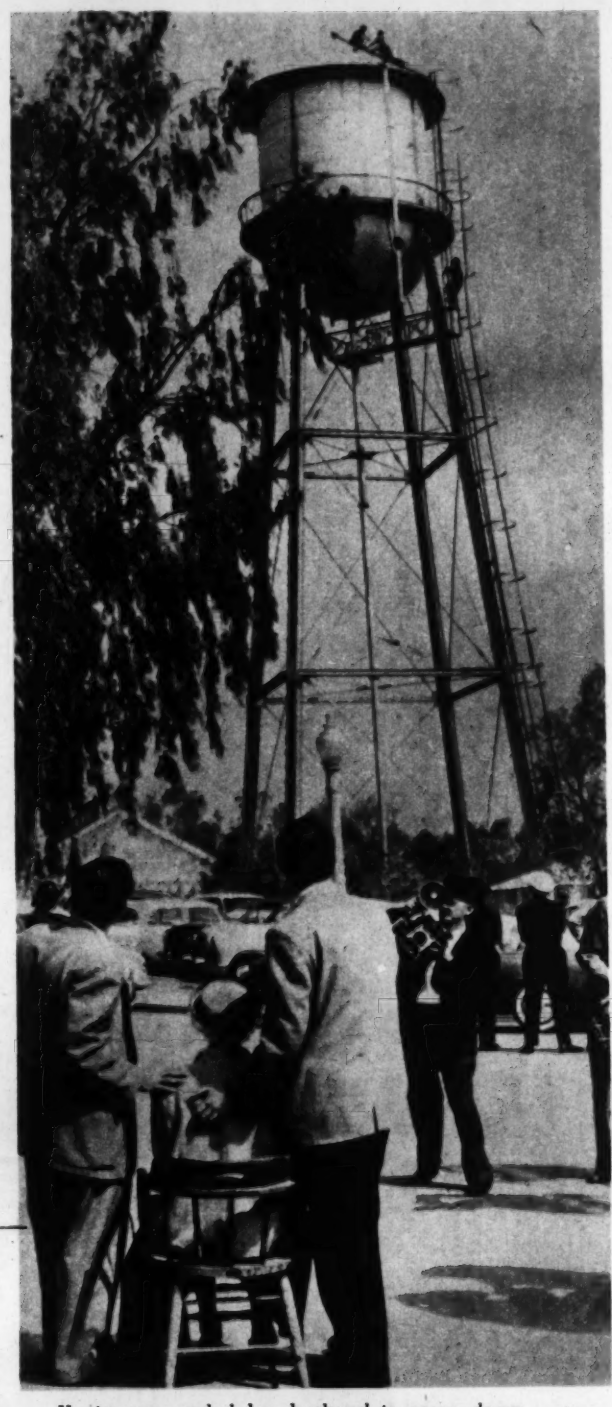
64-Year-Old Man's Wife Talks Him Down From Tower And Death Threat



Having persuaded her husband to come down from the water tower, Mrs. Fred Ranney watches from a chair as rescuers climb up to help him.

LOVING ENTREATIES made over a loudspeaker by his wife overcame a 64-year-old California mental patient's threat to leap to his death. The patient, Fred Ranney, had climbed unnoticed to the top of a 125-foot water tower on the grounds of Metropolitan State Hospital near Los Angeles. When discovered, he was seated on a ladder on the tower's tank. Police efforts to coax him down were without success. Then Mrs. Ranney, who had been summoned to the hospital, was given the loudspeaker microphone. The slender, white-haired woman spoke tenderly. "Fred, I love you," she said. "Come down . . . Please come down. Every thing will be all right . . . I love you so very much." After listening to her pleas for 20 minutes, Ranney descended quietly to the ground.

As Ranney safely reaches the ground, his wife embraces him tenderly. Ranney had been on the tower for two and a half hours.

Golden Vigoro has been tested on every kind of grass. Yet this amazing new lawn food doesn't show a trace of burn when applied at the recommended rate of 1 to 3 lbs. per 100 sq. ft. Not on grass that's green, or even wet!

Lasts and lasts . . . Golden Vigoro is made by patented* new Swift processes so that it yields its nutrients slowly. It continues to nourish grass months after application. By actual measurement of grass clippings, Golden Vigoro feeds longer than any other complete lawn food.

Grass roots success! Golden Vigoro is made just for lawns. It provides every nutrient that grass needs from any soil to develop best. A Golden Vigoro-fed lawn requires less watering and improves the value of your property.

How to apply: Apply Golden Vigoro, even when grass is green. It's clean, odorless, sanitary. No raking-in or watering-in is needed.

NOTE: To maintain peak growth extra long, you can give your lawn a supplemental feeding in mid-summer.

NEWCOMER IN THE HARBOR

Escorted by harbor craft, the glistening white Israeli liner Zion slips past Manhattan skyline on its way to a Brooklyn pier to complete its 14-day maiden voyage from Haifa. The 10,500-ton ship, masts strung with pennants, and with 306 passengers and 150 crewmen aboard, was greeted by hundreds of well-wishers at its docking point. The Zion is 504 feet long, 64 feet in the beam, can accommodate 5000 tons of cargo, is driven by steam turbines that provide 18 knots at normal speed. Built at Hannover, Germany, at cost of about $5,500,000, it will operate with a similar liner, the Israel, in regular New York-Haifa service.

BEER-CAN ANTENNA

A 30-foot radio antenna made of 77 beer cans is inspected by the two operators who built it. Antenna stands on roof of a radio station of Illinois State Police in Chicago. The operators, Thomas Korn and Orville Wingate, said they used beer cans because they were cheap and easily obtainable. They cleaned the cans, soldered them together, gave antenna a coat of rustproof paint. Insulator is a quart ginger ale bottle mounted in a coffee can. The antenna is held in place by six lengths of plastic clothesline and serves a 700-watt transmitter for police radio-telegraph communication.

Countries represented in the race were the United States, France, England, Germany, Italy, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Mexico, Venezuela and Argentina. Juan Manuel Fangio of Argentina, with Eugenio Castellotti of Italy as his co-driver, won the Class A race in a Ferrari.

On an exercise pad stretched on living room floor at her Hollywood home, 93-year-old movie actress Adeline deWalt Reynolds does some of the daily kicks and bends which, she says, help keep her in condition. Breathing exercises also are part of her workout. Mrs. Reynolds, who may be the oldest active actress in the world, broke into movies when she was 80, has had more than 50 film roles to date. She enrolled at the University of California after her children had been reared and educated, got her degree at age of 69. Among her present hobbies are fencing and flying her own airplane.

WALKOUT IN COPENHAGEN

Signaling a strike for shorter hours and higher wages that spread throughout Denmark, workers stream from the Copenhagen plant of Burmeister & Main, one of the country's leading industrial firms. In less than 24 hours 30,000 workers were on strike and traffic was almost paralyzed because of a shortage of gasoline and oil. The next day the number had reached 70,000. When printers joined in the nation-wide movement, Copenhagen's two biggest newspapers used loudspeakers to broadcast news to people in the streets.

Winning Jumper's Bad Day

Monte Upshaw, Olympic Prospect, Makes Best Leap, Renews a Knee Injury

An event-winning running broad jump and its unfortunate result are shown in photos on this page. The jumper is Monte Upshaw, 19-year-old sophomore of the University of California and a prospect for the United States Olympic team. In top photo, Upshaw is shown at height of jump of 24 feet 2 inches, which won the event in a dual track meet at Berkeley between his school and San Jose State College. Handkerchief on ground marks his goal. But after his landing, Upshaw lies on grass near the jumping pit (center photo), his face twisted in pain. With both hands Upshaw grips his right knee, injured in a meet a year ago and now hurt again in his landing. The injured athlete puts hand on forehead in his pain (photo at right) as the team trainer rushes to his aid and meet officials proceed with measuring the ill-fated jump. At hospital where Upshaw was rushed for X-rays, it was announced he had apparently torn cartilage in the knee, would require two or three weeks' rest before more X-rays are taken. Upshaw is holder of the national interscholastic (high school) broad jump record of 25 feet 4¼ inches, set when he was in high school at Piedmont, California, in 1954. The high school record had previously been held for 21 years by Jesse Owens. Twice Upshaw was California state high school broad jump champion, last year set the university's freshman record for the event. The world record for running broad jump—26 feet 8¼ inches—was set in 1935 by Owens, then a student at Ohio State University. Owens also holds the Olympic record of 26 feet 5 5/16 inches, set at Berlin, Germany, in 1936.

HOLLYWOOD OFF GUARD

Arriving for a screen writers' banquet with his wife, Van Heflin checks numbers of table reservations. Heflin, who is 45 years old, made his first movie in 1936. He recently returned to Hollywood from the East where he starred in a Broadway play.

An acting twosome, Arlene Dahl and her husband, Fernando Lamas, share a joke. Lamas made 19 films in his native Argentina before coming to the United States in 1949. Arlene, who was born in Minneapolis, went into films in 1947 after appearing on Broadway.

The recently married Robert Stack and Rosemarie Bowe pause while the head waiter finds their seats at Club Mocambo. Stack was born in Los Angeles in 1919. His screen debut, in 1938, was with Deanna Durbin.

Anita Ekberg and Anthony Steele, who recently announced their engagement, wait for others at their table to be served before starting cocktail course at a Hilton Hotel banquet. Anita came to Hollywood from Sweden as a beauty contest winner. Steele is a British actor.

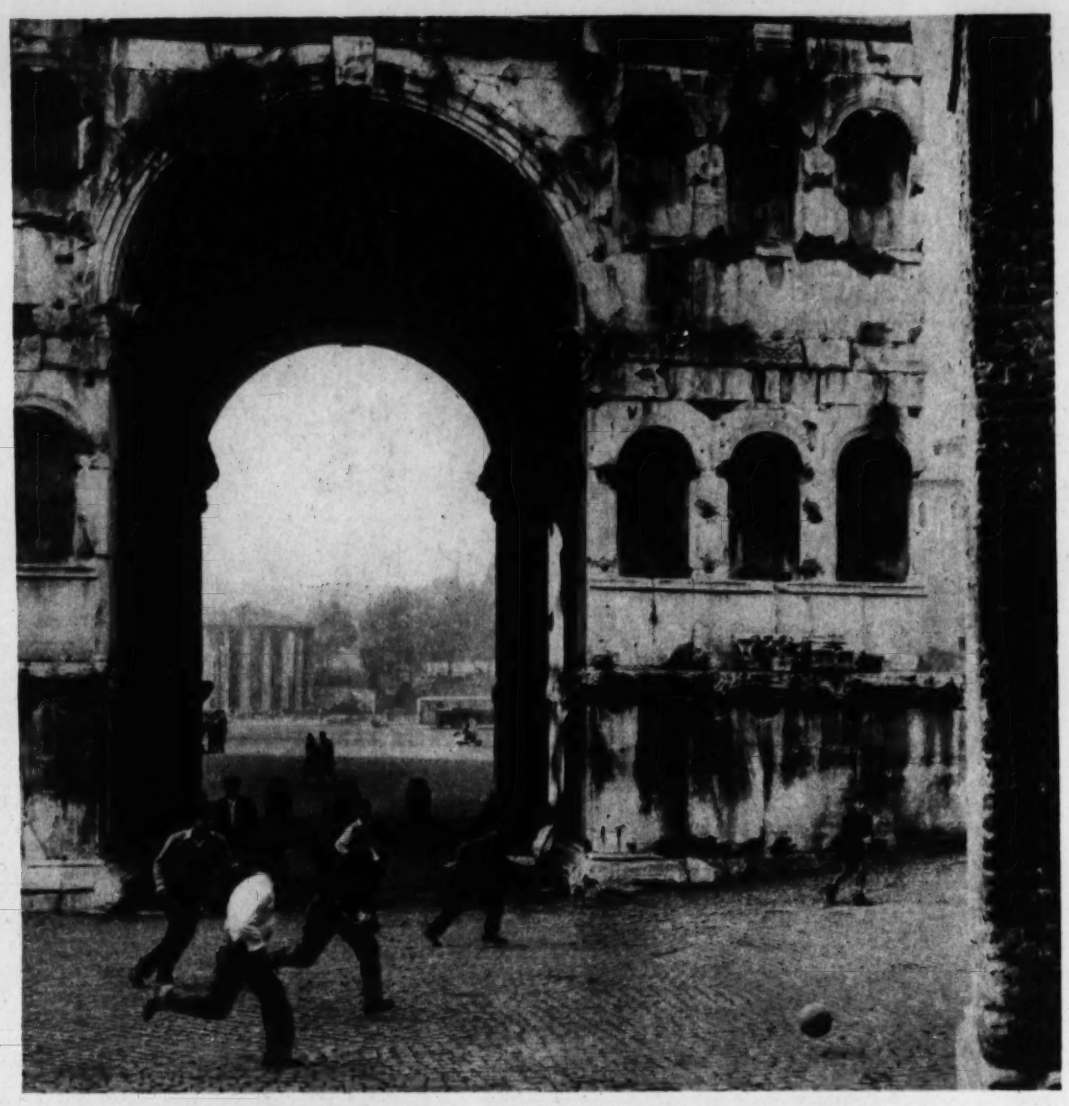
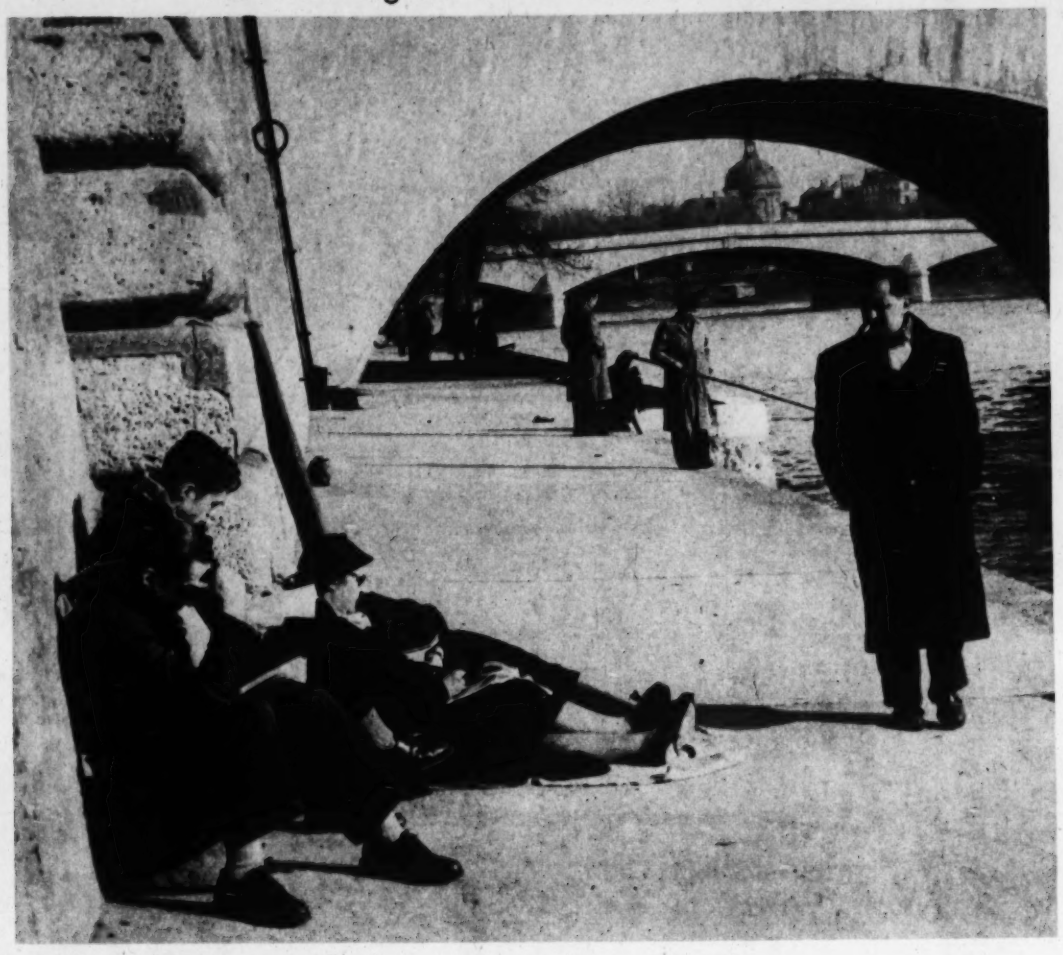
SIGNS OF SPRING

The Warming Sun Stirs Activities Out-of-Doors



Spring, the world around, draws people outside—to play, work, relax, or let the heart beat faster. Here children hold a soccer game on a cobblestoned alley amid ruins of ancient Rome. The goal for the impromptu game is the so-called "arch of the money changers" which rises time-scarred in the background.



Winter-weary Parisians take advantage of a sunshiny day to loll, stroll and fish along the banks of the Seine River. The arrival of spring weather was given more than perfunctory welcome by France and other European countries after their most severe winter of the century.

Make sure your blouses stay fresh... crisp and smart-looking...

always QUICK STARCH them with LINIT

Use Linit for starching dresses, shirts, curtains —for dozens of things around the house.

50th ANNIVERSARY 1906-1956 CORN PRODUCTS REFINING COMPANY

Office girls (busy housewives, too) are fast learning the easy secret of keeping their blouses crisp and fresh looking. It's as simple as quick-starching with Linit after each washing! Of course, quick Linit is perfect, too, for the entire family washing.

You see, Linit, a modern starch, restores the original smooth finish, doesn't leave cottons boardy stiff or streaky. Garments starched in Linit stay fresh, neat-looking longer.

The reason is this: Unlike ordinary starches, Linit gets into (not onto) fabrics. Linit penetrates and coats every fiber of your garment—and, as a result, protects their precious quality and leaves them lovely and soil resistant. Easier to iron, too.

Now—your choice!

Crumb Apple Pie From Cuba, Missouri

1. Mrs. Marr peels and cores enough apples to make three quarts when sliced.

2. Two pie pans are lined with pastry dough, then are filled with apple slices. Mixture of flour, sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg is strewn over apples, then they are dotted with butter. Lemon juice is squeezed over apples.

3. Top crusts are pricked with a fork, then they are placed on top of pies. Edges of both top and bottom crusts are rolled under to seal in the juice, and then fluted with the fingers.

By MERNA LAZIER

FROM A COUNTRY KITCHEN comes this rich, flavorfully spiced apple pie that oozes with a thick fruity juice when cut. Mrs. George (Marie) Marr of Cuba, Missouri, who operates Marie's Tea Room there, prepares a double-crust Dutch apple pie topped with a layer of butter-rich crumbs spread thickly over the top crust.

Mrs. Marr peels the apples, cores and quarters them, then cuts them into thin slices. A standard recipe is used for the crust. Bottom crusts are cut large enough to hang over pan about one inch. They are filled with the sliced apples, which are then sprinkled with a mixture of sugar, flour and spices. Apples are dotted with butter and sprinkled with lemon juice. Top crusts are pricked with a fork to release steam while baking, and are also cut large enough to extend an inch over edge of pans. Extra edge of top pastry is folded under the lower pastry and edges are pressed together to seal. Edges are then crimped with the fingers to form a high fluted rim. Over top crust is sprinkled a thick coating of crumbs made by rubbing together flour, butter and sugar. Pies are baked at 400 degrees for first 15 minutes, then heat reduced to 350 degrees and baking continued for 45 minutes longer or until pies are attractively browned. Pies are best when served warm. A strip of cheese is a pleasant accompaniment for most appetites. Pies may be frozen. The amounts given make two nine-inch pies.

INGREDIENTS

Three quarts thin-sliced apples
Six tablespoons butter
Three cups sugar
Two tablespoons flour
One teaspoon cinnamon
One-half teaspoon nutmeg
About four tablespoons lemon juice

Crumb mixture
Twelve tablespoons flour
Three tablespoons sugar
Twelve tablespoons butter

Pastry dough, for two double-crust pies
Three cups flour
One-half cup ice water
One cup shortening
One teaspoon salt

Karachi Traffic Pattern

United Press Photo

In a square of Karachi, a collision between a bus and streetcar provides focal point for a panorama of transportation, old and new. As pedestrians gather about the two vehicles, other traffic continues its more or less orderly flow. In the foreground, three camel-drawn wagons move inexorably into the vehicular crosscurrents, forcing a bus to halt. Ahead of the camel train, a couple of rubber-tired donkey carts roll through the area. Farther away is a horse-drawn carriage, and sprinkled through the scene are bicycles and people going their various ways on foot on a peaceful day in the capital of Pakistan.

Girl Marries Her Teacher, Her Parents File Charges

High School Teacher George Wald, left, and Sydney Silverman, his wife and former pupil, tell an assistant district attorney of their secret marriage. Wald's first wife, an English war bride, died of polio; his second marriage ended in divorce. Two children by his first wife live with relatives.

LAST YEAR, DURING HER SENIOR YEAR in a New York City high school, Sydney Silverman, then 16 years old, and her graphic arts teacher, George J. Wald, 34, fell in love. Citing the age difference and the fact that Wald had been married twice before, Sydney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Silverman, objected. But the romance blossomed, and last January 9 the pair were married secretly in Elkton, Maryland. Sydney continued to live with her parents in Brooklyn, and saw her husband only on weekend afternoons. Weary of the deception, Wald recently told the Silvermans their daughter was single no longer. The Silvermans told police—lodging complaints that resulted in charges of abduction and statutory rape against their unwanted son-in-law.

WARTIME EXPLOIT

Film "Cockleshell Heroes" Is Based on British Marines' World War II Raid on French Harbor

1. One of the chief German supply points in World War II is the French harbor of Bordeaux on the Gironde River. The British Admiralty seeks a way to stop Nazi merchant shipping there without bombing and killing thousands of innocent Frenchmen. Major Stringer (Jose Ferrer) is ordered to train a small force of Royal Marines who are to take two-man canoes, called cockles, and slip 70 miles up the Gironde to blow up enemy ships with mines. Major Stringer stands next to a map as he briefs his crew on their hazardous undertaking. (Movie is based on an actual British raid in World War II.)

2. Training for the venture, the marines practice launching their cockles from a submarine. Stringer selects nine men for five cockles, but he has opposition both from his crew and from Captain Thompson, his noncombatant adjutant, who warns Stringer that his unconventional training methods can only lead to disaster. The group fails to carry through a practice raid on the Thames and is theoretically "wiped out" within a few hours after disembarking.

3. After the dismal failure, Stringer admits his mistakes, accepts the advice of Captain Thompson (Trevor Howard), becomes a stern disciplinarian. After the men are whipped into shape, they embark on H.M. Submarine Tuna for Bordeaux on Operation Cockleshell.

5. Mines with time fuses are fixed to German ships and harbor installations. As the four marines prepare to leave, Captain Thompson spots more big ships tied up in a basin of the dock area. Knowing it would be certain death to enter this basin, Stringer commands Thompson and the other marines to follow him out.

6. The skyline is lighted with explosions as Stringer and his partner reach shore. They count the number of ships blown up; there is a pause, then three additional explosions from the basin area. Captain Thompson, for the first time in his service, had disobeyed an order. (The only two survivors of the actual wartime operation, Colonel H. G. Hasley, retired, and ex-Marine W. E. Sparks, were technical advisers for the film.)

4. At dusk, the cockles are launched from the submarine and the marines start their four-days-and-four-nights trip up the Gironde. During the voyage from England, the submarine had been spotted by Nazi patrol boats, and near misses by depth charges injured one of the marines. Captain Thompson volunteered to take the injured man's place. Ascending the river, two men are drowned. Four others are killed by a patrol. Stringer, Thompson and two others finally reach the docks of Bordeaux.

HIGH DRILLING FOR A DAM

Workers, Held by Ropes, Labor Far Above a Swirling Washington River

High above the swirling Cowlitz River in southwestern Washington drillers prepare a rocky cliff for a dam abutment. Whether the dam ever will be built, however, is in the hands of the courts. Tacoma City Light, a municipally owned power firm, wants to construct a $37,000,000 hydroelectric dam at the site, but has run into legal barriers as formidable as the rocks that line the Cowlitz. Despite provisions for fishways and other fish protection in the Federal Power Commission permit authorizing the dam, the State of Washington Game and Fish departments contend that the installation would cut off salmon spawning areas upstream. Seeking to block construction, the departments have kept the matter in litigation for several years. The river is used by sportsmen and there is some commercial salmon fishing downstream from the dam site. The Cowlitz, which carries runoff water from snow-capped Mount Rainier, empties into the lower Columbia River.

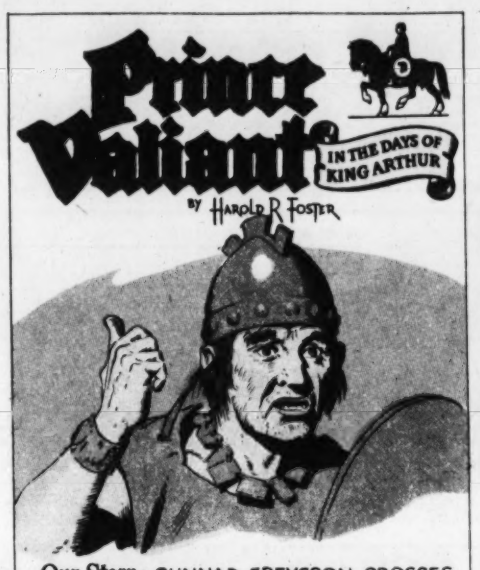
Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

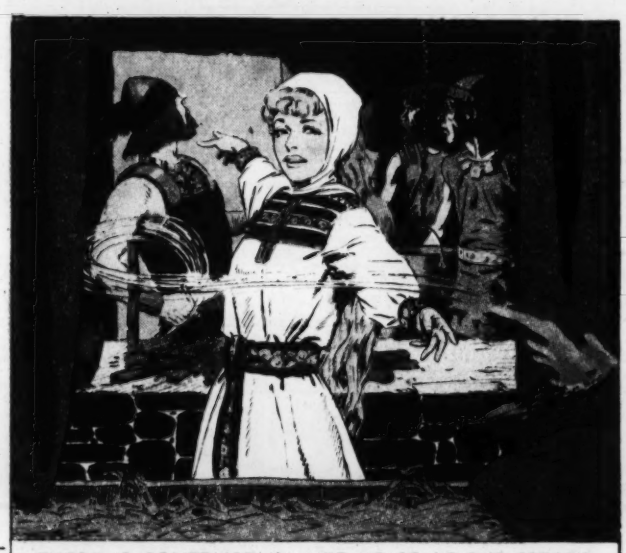


Our Story: GUNNAR FREYSSON CROSSES OVER THE MOUNTAINS AND RAIDS THE HOUSE OF EARL JON WHILE HE AND PRINCE VALIANT ARE OUT HUNTING. THEN ONE OF HIS RAIDERS CRIES— "THERE IS A QUEEN UPSTAIRS!"

"THERE CAN BE NO QUEENS HERE," GROWLS GUNNAR. "GO FETCH THE WENCH DOWN!" "BUT IT IS A QUEEN!" PROTESTS THE MAN. "LOOK! SEE FOR YOURSELF!"

EVEN WITH HER FAIR HAIR DONE UP IN A WET TOWEL THERE CAN BE NO DOUBT THAT THIS IS INDEED A QUEEN.

NO ONE CAN TELL THE FEAR THAT CLUTCHES HER HEART AS SHE CALMLY WALKS BETWEEN THE COOKING FIRE AND THE MEN'S SLEEPING STALLS.

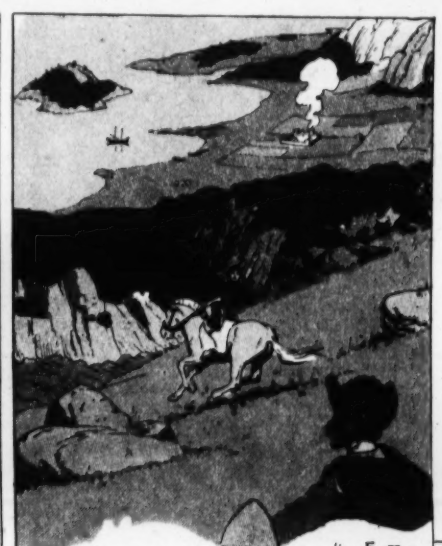


THERE IS CONTEMPT IN HER VOICE AS SHE SPEAKS: "YOU HAVE EARNED A GREAT VICTORY OVER AGED SERVANTS AND WOMEN. WILL YOU BE AS BRAVE AGAINST PRINCE VALIANT?" SHE POINTS TO THE DOOR. EVERY HEAD TURNS AND UNNOTICED SHE FLINGS A BURNING FAGGOT INTO A STALL.

WHEN THEY TURN BACK, THE STRAW MATTRESS IS WELL ABLAZE. BETWEEN THE FLAMES AND GUNNAR'S IMPATIENT SWORD ALETA WONDERS HOW LONG SHE HAS TO LIVE.

1000 4-8-56

NO ONE IS MORE KEEN FOR THE HUNT THAN VAL. BUT HE MISSES ALETA'S GAY CHATTER. FROM A DISTANT HILLSIDE HE LOOKS BACK.



HAL FOSTER

THEN HE WHEELS HIS MOUNT AND GALLOPS RECKLESSLY DOWN THE MOUNTAIN. "FIRE!" HE SHOUTS. "FIRE!"

SPECIAL REPORT ON

U.S. SUPERHIGHWAYS

. . . first of a new PARADE vacation series page 8

I'll always remember . . .

The kindness of a native

AUTHOR KENNEDY and wife: For heroism while commanding a PT boat (see story), he won a Navy medal.

by JOHN F. KENNEDY

SENATOR (D.) FROM MASSACHUSETTS; AUTHOR OF "PROFILES IN COURAGE"

In August, 1943, the PT boat I commanded was rammed and cut in two while attacking a Japanese destroyer. A week later, all survivors — some badly hurt — were living on the thin edge of existence on a narrow Pacific reef, drinking rain water, eating a few raw coconuts, freezing at night and wondering, endlessly wondering, how it all would end.

On the seventh day we saw our first signs of human life — a native offshore in a small canoe. Somewhat fearfully he approached us. He spoke no English, gave little sign of understanding. Carving out a message of our approximate position on a green coconut shell, we repeated over and over the name of our base — Rendova — Rendova — and pointed east. With our message, our hopes and our lives overloading his canoe, he disappeared over the water.

One day later a large war canoe arrived — seemingly out of nowhere — loaded with natives. They built us a shelter; they made us our first fire; they gave us food. Then they took me to another island, where a New Zealander "coast watcher" in a small jungle camp observed the Japanese air base at Kolombangara. He told me that our friend had come by, informed him of our troubles, arranged for assistance and left the same evening to row many miles to our home base at Rendova.

Next day a PT boat came to pick us up — and there in the stern stood our benefactor. He rode silently back to Rendova with us, smilingly shook hands with each of us as we got off the boat, then disappeared as silently as he had come — back into the jungles and inlets of the Solomons.

We came from the powerful United States, he from a jungle home in the islands — from a different race, a different culture, a different stage of civilization. His people spoke a different language; their religious and ethical beliefs were cast in a different mold. To us he seemed strange, backward, almost savage. To him we were equally alien.

And yet not a single one of these differences mattered to a man who was willing to save the lives of total strangers at great risk to his own — nor did they matter to us. The unimportance of such differences is strikingly apparent when life and death are at stake.

Perhaps our mysterious friend of the islands has forgotten us now. But we will always remember him, and the elementary lesson in human kindness that he taught us one bleak day 13 years ago. ■

"LOVELIGHT" 2-EGG CHIFFON

(Yellow Layer Cake)

So Large . . . So Light . . . So Luscious

- 2 eggs, separated
- 1½ cups sugar
- 2¼ cups sifted cake flour, such as Softasilk
- 3 teaspoons double-action baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup Wesson Oil
- 1 cup milk
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla

Heat oven to 350° (mod.). Grease generously and dust with flour 2 round layer pans, 8 by at least 1½" or 9 x 1½", or 1 oblong pan, 13 x 9½ x 2".

Beat egg whites until frothy. Gradually beat in ½ cup of the sugar. Beat until stiff and glossy.

Sift remaining sugar, flour, baking powder, salt into another bowl. Add Wesson Oil, half of milk, vanilla. Beat 1 minute, medium speed on mixer or 150 vigorous strokes by hand. Scrape sides and bottom of bowl constantly. Add remaining milk, egg yolks. Beat 1 more minute, scraping bowl constantly. Fold in meringue. Pour into prepared pans. Bake layers 30 to 35 minutes; oblong, 40 to 45 minutes.

NOTE: For cupcakes, pour batter into 24 muffin cups lined with paper cups. Bake 18 to 20 minutes at 400°.

U. S. TURNPIKES: The Vacationer's

This year, the new superhighways can save you precious time and money—

PLANNING TRIP, the J. Edward Welch family of Washington goes over road maps and guides with AAA expert. Thanks to turnpikes, family found they could visit Florida, New York and Illinois—all in three weeks.

THE J. EDWARD WELCH family of Washington, D.C. — "Jed," his wife Eleanor, Judy, 15, and Jimmy, 13 — are typical American vacationers. Annually, just about now, they begin a family tussle about how and where to spend their three weeks.

This year there were three widely spread suggestions: a visit to Jed's brother in Miami, a visit with Eleanor's relatives in Evanston, Ill., a trip to Jed's sister's home on Long Island. Each time the family discussed the subject, Jed ended the conversation with, "Well, we've got to make up our minds. We can't cover the whole United States in three weeks."

The last time he said it, Eleanor set to work. First she rounded up all the road maps she could get from existing sources. She wrote to a half-dozen state turnpike authorities for information. Then she took her research to a family friend and travel expert, Jack Stephenson of the American Automobile Association.

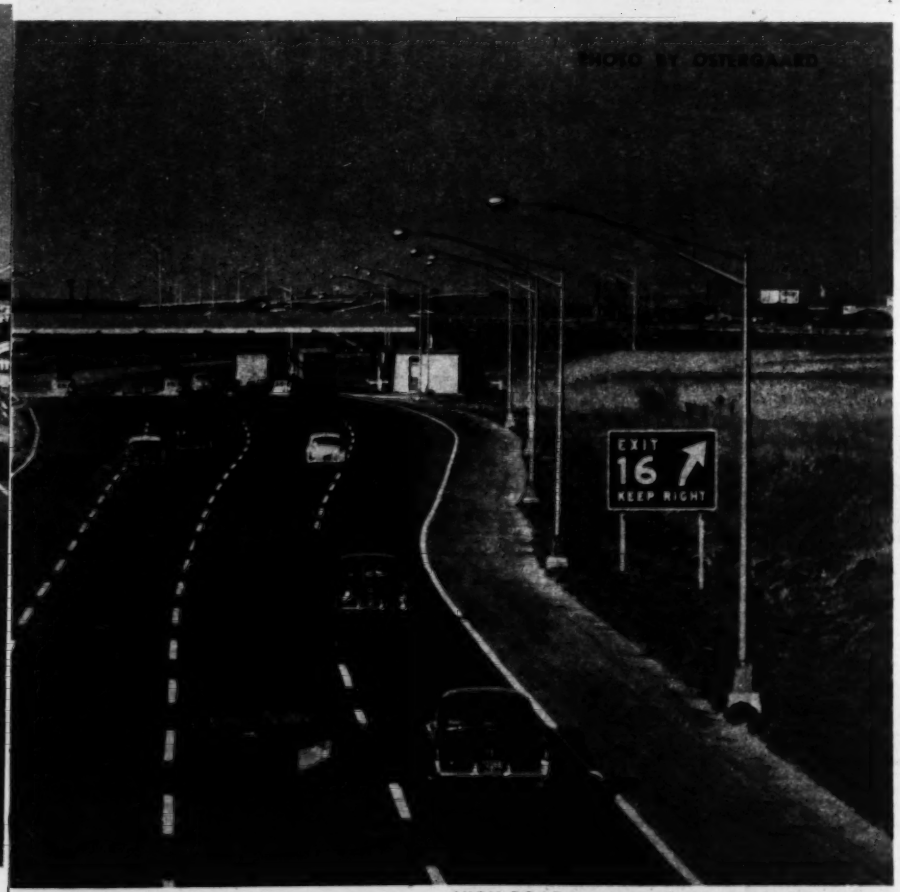
Stephenson quickly put an end to their dilemma. Why not, he suggested, touch all three bases? Normally, he said, the AAA recommends more leisurely travel, with more time to enjoy the passing scene. But the Welches, with their proposed visits to relatives, presented a special case. So Stephenson showed them how to make the 3,700-mile trip through a travel trick most tourists don't think of.

The secret: to build the trip around America's ever-increasing spiderweb of toll roads (i.e., turnpikes), free expressways, freeways and bypasses. By traveling the superhighways, the Welches could save numberless hours, increase their travel range by one-fourth — and save money besides.

The Welches jumped at this solution to their problems. And you, too, can write a ticket for a more enjoyable vacation by making use of superhighways. Probably you've traveled one or more of them before. But few Americans have used them as they can be used. Because turnpikes are so new (most have been built since 1947, and new ones are being added every year), not many vacationers realize what they can do. The turnpikes bring whole new areas of the country within easy driving distance from your home.

Just for instance: The full, 241-mile length of the Ohio Turnpike, from the Pennsylvania boundary to the Indiana line, has opened since the last vacation season. For a vacationing family from Fort Wayne, say, that means the whole Atlantic Seaboard is within range. You save three to five hours crossing Ohio alone — and that means nearly half a day longer at the seashore.

Or take another example: The famous coast of Maine is now just a hop-skip-and-jump from, say,



HIGH ROAD to summer fun is superhighway system — above, the New Jersey Turnpike. Nation now has 1,700 miles of turnpike with 1,200 more being built.

'Magic Carpet'

and bring the whole country right into your back yard

Harrisburg, Pa. Such a trip used to take 21 hours — two to three days of driving. Today it takes 12 — thanks to the Pennsylvania and New Jersey Turnpikes, the web of bypasses around New York City, the Merritt and Wilbur Cross Parkways in Connecticut and the New Hampshire and Maine Turnpikes. (And after the end of this year, with the opening of the Massachusetts Turnpike, the trip will be even faster.)

From Maine to Chicago

These two examples illustrate the phenomenal growth of our system of turnpikes and free expressways. Except for a small gap in Massachusetts, turnpikes now form a continuous thread from Maine to Indiana. By the end of the year, the gap will be closed and the thread will go on to the outskirts of Chicago.

West of the Mississippi, turnpikes still are few; but many are projected or are under construction. Meanwhile, free expressways — particularly in California and Texas — are doing yeoman service. Those turnpikes that do exist (like the Turner Turnpike in Oklahoma) are strategically placed to help the traveler past congested places. And they can be a real boon to the Westerner planning a trip to the East.

Here's how turnpikes have grown, just since your last vacation: Besides the Ohio Turnpike, there have been new sections added to the Pennsylvania Turnpike (from Philadelphia to Allentown), to the New York Thruway (its full length from Buffalo to the New York City line), the Everett Turnpike in New Hampshire (from Nashua to Manchester), a new section of the Maine Turnpike.

Due to open this year (some perhaps by summer): the Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky and Massachusetts Turnpikes; extensions to the Pennsylvania Turnpike, the New York Thruway and the Everett Turnpike.

Because PARADE's editors believe that turnpike travel offers a new kind of vacation "magic carpet," a special map has been drawn up with help from the American Automobile Association and Federal and state highway organizations. On this map, toll roads are shown in red. Dual, multi-lane "expressways" are in green. Other interstate highways are in gray. Roads under construction appear with broken red and green lines. Turnpike connections with numbered interstate routes are clearly marked.

With this map you can plan your trip to take maximum advantage of turnpikes. Along with it comes a brand-new guidebook which gives you facts, figures and special tips on safe, economical turnpike travel.

Both of these invaluable aids to turnpike travel can be yours by sending in the coupon on page 11.

Why a guidebook? Because, as any seasoned turnpike traveler can tell you, driving these new roads is significantly different from driving on ordinary highways. But with the help of PARADE's guidebook, you can learn the ins and outs of turnpike travel just as though you had logged thousands of miles on toll roads.

Many people think of turnpikes as truck-choked raceways where hypnotized drivers bang into one another with dreadful bloodshed. This is far from true. Figures show that on the Maine Turnpike, for instance, the death rate is 2.8 deaths per 100 million vehicle-miles of travel; for U.S. 1, which parallels the Turnpike's route, the rate is almost 10 times as great — 22.3 deaths per 100 million vehicle-miles.

The rate can be held even lower by following the advice of the AAA, safety organizations and turnpike authorities — all of which is included in the PARADE guidebook. For instance, "highway hypnosis," produced by steady driving at a constant clip over unvarying highways, easily can be overcome. One system is to vary your speed purposely — push it up to 60 for 15 minutes, then drop it to 55 for another 15, then increase it again. Then there are other tricks, such as occasionally switching your gaze to the edges of the road for a moment to avoid "frozen vision."

The turnpikes' built-in safety features allow for greater speed. Most turnpikes have a limit of 60 or 65 mph, although part of the Pennsylvania Turnpike is zoned 70 mph and several expressways have only "reasonable and prudent" limits. But there is always "elbow room" for a car traveling at a slower speed while the passengers enjoy the scenery.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE AAA SAYS:

"We are now entering the greatest season of travel we have ever known. In all directions there will be a vast outpouring of cars. PARADE merits commendation for contributing toward more pleasurable travel."

ANDREW J. SORDONI

How much does turnpike travel cost? The average toll is between 1 and 2 cents a mile; the exact figures for each road are contained in the PARADE guidebook. However, you'll save in fuel and maintenance costs by substituting turnpike travel for stop-and-start driving. A recent survey in Iowa indicated that a single stop and start in traffic uses as much gasoline as a quarter of a mile of steady driving and as much rubber as a full mile.

But isn't the turnpike way the monotonous way? Don't turnpikes, with their tunnels and gradual curves and easy grades, eliminate the beautiful mountain-top views and the closeups of the American scene? Again, the answer is no — not when today's turnpikes slice through such scenic areas as the West Virginia mountains, the Rockies between Denver and Boulder, Colo., and the rolling farmland of Ohio and New York.

Furthermore, many turnpikes swing close to many of the most popular state and national parks and provide swift, direct routes to the best-known resorts. Thus the turnpike, the newest development in long-distance travel, dovetails neatly with the newest development in vacationing: the great urge for outdoor recreation.

The trend toward vacations in the outdoors

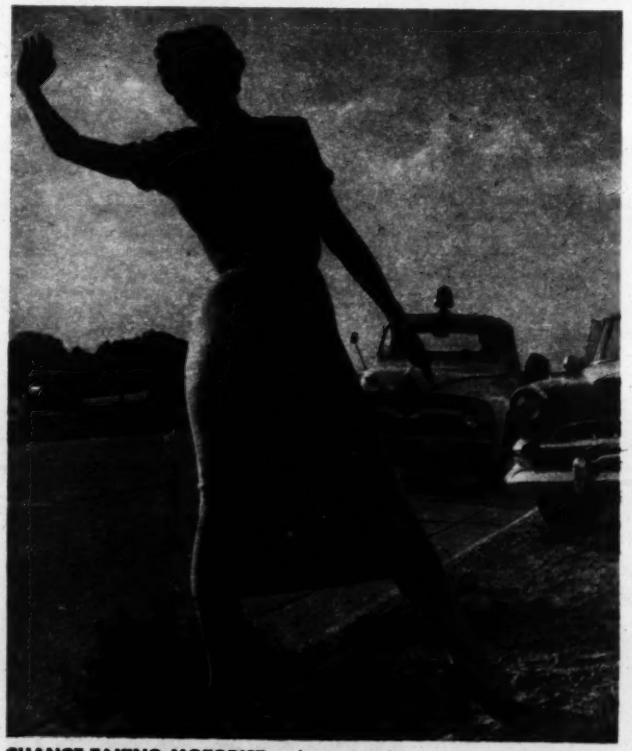
Since the war, sporting-goods manufacturers have noted a tremendous upswing in the sales of tents, outdoor stoves, camping and hiking equipment. Boating becomes more popular year by year. So does riding. And the number of people who "just want to get back to nature" gets bigger and bigger.

In the next five weeks, PARADE will give you close-up looks at five such vacations with a maximum of fun and fresh air. Like last year's popular vacation series, which focused on little-known resorts around the country, this series will give you specific information, the kind you need to plan your family's vacation for maximum enjoyment.

Probably not all these vacations will appeal to you. Some stress relaxation; others are only for the vigorous and athletic; some offer the special advantage of being dirt cheap. And some are limited, by their very nature, to certain sections of the country.

But in this day of turnpikes and high-speed travel, no place in the country is really outside your reach. There will be upwards of 75 million vacationers on the move this year. A lot of them will be hamstrung by their same old driving habits. But it needn't happen to you. By planning now — to travel the up-to-date way, you can make 1956 the best, and longest, vacation you ever spent in the American outdoors. ■

NEXT WEEK: Doris and Gates Gooding, their 5-year-old son Tyler and their Labrador retriever, Chester, spend 51 weeks a year planning their vacation. Here's what they do the 52nd week: a closeup of a pack-horse trip into the wilderness of the Rocky Mountains.



CHANCE-TAKING MOTORIST makes pretty but unsafe picture flagging down turnpike service truck. Each turnpike has its own distress signal (usually described on toll ticket), but all warn against trying to halt traffic and suggest you pull car off on shoulder of road to await help.

Desert skyscrapers

New film reveals fantastic up-and-down city

NEW YORK.

Did Arabs "invent" the skyscraper?

Buildings of that type, antedating those of modern cities by several centuries are among the oddities in Lowell Thomas' new Cinerama film, Seven Wonders of the World, which will be released here this week.

Shown on this page in a "sneak preview" is the almost unknown desert city of Shibam, in southern Saudi Arabia, about 150 miles inland from the Gulf of Aden. Its 600 "skyscrapers" cluster haphazardly along dark, narrow streets. Made of mud, sand and camel dung, baked to cement-like hardness by the desert sun, they are from six to 10 stories high. In them live Arab family groups.

Traditionally, young men of the tribe leave the city to make their fortunes. Returning rich, they build skyscrapers to symbolize their success.

Like the tradition itself, these desert skyscrapers, say archeologists, probably date back to antiquity. ■

'A CITY UNDER GOD'

PITTSBURGH, PA.

"IF YOU FEEL so strongly about Christianity, why don't you enter the ministry?"

When that question was asked from the floor at a recent meeting of a businessmen's group here, the speaker, Ted Holt, a building-materials salesman, fielded it deftly. "Finding and knowing God," he replied, "is not limited to members of the ministry. The Word of God applies to each man in his own job. God belongs in every man's life, 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

In those three sentences, Holt summed up the spirit of a unique religious movement here. Called "The Pittsburgh Experiment," it preaches a message of practical, prayerful Christianity applied to everyday life and business. Its ambitious aim: to bring a whole city to God. In this spiritual offensive, Holt, the four other young laymen of the missionary team that visited the businessmen and 100 others like them make up the shock troops.

"What we are trying to do," says the Rev. William H. Cohea (pronounced Coy) Jr., a 28-year-old Presbyterian clergyman who is executive director of the Experiment, "is to so saturate the atmosphere with God and the teachings of God that this city must turn to Him because it will be impossible to ignore Him."

How successful the Experiment has been in the first year of its faith-by-saturation campaign is difficult to measure, partly because it takes a long time to chip away encrusted layers of indifference and skepticism and partly because the spread of the idea from mouth to mouth and person to person makes record-keeping impossible.

Christianity on the job is the special mission of Pittsburgh 'witnesses'

PRAYERS AT LUNCH are said by white-collar group that meets to discuss problems of applied faith.

Certain churches have been revivified by an influx of zealous young laymen; others have noted an upswing in attendance. But if progress has not been spectacular, it has been steady.

Particularly is this so in what Bill Cohea calls the "work community" — the mines, mills, stores, shops and offices that are the primary focus of Experiment evangelism. The Experiment hopes to bring Christ into every workplace in the city as time goes on.

WIVES GATHER in kitchen to discuss faith in the home. They also attend "couples groups" in evening, often bringing their children with them.

Basically, the Experiment is a businessman's movement, part and parcel of a nation-wide surge of religious feeling among businessmen (PARADE, Oct. 10, 1954). It got its start three years ago when a group of Pittsburgh businessmen, led by Adm. Ben Moreell, chairman of the board of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., persuaded Dr. Samuel M. Shoemaker of New York to take over the empty pulpit at Pittsburgh's Calvary Episcopal Church.

Enthusiastic "Dr. Sam" soon fell in with a young, golf-club crowd of rising executives — nominal Christians or skeptics, most of them. He preached "living faith" to them, persuaded them into a course in Bible study, taught them to pray together. Within a few months he was surrounded by eager young Christians.

This success led Moreell to believe the same thing could be done on a city-wide basis. Between them, he and Dr. Shoemaker lined up other businessmen and gained the support of five big Protestant churches to give the movement an interdenominational footing. Last spring they invited Cohea from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to head the organization.

Cohea's task forces go after working people both inside and outside the industrial plants. Their favorite targets are such organizations as the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Lions' Clubs, Rotary Clubs, church men's groups and lodges. The task forces have logged several hundred such visits — mostly in the neighboring industrial towns outside the orbit of industrial programs and Downtown groups.

Most of the "witnesses" who carry this message into the field have a "spiritual biography" like salesman Holt's. A former swimming captain at Westminster College (a United Presbyterian school), Holt had drifted away from church ties but found his way back in the Experiment's early days.

"Actually, I had been sort of on the fringes for several years," he says. "What held me back, I think, was the feeling that God didn't want me until I was pure. Then I began to realize that God wanted me the way I was, that faith came first and goodness later."

Holt tells you all this unapologetically. Most witnesses are not only ready but eager to tell stories of applied faith, and one is apt to buttonhole another and start a conversation: "Say, did I tell you how I prayed that I would get along better with my boss, and it worked?" Their visits to clubs concentrate on this kind of "personal experience" Christianity.

At a recent meeting, the first speaker described his need for faith ("Oh, I had a good job, no money problems, no trouble at home, but I had a gnawing feeling that something was missing"); a second, his struggle for faith ("My wife thought I was batty. When I prayed, she'd sit beside the bed and blow cigarette smoke in my face"); a third, his personal prayer habits ("I get to my desk early, sit in silence and ask God to help with business problems that day"); a fourth, his application of Christianity to family life ("How can you and your wife hold grudges against one another when you're on your knees together?").

Cohea wrapped it up by outlining steps by which listeners might find their own way to God. After that, the meeting was open to questions.

No More Cheating

The questions can be quite barbed. Once, after a witness identified himself as a salesman, a listener piped up, "Do you still cheat on the expense account?" (The salesman answered that he had rationalized about it for a while, finally prayed for strength, now had his arithmetic well in hand.) And at nearly every session, an embarrassed man will confide that he has prayed at his desk for years, but never told anyone.

Both the hungry and the sheepish are urged to pray with their families, talk out their convictions with friends and fellow workers, and, if possible, organize prayer and discussion groups. The Experiment depends on them to spread the message of applied Christianity.

So far, the spread has been wide. Downtown, white-collar workers meet at lunch to thrash out thorny problems of faith and to pray together. Similar groups are sprinkled through the suburbs. A "Foremen's Workshop," with about 30 members, meets once a month to discuss problems peculiar to the men's job; there are similar workshops for secretaries, lawyers, insurance men and salesmen.

Recently the Experiment operated a series of six talks on "How to Help People." There have been four week-end meditation retreats in the country, a number of talks with industrial top brass and sessions with workers. And in the evenings, in the residential neighborhoods, "couples groups" get together.

One of the men most admired in the movement is young Dave Griffith, who singlehandedly brought prayer meetings to U.S. Steel's giant Homestead works. Each Thursday, a group of employes crowds into a corner of the power and fuel department, where Griffith works, to pray and sing hymns together. Actually, these sessions predate the Experiment by about two years. Inspired by a story of a nearby plant where workers prayed on the assembly line, Griffith got permission to try the same thing at Homestead.

And then there are the housewives' groups. The Experiment has no idea how many there are, for the master plan did not call for work in the neighborhoods immediately. But a number of housewives jumped the gun.

If the wives are outrunning the schedule, some other departments are not. Like any good strategy board, Cohea, Dr. Shoemaker and the trustees have future moves plotted. This should be the time for the all-out push. But Cohea, for one, is not wholly satisfied with progress.

REV. BILL COHEA: "Our groups are signs as well as instigators of awakening faith. There is something in being able to talk over your new faith with others."

BARBARA FRIESELL, housewife: "Once you've found faith, you can't let go. You become an addict. It's something you want and strive to keep always."

DAVE BURROUGHS, attorney: "I don't ask God to make me a better lawyer. I ask for help, to be shown the Christian way to handle problems that arise."

Looking Ahead

"I think we may need a new approach to workers," Cohea says. "That may mean meeting them on their own ground instead of trying to get them to come to us. Too many guys think of faith as something that makes you put on a clean shirt."

There are other plans: for labor-management sessions, for a "Religion-in-Industry Week" which would include prayers at every plant in the city. The Experimenters do not regard the dream of "a city under God" as too visionary.

"The backlog of Christian conviction means more to the city than all the coal and all the steel," Dr. Shoemaker says. But the Experiment's ambitions do not end with Pittsburgh.

"If these Christian forces can be trained and mobilized," Dr. Shoemaker adds, "Pittsburgh might become a spiritual pilot plant for America." (In fact, groups from several other cities already have visited Pittsburgh to study the program, with an eye to establishing their own movements.) The hope is that everyday Christianity will leapfrog from city to city until it dominates national, then international affairs. The dreamers of the Experiment feel that a world-wide return to living faith is not, after all, too much to hope for. ■

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

FLAMING BAKED ALASKA

by Beth Merriman PARADE FOOD EDITOR

FLAMING BAKED ALASKA

- ¾ cup sifted enriched flour
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup shortening
- 2 squares (1 oz. each) unsweetened chocolate
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup chopped walnuts
- ½ cup chopped maraschino cherries, drained (about 15 cherries)
- 3 egg whites
- ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
- 6 tablespoons sugar
- 1 pint vanilla ice cream

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Melt shortening with chocolate over low heat. Beat eggs until thick. Gradually beat in 1 cup sugar. Add chocolate mixture; mix well. Add sifted ingredients; mix well. Fold in nuts and cherries. Spread in greased 8"-square pan. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 30 to 35 minutes, or until done. Cool slightly and turn out, in one piece, on cake rack. Cool thoroughly. Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until frothy.

Gradually add 6 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating until stiff. Place cake on a baking sheet. Slice ice cream; arrange on cake, leaving ½" border. Spread meringue over ice cream and cake, being careful to cover completely. Bake in very hot oven (450° F.) about 5 minutes, or until lightly browned.

To Serve Flaming: Pour a few drops of lemon extract over several sugar cubes. Arrange cubes on Baked Alaska. Ignite with match just before serving.

AFTER BAKING, turn brownie "cake" out in one piece onto a cake rack. When cold, place on a baking sheet. Slice firm ice cream and arrange on the cake, leaving a border of about half an inch. Cover top and sides completely with meringue.

PLACE in a very hot oven (450°F.); bake 5 minutes or until meringue is lightly browned. Pour a few drops of lemon extract on several sugar cubes and cluster in center; just before serving, touch a match flame to sugar cubes to ignite.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Today's goal in treatment of the disabled: to teach them to be self-sufficient

by ROBERT P. GOLDMAN

NEW YORK.

A year ago, distraught parents carried their 9-year-old daughter into a clinic at Queens General Hospital here. The child could not walk; worse, she was losing her eyesight.

Today, within her limitations, that youngster is living happily. She has been taught to walk — and even tries to run — with braces. Through Braille, she keeps up in school.

To the nation's 5,000,000 physically or emotionally handicapped children (and their parents) that girl's case is important. It expresses a heartening fact: more and more disabled youngsters are learning to live actively and usefully via modern rehabilitation.

The photos on these pages show how. They were taken at three New York institutions — Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center; the Children's Division, New York University-Bellevue Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation; and Queens General.

The photos point up the variety of ways in which doctors and other therapists working with crippled children aim at a single target: helping youngsters become self-sufficient.

To that end, research is producing valuable tools. They range from relatively simple "gadgets" to profound discoveries of how to prevent disease. Some of the new devices: an electrically controlled wheelchair with push-button controls; a combination knife-and-fork for patients with use of only one hand; the ball builds her coordination and muscles.

PUTTING objects in specific places helps another child with palsy to develop muscle control.

CARE of premature babies now includes precautions against a once common cause of blindness.

PALSIED boy learns to walk with help from the therapist — and a good, tight grip on the bars.

elastic shoelaces which don't need to be tied; other aids in carrying out the mechanics of eating, dressing, personal hygiene, etc.

On the medical-research front, a way to prevent blindness among many premature infants has been found and there is new knowledge which can lead to the prevention of crippling rheumatic fever.

One of the brightest spots in research and care is called the Queens Rehabilitation Program. The only one of its kind in America, it is sponsored by the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children. Its purpose is to mobilize the people of Queens Borough (part of New York City) to use community resources so that disabled children may realize their full potentialities.

In the few years of its existence, the Queens program, which may serve as a model for the rest of the U.S., has found many undetected illnesses, turned up "cardiac children" who were not being treated, sparked training on disability for school teachers.

Through the program's evaluation and diagnostic clinic, hundreds of youngsters have been diagnosed. Some have received rehabilitative treatment.

What is the net result of such programs? AACC director Leonard W. Mayo sums it up neatly: "The way of the handicapped child toward normal living is steadily becoming shorter."

New ideas to ease your daily living

GLUE IT FAST: A new adhesive has many features to make it useful for dozens of home repairs. It reaches maximum strength in 24 to 72 hours -- but sets enough initially so that you can work glued joints in 30 minutes. Dries to an invisible glue line and a non-abrasive film which won't dull your cutting tools. Gives plenty of chance to remove excess glue with a damp cloth before it's dry -- and a chance, too, to rinse it from brushes with warm water. It permanently bonds wood, leather, cloth, paper, composition boards, plastics, plywood, Masonite, linoleum. 2 oz.: 40c. MIDCONTINENT ADHESIVE, Dept. PP, Grove City, Ohio.

FIX FURNITURE BLEMISHES: A new restoring compound removes scratches, burns and heat marks from tables, etc. Available for both dark and light furniture, it's not just a temporary hiding agent. Rub it on with a soft cloth, maker claims, and it recompounds the surface. Six packets (3 for light, 3 for dark furniture), plus a bottle of liquid wax: 79c. S. C. JOHNSON, Racine, Wis.

RIP IT FAST: With a little round plastic case that holds a protected blade, you can rip seams quickly and remove hooks, eyes, buttons and zippers easily. Just insert the plastic tip where you want to rip, loosen the first thread and it cuts the threads all the way down -- safely. Can't poke holes in the material or cut your hands. Also can be used as a letter-opener. 25c. DAVID TRAUM CO., 11 E. 26th St., New York 10, N.Y.

TOASTER AID: You can get extra use from your toaster with a platform that fits on top. Of perforated stainless steel, it warms buns, sweet rolls, coffee cakes, snacks -- and keeps them warm -- right at the table. It adjusts to fit most pop-up toasters, and can be put on and taken off instantly. $1. TRUDE MFG. CO., 3821 S. Racine, Chicago 9, Ill.

SOUND OFF: Irritated by door bell ringers who wake up late sleepers or interfere with the baby's naps? A little switch, that can be easily attached to your door bell or chimes, gives you convenient off-and-on control. It measures only 1¼", comes in attractive ivory-and-gold finish. $1. DUANNE, Dept. PP, 1512 Murray, Garland, Tex.

ELECTRIC CULTIVATOR: Use it to hoe, mulch, aerate the soil, blend in fertilizers and remove weeds — all without bending. Does a fast job and, claims the maker, a good one. The tines move in a circular path many thousand times a minute to break up soil into smooth, crumbling mulch for healthy plant growth. PORTER-CABLE, Dept. PP, 67 Exchange St., Syracuse, N. Y.

CAN CADDY: Just lift the handle of the can over the hook of the caddy and wheel it away. Set the can down and the hook drops free. Eliminates heavy lifting, and an adjustable bracket permits handling of various size cans. Steel tubing with green enamel finish; rubber hand grip. $4.98. H & W PRODUCTS CO., Box 792, Peoria, Ill.

WOMEN in political life (r.) were mentioned by Governors as being qualified for offices of President or Vice President.

MRS. MARY CAIN — MRS. OVETA CULP HOBBY — SEN. MARGARET CHASE SMITH — AMBASSADOR CLARE BOOTHE LUCE

WILL IT EVER be Madam President? This intriguing question invariably pops up in an election year, touching off speculation as to what would happen to the country if a woman took over at the White House.

With the next Presidential election only months away, the Governors of the 48 states — probably the most politically sensitive group in the nation — recently were polled on whether or not a woman will ever be elected President of the United States.

The Governors, successful politicians all, reflect the majority view in our most important political units, the states. They control patronage and wield such influence that, almost without exception, they either lead or dominate their state delegations to national political conventions. And national political conventions are the testing grounds for Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates.

Thus the Governors' opinion on a possible woman President is of more than passing interest. In this poll they were asked to 1) name a woman they would consider a good candidate for President or Vice President; 2) list the qualifications she must have; 3) make a guess as to the earliest year in which a woman would be nominated. Nearly three-quarters replied.

Their answers covered a wide range — from the blunt comment, "Women, because of their emotional make-up, would seldom justify serious consideration for nomination," to the cordial, "It is conceivable that the matter will get serious consideration at the coming conventions."

Of the Governors who answered, one out of four gave the ladies considerable hope for the future. For example, four said: "Yes, it will happen"; three, "Within a generation"; one, "Within four to eight years." There were other guesses as to when the great day would dawn — 1960 . . . 1968 . . . "in another 50 years."

All agreed that there is little likelihood of a woman's being nominated for President or Vice President in 1956. (But not long before Ike announced his willingness to run again, Maine's Republican Senator, Margaret Chase Smith, predicted that Vice President Richard Nixon and U. S. Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce would head the national Republican ticket this year.) Almost without exception, Governors believe the nomination of women for the two top political posts will begin with the Vice Presidency.

Woman's political future looks very encouraging to Fred Hall of Kansas, who said: "The women of the United States have been emancipated in politics only a comparatively short time and have made remarkable progress in leadership. Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith and others have reached great heights in the Government. There is a possibility some day that one of these women will be nominated and elected President or Vice President of the United States."

In contrast, this answer came from Edwin C. Johnson, a political veteran who spent several terms in the U. S. Senate, then returned to his native Colorado to be elected Governor with ease: "Can you imagine a woman being Commander in Chief of the United States Military Services? I do not favor the election of a woman to either the office of President or Vice President . . . I would not vote for a woman in either position." Johnson conceded, however, that he "should like to see not less than two women cabinet officers."

Johnson's fellow-Democrat, Frank G. Clement of Tennessee, had this to say about the prospects of a woman in the White House: "I do not dread it . . . I feel it is only a matter of time and circumstance until some American woman has had the opportunity to distinguish herself publicly in such a way as to earn consideration."

In discussing women of today who have the necessary qualifications for the office, Theodore R. McKeldin, Republican of Maryland, mentioned as examples—though not as his choices — Mrs. Luce, Senator Smith, Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby and Miss Bertha Adkins, Assistant to the Chairman of the Republican National Committee. He added: "A woman who aspires to the Presidency or the Vice Presidency must not be a narrow feminist. That is: she must not hold all men in political distrust; she must not believe that the salvation of the nation or of the world rests entirely in the hands of women; she must understand that truly representative government is neither feminine, masculine or neuter, but is of the common gender."

Utah Republican J. Bracken Lee named a Democratic woman as his choice. He designated Mrs. Mary Cain of Mississippi (defeated in the state's 1955 gubernatorial primary) because "she is a real American who understands constitutional government." Lee felt that a woman from one of the two major parties would be on the national ticket within a generation.

"You're looking at the future President of the United States — first girl to ever make it!"

Con and Pro

The issue of a woman President is "many years in the future" in the view of the Governor of one large state. He went on to say: "It would have to be a very exceptional woman to draw sufficient support. I know of no woman in American politics, at least within my acquaintance, whom I would consider to have the qualifications for a successful President or Vice President."

An opposite view was expressed by Milward L. Simpson of Wyoming (which in 1924 elected America's first woman Governor, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross). "There has been considerable pressure," he observed, "for women candidates in both parties. We'll certainly come to the day when women will be considered for Vice President and President."

Meanwhile, how does the electorate feel about this? After all, the real payoff is election to public office.

There are 535 seats in Congress and approximately 470 of these are open every two years. Yet since 1920, when the ladies got the vote, only 60 women have been elected to Congress. Today, Congress has a record number of women members — one Senator and 16 Representatives. But, though more than 30 million women voted in 1952 (out of 49½ million eligible), they elected their sisters to far less than one Congressional seat per million votes cast. To professionals, that simply means that most women — like most men — still consider high-level politics a man's job.

Paradoxically, women have had access to the White House all along, as First Ladies. Unfortunately, First Lady is not a political office to which one gets elected. ■

Engaged couples

Aside from the many letters I receive from teenagers, engaged couples often ask me for advice. An engagement, long or short, is the difficult testing of a relationship. Here are four letters on the subject, and one from a teenager.

Q. My boy friend and I are getting married soon. Recently the engagement of the girl he used to go with was announced in the newspaper. When he saw it, I got the impression that the old flame had started again. What can I do? — D.G., Jackson, Miss.

A. Perhaps you will wince, too, when you hear that a boy you used to like is marrying. Remember, this other girl is marrying someone else. She obviously has made her choice — and so has the boy to whom you are engaged.

Q. I was engaged to a boy for four months, but we have broken up. When he gave me the engagement ring he also gave me the wedding band to keep. Should I send both back, or may I keep the engagement ring? — M.K., Beaumont, Tex.

A. You should return both rings immediately.

Q. I am engaged to a girl who constantly asks me if I'm sorry I gave the ring to her. How can I make her believe I don't want it back ?— F.G.E., Raymond, Miss.

A. Your girl is emotionally insecure. If she goes into marriage feeling that she does not have the ability to hold you, she may make your marriage miserable. The counsel of some trusted person might help to improve her opinion of herself.

Q. I am going with a boy I plan to marry in three years. Every Sunday he plays golf, and seems to prefer it to my company. Can you suggest a way for me to make him cut down on golf and concentrate on me? — M.L., Roanoke, Va.

A. You had better learn now that if you try to make a man do anything, you are in for trouble. Realize that masculine interests are necessary to him and actually good for your relationship — now and after marriage. If you don't want to play golf yourself, take up some other interest that will keep you busy while he is at the golf course.

Q. I am a girl of 16 and I like a boy four years younger. My mother and father say that a boy who likes an older girl is looking for a mother, and that a girl who likes a younger boy feels she is getting too old. What do you think? — F.K., Rome, N.Y.

A. You are too young to have these generally quite true explanations applied to you. Your 12-year-old boy friend probably has matured faster than some of his classmates, or perhaps you may not be ready to compete with girls your own age and so have settled for the attentions of a younger person whom you can easily control. It's not a good pattern of boy-girl relations to follow.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS will be answered as space permits. (Miss Vanderbilt cannot answer letters personally.) Address: Miss Amy Vanderbilt, PARADE, 285 Madison Ave., New York 17, N.Y.

If it weren't for brand names

You'd have to be a home economist to choose the food you want

You do 70% of your grocery shopping "sight unseen." The products you buy are in packages, with only the label outside to guide you.

How is it that you don't have to look inside each package? What makes you so sure you're getting quality and flavor you pay for? In fact, what makes you sure about anything you buy?

Isn't the answer simply that you've learned the basic rule of safe and sound buying:

A good brand is your best guarantee

No matter what you want to buy, you know manufacturers stand back of good brands because they have so much at stake. You know you can depend on a good brand. And so, when you pick one you know you're right.

The more good brands you know, the surer you are. Get to know them in the pages of this magazine. They can help you cut down on buying mistakes, get more for your shopping money.

TRIUMPH OVER TOOTH DECAY

Crest Toothpaste with Fluoristan strengthens tooth enamel to lock out decay from within

Fluoristan is Procter & Gamble's exclusive stannous fluoride formula—proven the greatest decay-preventive in any toothpaste

Miracle of the Towns Without Toothaches. For years, children growing up in certain Western towns were virtually without cavities. Then science learned why: nature's decay-preventive, fluoride, was present in their drinking water!

Science Long Tried to Capture Fluoride—only medically approved preventive of decay—in a toothpaste. At last, after years of research, university scientists discovered Fluoristan—the greatest decay-preventive in any toothpaste.

Fluoristan Makes Possible Crest. Without Fluoristan, you cannot get maximum protection against tooth decay with a toothpaste. Crest protects all permanent teeth, both of adults and of children, six years of age and over.

Dentists Tested Crest for three years on 5,673 people. No toothpaste stops all decay—but Crest set decay-prevention records never approached by any other toothpaste. Thus Crest marks a new era . . . triumph over tooth decay everywhere.

IMPORTANT

Crest with Fluoristan is the only toothpaste ever developed that makes possible a major reduction in tooth decay for everyone, everywhere, by strengthening tooth enamel. Thereby, Crest marks a turning point in man's age-old struggle against this almost universal disease.

Instead of waiting helplessly for cavities to strike, Crest now makes it possible for you to build strong defenses against decay within teeth themselves . . . to actually fortify teeth so that they turn back the destructive attacks of decay (as opposed to the old-fashioned method of brushing a temporary coating of protection on the surface of the teeth). With Crest, your family approaches the long dreamed-of day of healthy, decay-free teeth.

Hugh O'Brian

From Necktie Peddler To Star on Television

By Edward A. Harris

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

HOLLYWOOD, April 7

BACK IN 1947 a slender, six-footer named Hugh O'Brian was living above a garage in Hollywood, peddling nylon stockings, blouses, shirts and ties on Sunset Strip and thinking seriously of enrolling as a pre-legal student at Yale University.

Today O'Brian has hit the jackpot as the restrained, smooth-talking hero of the the popular television series, "The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp," based on the book by Stuart Lake, "Wyatt Earp, Frontier Marshal." Characterized by a notable minimum of homicidal gunplay, the script is being written by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, author, motion picture writer and former staff member of the Post-Dispatch.

What happened to enable O'Brian to bridge the gap between selling nylons and ties and achieving TV stardom revolves around a beauty concentration camp known as "The House of Seven Garbos." It was while he was in the Marine Corps in World War II that Arlene Judge had him on her radio program, "Blind Date," in Hollywood. O'Brian's date that evening turned out to be Virginia Mayo, the movie actress.

Hugh O'Brian . . . Star of the Popular Wyatt Earp Series.

"Through Virginia I met many other Hollywood actresses," O'Brian said. "Many of the girls lived together at what was known as "The House of Seven Garbos," so-called because they were good-looking. When I was mustered out of the Marines in 1947, I went back there and the woman who operated the hotel put me up in the garage. Rent was $12.50 a week."

THROUGH A GIRL HE DATED fairly regularly and who played in Little Theater productions, O'Brian got a chance to try out as a substitute for an actor who was ill. Although he had no theatrical background and no training, he was accepted and thus was launched his acting career.

"It was a ball," O'Brian said. "I loved every minute of it." There followed more plays, bigger and better ones with growing audiences. All this time he kept telling himself that he would go East in the fall to enroll at Yale. But then Tommy Cook and Hugh O'Brian in a scene from "The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp," on KSD-TV at 4:30 p.m. Sundays.

Marlo Frank, an agent to whom he had sold a shirt in his door-to-door days, sold O'Brian on the idea of becoming his agent. Under Marlo's aegis he got into dramatic and TV roles.

Although still relatively unknown, he did some of his first live dramatic television shows on the West Coast. His big break at this phase of his career came when Ida Lupino was searching for the right man to play a lead role in a movie, "Never Fear." O'Brian read for her, and she liked what she saw and heard. He got the part and went on to free-lance in both movies and television.

But it was the Wyatt Earp series that propelled O'Brian into the rarefied aura of the stars.

Writer Brennan, discussing the origin of the series, told the Post-Dispatch: "The gamble that O'Brian would be the right boy was a fortunate one. He's a very intelligent kind of fellow, like Earp, and he believes in the character."

O'BRIAN IS WELL TOUGHENED for the part, as a result of his Marine Corps training and partly from football, track and basketball at the University of Cincinnati and earlier at New Trier High School in Chicago and Kemper Military Academy in Missouri.

O'Brian, 30 and still a bachelor, lives in a "bachelor shack" on the ocean front at picturesque Malibu, and his library is stacked with books on Western lore. He likes to swim and skin-dive, and scarcely ever takes a drink or smokes.

I think something should be done about getting "Midwestern Hayride" on KSD-TV. I know so many people would would like to see it, because of its musical variety. Please see what you can do.

PENNY CORNELIUS.

I understand that the wonderful program, "Omnibus," on KTVI Sunday afternoons may be taken off the air. If this is true, why? The world needs more of this type program. Why can't we have "Grand Ole Opry" more often? There are still a few people who like this kind of music.

LORENE VOYLES.

("Omnibus" has left the air for the season, but is expected to be resumed in the fall.—Editor.)

We kids have to get up early to go to school and all the comedies and quiz programs on TV come on too late. Why not put them in place of the murder stories? Must "Diamond Jubilee" come on instead of "Meet Millie"?

VIRGINIA ALLEN.

We surely have enjoyed "Fabian of Scotland Yard" these past few months. Excellent. This program is a very interesting part of our Sunday afternoons. There are others who share our sentiments. Our thanks to the sponsors and KWK-TV for this program. Please don't ever drop it.
